heads for home at the end of the day, but Bruce acknowledges that he tends to bring the problems at the workplace home with him. They agree that married people working together must work harder to keep their personal life on an even keel. "It takes a lot of extra effort to make it work," Bruce said. Their personal life isn't really their own either, since they bring it into the workplace. "Our life is open to everybody in the store," Sue noted.

Even with the challenges the couple faces every day, they manage to keep their marriage together and the business thriving. Sue was the one ready to plunge into an expansion plan. Bruce was hesitant, but went along with Sue's plans. "He usually comes around to my way of thinking," Sue said, giving Bruce a quick, playful look.

In a retail business that becomes increasingly more challenging with more competition, the Bartletts aren't sure if they would follow the same path if they had to do it all over again. As Bruce said, "Sue has helped me a great deal. She's been a big plus for the store, but if I could do it over with hindsight, I wish she would have pursued harder to get a teaching job, just to be sure there would be no problems."

If you pay attention to stereotypes, you might believe that artists are temperamental and have no head for business. Ray and Tami Bier are living proof that artists can be blessed with even temperaments and can also run a business. The Biers have owned and operated Bier Pottery for 12 years, growing from a small studio in a basement to the thriving gallery they now enjoy. Both Biers are artists. Tami is a sculptor, and Ray does pottery throwing. These days, Ray spends a large portion of his time operating the business end of the gallery while Tami holes up in her studio and works on new designs and sculpting, trying to keep up with the demand for her product. Ray speaks with a great deal of respect and no shred of jealousy when he talks about the enormous success Tami has experienced with her line of animal sculptures and nativity sculptures. Tami's nativity pieces are robustly joyful. The three kings have their heads thrown back and mouths wide open in song - the shepherds are hearty, rugged looking creatures filled with mirth. And baby Jesus, instead of lying face up in sweet repose, is curled up on his tummy with knees drawn up under him in a typical newborn position. The sculptures have gained tremendous popularity with the loyal followers of Bier pottery, and Ray continuously supports Tami in her endeavors. "That made the foundation that made our business grow. She could make a living on her sculptures all alone," Ray said of Tami. Ray acknowledges that Tami's success has paved the way for him to create his own line of pottery. "Because of her, I can sell my pots," he said.

Ray explained that their business has always been based on joint decision making. "It's been both of us (making decisions) in our full 18 years of marriage," Ray said. Ray also admits that there were moments of conflict on the road to success. "At first she thought I was too picky, and I thought she was too free. Over the years we've come together on it," he said. "We both have certain things that we're better at, but we talk about everything and make decisions together. I tend to stick my neck out, and Tami retrieves me back a little bit," he explained.

Bill Carey probably never dreamed he'd be a joint partner in an antique store with his wife Judy. When Judy used to go prowling through antique stores, Bill never got much closer to an antique than the parking lot, where he would sit in the car and wait for Judy. Judy always wanted to have an antique store, but considered it a pipe dream. It was Bill who finally said, "We can do this." With that vote of confidence, the Careys opened the Charlevoix Antique Mall five years ago. Judy had been working as a nurse and wanted to get into something that would give her more flexibility in her schedule. Bill was successful in real estate, and stumbled upon their current building location when he was showing the property as a realtor.

Judy was initially the driving force in the business. "I was the yard man," Bill said with his usual quiet grin. "It evolved as something we both enjoyed as a hobby," Judy added. Now they're both completely involved in the antique business. Bill spends four to five days in the store, and has become very involved in the buying end of the business. "Bill has become the best buyer even though he had the later interest," Judy said. "He has the knack, the eye for what will sell," she added with open admiration. "I don't dust though," Bill added, self-effacingly. When asked if one person in the partnership is ultimately in charge, Bill said, "I'm the boss," and Judy instantly added, "And I let him think he is."

The two of them have an obviously close working relationship, always complimenting one another's strengths and abilities. Bill gives Judy full credit for managing the financial end of the business. "She's the body that carries the load," he said. They both claim that the business hasn't put any stress on their marriage or family life. "We genuinely enjoy working with one another," Judy said.

Teachers complain about negotiations

By Laurie Lounsbury

United they sat. Approximately 40 Charlevoix teachers and support staff sat at the last school board meeting dressed alike in black sweatshirts in a show of united force. Teacher Stan Martin, acting as president of the Charlevoix Education Association, delivered a statement to the board lambasting the slow pace of teacher contract negotiations. Martin claimed negotiations are creeping along and that the school is spending money to pay for a lawyer to negotiate on the board's behalf.

For the first time in recent memory, the school board hired a professional contract negotiator from the law firm of Thrun, Maasch and Nordberg to represent them in contract negotiations. Martin also attributed the slow pace of negotiations to the absence of the superintendent, Dr. Roberta Jackson, in the negotiation process.

In past years, the superintendent and board members have negotiated the contract themselves.

Board president Scott Beatty responded to Martin's statement, saying that the board is also concerned about the pace of negotiations. Beatty stressed the need for arriving at a fair and equitable contract that recognizes the fiscal position the district is in. Beatty pointed out that the negotiation process is a two-way street.

In other business, Beatty called for a special meeting for October 11 at 7:30 to review a report from the board's attorneys regarding the DNR bill for the clean up cost at the middle school. The DNR claims that the schools should pay the $444,311 spent to clean up the toxins found at the middle school which had contaminated the city's water supply.

Sheriff's deputies to step up enforcement of curfew laws

By L. Scott Swanson

Charlevoix County juveniles may want to start planning on getting home a bit earlier in the evening. The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department has announced plans for more aggressive enforcement of state curfew laws.

According to the state law, juveniles younger than age 12 have to be off the streets between 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. unless they are accompanied by an adult. Juveniles under age 16 must be off the streets between midnight and 6 a.m. unless accompanied by "a parent or guardian, or an adult delegated by the parent or guardian to accompany the minor, or where the minor is upon an errand or other legitimate business directed by his parent or guardian."

Juveniles caught on the streets after the designated hours will be issued "Notice-to-Appear" tickets and will have to appear in juvenile court with their parents.

Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater said the stepped up curfew enforcement is in response to a number of incidents involving juveniles around the county. As an example, he cited the Walloon Lake area where there have been cases of juveniles hanging around on the streets late at night and the next morning there are reports of larcenies. In the Charlevoix area there historically are curfew problems in the spring, fall and summer.

Most of the problems are things such as simple larcenies and malicious destruction of property. Lasater said the curfew enforcement is something which is being coordinated between the sheriff's department, juvenile court and prosecutor's office.

Time and temperature signs allowed to stay

By L. Scott Swanson

Consider the plight of CB North Bank Chairman Francis Flanders. Here the guy is trying to oversee the merger of two multimillion dollar banks and right in the midst of the deal he's got about 20 people phoning him to bend his ear about a couple of signs that tell the time and temperature. Only in a small town such as Charlevoix.

When First State Bank and Charlevoix County State Bank merged, part of the program called for getting new bank signs. Two of the old Charlevoix County State Bank signs are rotating signs that tell the time and temperature. One is attached to the bank building in the heart of Charlevoix, at the corner of Bridge and Clinton Streets, and the other is mounted on a post next to the bank branch on M-66. Both signs have been in place for years and neither meets the provisions of the city's current sign ordinance. So, the plan was to take them down.

One of the replacement signs required a small variance and that required an appearance before the Charlevoix City Planning Commission. The planning commission

Courier wins several Press Association awards

The Charlevoix Courier received five awards in the Michigan Press Association's 1993 Better Newspaper Contest. The Courier placed third in the General Excellence category for weekly newspapers with a circulation of less than 5,000. There were 30 entries submitted in that category, the highest number in any of the General Excellence categories for Michigan daily or weekly newspapers. The Courier finished behind the first place Morenci Observer and second place Clarkston News.

Other awards the Courier received were: a second place in design; a second place for a feature story; a second place for editorial writing; and an honorable mention for special sections.

The second place in design was for the overall design of the newspaper. There were 16 entries submitted in the category.

The second place in feature writing was for a light-hearted story which ran under the headline "A Disaster of Small Town Proportions" and was written by Courier editor L. Scott Swanson. The story told of a smoking manhole cover which was discovered in front of the Courier office and reported to local authorities. There were 72 entries submitted in the category.

Editorials protesting county commissioners receiving taxpayer funded health care benefits and county commissioners granting a raise to the prosecutor during a special meeting received a second place among 34 entries.

The second place for special sections was for a Courier special section on the 1992 Charlevoix County Industrial Art Fair. There were 54 entries submitted in the category.

(Editor's note: Obviously, our staff at the Courier is quite pleased with the results of this year's Michigan Press Association contest. We fared well. But we would also like to note that we view our success as a reflection of the community we serve. Two examples of that are the story which won us recognition in the feature writing category and the Industrial Fair section, which received honorable mention in the special sections category. The feature story kind of wrote itself. It was just a small story about a small event, but it captured some of the friendly and humorous small town atmosphere ...time and temperature signs will stay in place

granted the variance, but as a result of that meeting word got out that the time and temperature signs were going to be removed.

That's when the phone calls started coming in. Flanders received them as did planning commission chairman June Cross. The basic message of the phone calls was...Hey, what do you think you're doing? You can't take those time and temperature signs down. Those things are handy to have there. We use them.

And what do people use those signs for? Well, for a lot of reasons.

When we drive by in the morning we check those signs to see how we're doing about getting to work on time. Based on what those signs say, we either relax and ease up on the gas or step down a little harder.

During the day, people check those signs to see how far off they are from lunch hour, or coffee break, or quitting time. How's a person supposed to plan the rest of the day without having all the necessary information?

And the temperature's important, too. There are a lot of mornings when a person feels cold and it's important to know the temperature.

If the temperature's low, it's all right to feel cold. But if the temperature's high and you still feel cold...well, you might be getting sick or something. Without those signs, you could only speculate.

And for coffee shop conversations about the weather, those signs have been cited in support of a position nearly as often as case law gets cited in a courtroom. Why take those signs down and those same conversations would be based on nothing but conjecture. Just think of that, a Charlevoix coffee shop conversation based on anything other than the firmest of facts. What a dangerous precedent.

Once everything that was at stake was pointed out, bank and planning commission officials decided the signs could stay and went to work on figuring out how to make that happen. Flanders said he initially offered to move the sign and give it to the city. But the city didn't want to take responsibility for the thing. When that plan fell through, the only alternative was to have the sign on M-66 stay where it is. That required going back to the planning commission for another variance.

When the matter was brought up again before the planning commission, they readily agreed to let the sign stay. The only stipulation was that since there were already two other signs saying CB North at the M-66 branch, the time and temperature sign couldn't be promotional. A deal was struck where the back of the time and temperature sign will be changed so that it says "Welcome to Charlevoix." The sign at the bank downtown will say CB North on it. That sign is currently being refurbished, but will be back in place soon.

Flanders chuckled about the situation when he explained it as the guest speaker at a recent Charlevoix Rotary meeting. This past Friday, he still seemed to find it rather amusing as he described it in a phone conversation with the Courier. He said there never was any kind of an adversarial air to the issue. The bank wanted to be a good corporate citizen and some people wanted to keep the signs so an arrangement was made. As far as the end result, Flanders said, "We're very happy with it."

School board needs to hear taxpayers' feelings on contract negotiations

Approximately 40 Charlevoix teachers showed up at the Oct. 4 school board meeting to complain about the status of contract negotiations. The action should be seen by the school board, and more importantly by the public, for what it is - nothing more than an orchestrated ploy to pressure board members into caving into teacher demands for yet another big pay increase at taxpayer expense.

A spokesman for the teachers complained that teachers are upset about the protracted length of negotiations and a board decision to hire a professional negotiator to negotiate on the board's behalf. Both complaints have little, if any, merit.

The complaint regarding the board hiring a professional negotiator is absurd. The teachers have a professional negotiator negotiating on their behalf. The board, and the taxpayers represented by the board, should certainly have the same caliber of negotiator working on their behalf.

The teacher spokesman complained that the school system is paying $135 per hour for the professional negotiator. But put into perspective, that complaint also quickly becomes lame. The Charlevoix school system has an annual budget exceeding $8 million. Salaries and benefits, i.e. the items being negotiated, account for somewhere in the neighborhood of two-thirds to three-quarters of that budget. In dollar figures that equates to between $5.3 million and $6 million annually. Against that backdrop, the professional negotiator only has to make a minimal difference in the final contract for taxpayers to end up ahead on the money invested in the negotiator's services.

The complaint about protracted negotiations is also hollow. As school board president Scott Beatty aptly pointed out in response to the complaint, the negotiation process is a "two-way street." It is probably safe to assume that the teachers' negotiating unit is just as, if not more, responsible for the slow pace of negotiations. As a taxpayer you can only make assumptions, because the negotiating process which determines how your money will be spent all takes place behind closed doors. Beyond that, even after a tentative contract agreement is reached, taxpayers aren't told what it is until after the contract is ratified. In other words the people paying for the product, or in this case the service, don't get to know the price of the product until after they've agreed to buy it. Try to think of any other economic transaction where that situation is intolerable.

During the past six years, annual pay increases for teachers have been 7%, 7%, 7%, 5.75%, 6% and 6%. During the past six years the rate of inflation has been 4.2%, 4.2%, 4.8%, 3%, 3%, 2.7%. In addition to percentage increases, teachers also receive pay increases for longevity and for picking up advanced educational degrees.

The base salary scale for Charlevoix teachers ranges from $24,856 to $49,020 with more people being toward the high end as opposed to the low end. That's based on a nine-month year. The average salary for people in Charlevoix County's private sector (according to Michigan Employment Security Commission) is $18,868. That's based on a 12-month year. When you include fringe benefits, the disparity widens. When looking at these numbers, you should keep in mind that there is an inescapable link between the salaries of people supplying tax dollars and the salaries of people who are funded by those tax dollars.

Some other factors particularly pertinent to this round of Charlevoix school negotiations are uncertainty over future educational financing and projections that school expenditures will exceed revenues in the current fiscal year.

Given the aforementioned facts, a freeze in teacher compensation would not be unreasonable. Any increase at all should be considered generous. And any increase in excess of current inflation rates should be considered intolerable.

Although the school contract negotiation process is tailored to discourage public input, taxpayers should still speak up and let school board members know where they stand. This can be done either by writing, phoning or personally contacting board members or the school's central office. Current board members are Larry Levensgood, Joan Buday, Ben Cunningham, Steve Czermak, Scott Beatty, Mary Lee Campbell and Ardeth Wieland. The phone number for the school's central office is 547-3200. Or you could show up at the next regularly scheduled school board meeting. It's a public meeting and will begin at 7:30 p.m., Oct. 18 in the high school library.

Teachers' buttons were inappropriate

Editor,

Wednesday evening (Oct. 6th) Charlevoix High School hosted its annual parent walk through. My good feelings and favorable impressions about my children's teachers were over-shadowed by shock and resentment concerning the buttons which the teachers were wearing. The buttons read "Educating Children Without A Contract". This was an inappropriate, offensive, and arrogant move by the teachers. The public has figured out why negotiations are going slowly and the blame is not with the school board. With a big cloud of financial uncertainty hanging over Charlevoix Schools and the threat of a huge law suit by the D.N.R., one can only speculate that the school board is being justifiably cautious and concerned about salary increases. I would like to commend the school board for hiring a professional contract negotiator and proceeding cautiously with a new contract. Wearing the buttons did not arouse public support or sympathy for the teachers. All it did was cast a chill over an otherwise pleasant and informative evening.

Sincerely,

Mary Lu Norton

We've all had volunteer experiences that leave us limp, but my neighbor, Connie Wipeman's recent episode bears repeating.

The Detroit Institute of Art's major fund-raiser is an annual affair called, "Under the Stars." One of the many volunteer assignments is to hand address more than six thousand invitations. Connie's daughter, over-all co-chairman of the event, asked her mother to hostess one of the three addressing invitation meetings in her West Bloomfield home. Thirty volunteers were scheduled at each morning session in September to complete this assignment.

Connie had everything prepared for the day. Volunteers recruited. Coffee cakes and fruit platters ordered. The silver polished. And what happened? The invitations donated by Tiffany were not ready as planned! All thirty volunteers had to be canceled along with the coffee cakes and fruit platters.

The meeting was rescheduled on Wednesday, October 6. Again Connie recruited 30 women to meet in her home. Coffee cakes and fruit platters were ordered again. Connie thought she was all set when she found out that the street where they live was going to be repaved. Would the residents kindly park their cars on the top of the hill away from the cul-de-sac at 7 o'clock in the morning? Yes, there would be a golf cart available to transport them back and forth to their cars. Would the paving be completed on the day of the meeting Connie asked. "Oh no" was the reply. "That's the day we are scheduled to put in the curbing!"

As pleasant and agreeable as Connie usually is, she rolled up her sleeves and by using her most tactful art of persuasion, she arranged for a day's delay in the completion of the curbing. It wasn't easy!

Two days before her scheduled meeting, the phone rings, and Connie's daughter says, "Mother, the addressing is going pretty well here. It might be a good idea if you cancel half the refreshments." On the day before the meeting, her daughter calls again and says, "Mother, we're all done. We don't need another meeting at your house."

Now the people who are going to be dining and dancing "Under the Stars" on Nov. 13, at the DIA fundraiser will surely have a wonderful time, but most of them will never know when they open their invitations of the behind-the-scenes tribulations that go into promoting such an outstanding special event.

After Connie canceled all thirty volunteers and the fruit platter order for the second time, the Wipemans drove up to Charlevoix to attend the apple festival for the weekend. With them came boxes of coffee cakes and sweets that they shared with me. Maybe the gang at the Courier office would also enjoy a little treat.

Coast Guard units from Charlevoix and Sault Ste. Marie placed booms in Round Lake to control an Oct. 14 fuel oil spill. The spill deposited between 50 and 150 gallons of oil in the lake.

Coast Guard cleans up oil spilled in Round Lake

An estimated 50 to 150 gallons forms slick by city docks the western shore of Round Lake and the smell of fuel oil was evident in East Park and downtown Charlevoix. A city employee discovered the slick shortly after 8 a.m. and notified authorities. Street catch basins were checked, but were found not to be the source of the problem. Clean-up efforts were coordinated by the U.S. Coast Guard Lifeboat Station in Charlevoix. A Coast Guard clean-up unit from Sault Ste. Marie also happened to be passing through Charlevoix and was summoned for assistance.

Between 50 and 150 gallons of fuel oil was spilled into Round Lake early on Thursday, Oct. 7. A slight breeze from the east kept the slick confined to the municipal dock area where it was cleaned up by the Coast Guard. The source of the spill has not been pinpointed; however the Coast Guard took fuel samples from several boats and lab tests are expected to be able to match the samples to oil from the spill. One of the samples was taken from a large boat which left the Charlevoix harbor early Oct. 7, but which was later located near Frankfort.

The slick from the spill extended from the channel all the way down

Community Foundation seeks grant applicants

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation has nearly $10,000 to give away and is looking for worthy projects to fund. To be eligible, grant applicants must be municipalities, educational institutions, or non-profit organizations that hold tax exempt status and are located in Charlevoix County.

According to Robert Tambellini, director of the Foundation, preference will be given to projects that serve the greatest number of people and meet unmet community needs.

To be considered for funding, a proposed project should promote and support education, recreation, community development, health, social services, the arts & culture, or civic improvement. In choosing which programs to fund, a committee of community representatives will consider a project's ability to prevent problems, enhance cooperation among local organizations, promote the well-being of young people and families, and encourage people to help themselves.

Organizations that have a project they believe is appropriate for funding should contact the office of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation at 536-2440 to request additional information and a grant application form. Grant requests are due November 1, 1993, and funding decisions will be made by mid-November.

This is the second round of grants made by the Community Foundation. Earlier this year, the Foundation granted $9,460 to a number of organizations, and awarded $4,350 in scholarships to Charlevoix County students.

Started in 1992, the Charlevoix County Community Foundation receives charitable donations and manages them in permanent endowment. Income from the endowment is reinvested in the community, by way of grants, to meet a variety of needs. For more information about the Community Foundation, call the foundation's office, 616/536-2440, or write, c/o P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, Michigan 49727.

Ohio Ballet to visit Charlevoix Oct. 26

Ballet may well be redefined in northern Michigan minds when the Ohio Ballet does its thing at 7 p.m. Tuesday evening Oct. 26 at Charlevoix High School.

In four dance pieces, the Ohio Ballet will use their classical training to present a broad spectrum of dance pieces, with a heavy emphasis on broad audience appeal.

The dance program includes a short classical pas de deux danced to music by Felix Mendelssohn, a very modern and new environmental piece entitled "Earth," a humorous dance to the outrageously witty poetry of the English satirist Noel Coward, and a dazzlingly romantic and athletic interpretation of big band music by Benny Goodman.

...Ohio Ballet to perform in Charlevoix Oct. 26

Lake and tutus when you come to see us," laughs Jane Startzman, company manager.

"We do our own repertory. Each piece is 10 to 30 minutes in length and we try to present a variety of dance.

Startzman described the new dances as "20th Century stuff."

"We want to blow the minds of people who think they know what ballet is all about," said Suzi Reis, spokesperson for the Charlevoix Council for the Arts, which is underwriting the ballet in Charlevoix.

"When the stage is up and the lighting is set, no one will recognize the high school gym.

"When these dancers come on stage, no one is going to move from their seats. They are incredible," Reis said with a smile.

Most of the program the ballet will present in Charlevoix was performed at New York's Joyce Theatre in February and received raves from New York Times dance critic Jennifer Dunning.

Bringing the Ohio Ballet to Charlevoix is part of the Charlevoix Council for the Arts' on-going program to bring fine arts programs to northern Michigan during the school year.

In keeping with the council's goal of exposing Charlevoix School children to the arts, the elementary and middle schools will be given a free matinee performance, and high school students will be admitted free to the evening performance on Tuesday.

The Ohio Ballet technical staff and the Charlevoix Performing Arts Team will work together to transform the high school gym into a dance theatre.

Known for its unusual technical affects, including choreographed lighting, the Charlevoix production

Founded by German choreographer Heinz Poll in 1968, the Ohio Ballet troupe consists of 19 dancers from virtually around the world. Their credits include stints with the prestigious Joffrey Ballet, Twyla Tharp, the touring company of Phantom of the Opera, National Ballet Company of Mexico, tours with the late Rudolph Nureyev, and even such popular performers as Archa Franklin.

Lighting Director, Thomas R. Skelton is well known in the dance world and on Broadway. Not only has he worked with the Joffrey, New York City, and Paul Taylor Ballets, but he has lighted for Katherine Hepburn, Stacey Keach, Rex Harrison, Lynn Redgrave, Dustin Hoffman and many others.

All profits from ticket sales will be donated by the Council for the Arts to the Charlevoix High School Performing Arts Team to help underwrite their year-long rounds of competition in debate, drama, and speech events.

Reis expressed special thanks to the many people in Charlevoix who have worked to make this possible.

"Connie Ford and the Performing Arts Team is doing a fantastic job.

"We are very indebted to the innkeepers who have donated rooms for the company, including Jack Ulrich at The Lodge, Tracey Sell and Carolyn Mattsinger at Edgewater, Harold Krusch at The Weathervane, and Stewart and Susan Boal and Brian Rysberg at Pointes North.

"Also without the support of downtown merchants and the Charlevoix Schools we could not bring this event to town," Reis concluded.

She noted that adult ($4) and Senior Citizen ($2) tickets may be purchased through Charlevoix High School and members of the Performing Arts Team.

Big Rock is nation's longest running nuclear plant

Consumers Power Company's Big Rock Point nuclear plant has become the longest running commercial nuclear power plant in the nation. The plant surpassed the previous record of 30 years and 92 days set by the Yankee nuclear power station located in Rowe, Massachusetts, earlier this month. The Yankee plant ceased operation in 1991.

Big Rock Point began operation on December 8, 1962, and continues in service today with a generating capacity of 67 megawatts, enough power to serve a community of 38,000 people. The plant is located on northern Lake Michigan, four miles northeast of Charlevoix.

David P. Hoffman, Consumers Power vice president of nuclear operations and a former Big Rock Point plant superintendent, credits employees for the longevity of the plant. "From the day the first shovel of dirt was turned to begin construction, the plant has been blessed with employees dedicated to proving that nuclear power is a clean, safe and economical means of generating electricity. Employees at the plant today carry on the excellence of their predecessors."

Big Rock Point has a long history of noteworthy accomplishments. Conceived in the late 1950s as part of the Power Reactor Demonstration Program of the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC), the plant was the world's first high power density boiling water reactor. The AEC's research program at Big Rock Point

Iron Works is area's largest employer

By Ralph McRae

The East Jordan Iron Works is not only Charlevoix's largest employer, with a local work force of approximately 500 people, it is also the oldest established manufacturer in northern Michigan. Co-founded by 20-year-old William E. Malpass in 1883, it has for the last 110 years been a Malpass family business. Currently operated by the fourth generation, it won't be long until a fifth generation moves with the industry into the 21st century.

Even before railroads came to northern Michigan the foundry was started in East Jordan to make iron products needed by lumber mills, sail boat shippers and landowners. The business grew, but in 1905 that growth was interrupted by fire. Rising from the ashes, by 1928 the business had grown to 50 employees.

By this time the lumber era had passed and the East Jordan Iron Works needed a new market. The new market was the casting of items such as fire hydrants, sewer grates and manhole covers. Soon, East Jordan Iron Works products could be found in cities all across the country.

The 1940s were eventful years for the Iron Works. During World War II the Iron Works played a role in the country's war effort, filling several defense department contracts. By 1948, the company employed 92 people.

Founder William E. Malpass died in 1944 at age 81. In 1953, the company became a closed family corporation. The company is currently under the leadership of Frederick F. Malpass, Ironworks President, and his cousins, brothers Tad and Tracey Malpass, who are vice-presidents.

Since the 1960s one of the company's major products had been heavy brake drums for large trucks and trailers.

Few people are aware that the East Jordan Iron Works has become one of Michigan's largest recycling centers. Rather than mine ore, the plant consumes tons of scrap iron and steel, much of it from junked automobiles.

Only a small portion of the company's products stay in this region. Trucks haul tons of finished products to several cities east of the Mississippi River and to a mammoth distribution center in Sunfield, Michigan. The inventory, both on-site and at out of town locations, is kept track of on a computer system. Trucks returning to the plant bring back scrap metal, tons of coke and moulding sand.

In addition to competing with government subsidized foreign foundries, the East Jordan Iron Works has had to contend with many environmental challenges. Since 1978, the company has, on its own initiative, spent more than $5.5 million to reduce air pollution. Most of this money has been spent on dust-collection equipment.

To get an idea of the economic contribution a healthy industry makes to a community, consider the following: The East Jordan Iron Works pays the East Jordan School District property taxes of more than $300,000 annually. This equates to the cost of educating 75 students. The company's employees who account for an annual payroll of approximately $20 million, also pay local taxes. Most local retail businesses also count Iron Works employees among their clientele.

Perhaps more than any other company in northern Michigan, the East Jordan Iron Works has reinvested charitably in its own community. Among the projects funded by the Malpass Foundation have been: construction of a swimming pool and a new public library next to the East Jordan High School; construction of one of northern Michigan's finest football and track and field complexes; free office space and yearly grants to the Charlevoix County Community Foundation.

(Story to be continued next week.)

led to the development of more efficient nuclear fuels for the commercial nuclear power industry. The plant's reactor was also employed for a number of years to produce radioactive cobalt for medicine and industry.

In 1977, Big Rock Point set a world record for continuous operation by remaining in service for 343 days. The plant's 95.5 percent availability to generate electricity in 1986 was the best of any General Electric-designed plant in the world that year.

The American Nuclear Society named Big Rock Point a Nuclear Historic Landmark in 1991 for its contributions to the nuclear industry.

Football team winning streak reaches three with 27-6 win

It took some doing, but Charlevoix's varsity football team is now back to .500. After an 0-3 start, the Rayders have won their last three games and will be looking to make it four straight this coming Friday evening in Petoskey. This past Friday evening didn't have too much difficulty in beating Harbor Springs 27-6.

Offensively, Charlevoix's running game chewed up Harbor Springs. Senior quarterback Don Jess only passed seven times, but he was deceptive in his handoffs and ball fakes and also timed his pitches well on the option. The Rayder blockers provided running backs Jerry Duhart and Brandon Webb with room to run all night long. Duhart had 98 yards on 10 carries and added a 38 yard punt return. Webb had 64 yards on 16 carries and added a 45 yard kick-off return. On a cold and rainy night, Charlevoix completed only three of seven passes for a total of 41 yards. It was just enough to keep the Harbor Springs defense off balance. Harbor Springs, on the other hand, had some success running the ball, but their passing game was an ugly thing.

Charlevoix opened the scoring in the first quarter on a 13-yard touchdown run by Duhart. Robbie Stradtner kicked the extra point. The Rayders stretched their lead to 14-0 early in the second quarter on a 2-yard run by Webb. Stradtner again kicked the extra point. Harbor Springs scored its lone

Charlevoix's boys cross country team finished second in the Class A, B and large C division of the Martin Invitational Cross Country Race at the Belvedere Golf Course Saturday. Traverse City dominated the race, finishing with 67 points, 50 better than Charlevoix.

Charlevoix was led by Mike Bush and Matt Dickinson who finished second and third behind Traverse City's Mike Decker. The three ran close throughout the race with Decker taking first with a sprint down the home stretch. Decker finished with a time of 16:47. Bush placed second at 16:50 and Dickinson came in third in 16:51.

Other Rayder places and times were as follows: 6-Chris LeBuit, 17:21; 16-Josh Dhaseler, 18:12; 19-Jeff McComb, 18:32; 21-James Conlan, 18:35; 23-Paul Henne, 18:42; 27-Scott Campbell, 19:01; 35-Zach Pajtas, 19:41; 48-Drew Laucher, 20:21.

In the girls' race Charlevoix placed third as a team. Individually, Becca Chamberlain led the Rayders with a sixth place finish in a time of 21:05. Other Rayder places and finishes were as follows: 30-Lisa Hoadley, 23:36; 35-Trina Holm, 23:55; 45-Bethany Marunus, 25:45; 47-Kaylee Manker, 26:15; 51-Katie Thorp, 26:58; 52-Callie Stwarga, 27:05.

touchdown late in the first half on a 1-yard run. The extra point attempt failed.

With 46 seconds left in the half, Webb scored again, this time on an eight-yard run. The drive began when Webb stepped in front of another Rayder defender and intercepted a pass. The touchdown was set up by a 28-yard pass from Jess to Trevor Williams.

The only touchdown of the second half was shrouded in controversy. All night long the referees had been on the quick side with their whistles. In the third quarter as Duhart carried the ball near the Harbor Springs goal line he was hit and fumbled the ball. The referee's whistle blew as soon as the hit was made. Coaches on the Charlevoix sideline felt Duhart had crossed the goal line prior to the hit and the play should be ruled a touchdown. Coaches on the Harbor Springs sideline felt the play was a fumble which Harbor Springs recovered. From the sideline, near the goal line, it looked like the ball popped loose at the one-yard line and Charlevoix caught a break when the referees ruled that the play would be done over. On the do-over, Duhart scored.

Defensively for Charlevoix, Gregg Holmes and Williams each had nine solo tackles. David Skel had seven solo tackles and was crowned homecoming king at halftime with queen Carrie Cunningham. Webb had five solo tackles.

Webb wins football contest with 7-3 record

In a tough week where every body was far from perfect Mike Webb was the winner of the Courier football contest with a record of 7-3. There were a lot of 6-4 records with almost everyone missing Michigan State's upset. For winning last week's competition Webb will receive a free six month subscription to the Courier.

A note regarding last week's winner, Tom Meggison. Meggison received a six month subscription and donated it to Boulder Park Terrace medical care facility. The subscription comes through the mail, but Meggison prefers to get his Courier hot off the press Wednesday morning from a vending machine.

Now, on to the Courier pick's for this weekend's games. This could be ugly. These are some tough games to call and my season record is a less than glowing 18-12.

Charlevoix at Petoskey. Petoskey has a worse record than Charlevoix, but they've played against better teams. The Rayders have won three straight, but it ain't like Grayling, Elk Rapids and Harbor Springs are the Cowboys, Giants and Saints. In recent weeks Charlevoix has looked better over-all, but there's still plenty of room for improvement. For example, despite allowing only one touchdown against Harbor Springs the Rayder defense didn't tackle particularly well. That's been a problem off and on all year and could prove costly. On the other side of the coin the offense has steadily improved. The blocking has been solid most of the year, the fakes in the backfield have gotten more deceptive and the receivers are becoming more of a threat each game. This pick isn't made without reservations, but let's say Charlevoix comes to play Friday. Pick Charlevoix.

St. Ignace at Cheboygan. This game's always a wild and woolly battle. Pick St. Ignace.

Boyer City at Traverse City St. Francis. The Lake Michigan Division's best game of the year. This is where we find out if Boyer City is a contender or pretender. Let's say they're a contender. Pick Boyer City.

Elk Rapids at East Jordan. East Jordan has a nice team this year. It'd be nice to see them win their next two games. Pick East Jordan.

Michigan at Penn State. A word of advice to U of M fans on how to handle MSU gloaters. Just tell them that gloating by MSU fans is like the plague of the locusts. Sure it's a pain, but fortunately, it's something you only have to put up with about once every 17 years. Two losses in a row would be a real humiliation for U of M. And it's too early in the season for U of M humiliation. That's supposed to wait until bowl time. Pick U of M.

Michigan State at Ohio State. If MSU wins here, it's time to reinforce the shocks on the bandwagon, but it probably won't happen. Pick Ohio State.

Stanford at Arizona. Isn't Arizona the team which has that "Desert Swarm" defense? And isn't Stanford the team that has...that has...well, just what is it they have? A good coach I guess. But beyond that they're kind of hurting this year. Pick Arizona.

Seattle at Detroit. Having already embarrassed themselves enough for the month of October, Detroit should win this game. And how about starting Barry Sanders at quarterback. What the heck, everybody else in the Lions' backfield has had a chance to play quarterback. Or maybe just go without a quarterback and snap the ball directly to Sanders. Just cut out the middle man. Pick Detroit.

San Francisco at Dallas. Dallas isn't the most likable team in the world, but they do happen to be on a roll. For wide receiver fans, this game is a dream. Pick Dallas.

Philadelphia Eagles at New York Giants. And did you see the thumping that New York administered to Washington. Meanwhile, Philadelphia was taking bite on the chin from Chicago. That was enough to convince me. Pick New York Giants.

Marjorie V. Smith

Marjorie V. Smith, 77, of Boyer City and Charlevoix, died Oct. 6, 1993, at Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey.

Her funeral was Tuesday, Oct. 12, at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix. The Rev. Philip H. Scharbaum of the First Congregational Church officiated. Burial will be in Brookside Cemetery, Charlevoix.

She was raised in Charlevoix and graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1934. She attended the University of Michigan Extension in Charlevoix, Central Michigan University and Florida Atlantic University.

In 1935, she married George E. Smith and he preceded her in death in 1957.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith built and operated the Hitching Post Barbecue in Charlevoix for several years in the early 1940s.

She moved to Florida in 1956 and returned to Northern Michigan in 1971 where she assisted her brother, the Rev. Francis Partridge, in his parsonages until her death. She also worked at Shop of the Gulls until the mid 1980s.

Rayder golf team qualifies for State

Blechel named to All-Region team

The Charlevoix High School golf team placed second in regional competition last Friday at the Michagway course in Gaylord and will compete in the State Finals this Friday at the Royal Scot course in Lansing. Scott Blechel, a sophomore, made the All Region golf team shooting an 84 which was the fourth best score in the regional tournament.

As a team, Charlevoix finished at 357 strokes, four points behind regional winner Harbor Springs. In addition to Blechel's 84, Brad Eaton shot a 90, Robert Sineway 91, Scott Curtis 92, and Fritz Sommerfeld 93.

Following Friday's competition the top 10 of 12 teams will play again Saturday at Forrest Akers West in Lansing.

Basketball team falls to Harbor Springs

Charlevoix's varsity girls' basketball team was tripped up by Harbor Springs 61-46 at home last Thursday evening. The Rayders had no success stopping the Rams' Kelly Flynn who scored 27 points.

Harbor Springs took the lead in the first quarter and held it the rest of the way. At the end of the first quarter Harbor Springs led 16-12. They stretched that lead to 35-25 at halftime.

Charlevoix's strongest quarter of the evening was the third when they outscored the Rams 12-6 to enter the fourth quarter trailing 41-37. The Rayders got the first basket of the fourth quarter to cut the Rams lead to two, but then the Rayder offense sputtered and stalled scoring only seven more points the rest of the way while Harbor Springs countered with 20.

Individually, Liz Grunch led the Rayders with 15 points. Melissa Anderson had seven rebounds.

The loss dropped Charlevoix's season record to 6-5 overall and 4-2 in league play. The Rayders' next game will be Oct. 14 at home against Boyne City.

The Charlevoix Coast Guard Wives group has adopted a portion of highway M-66 to keep clean. Working at a recent clean-up session were (from left) Pam Kihlmire, Sarah Corporan, Amy Zappen and Kara Baker.

Sheriff's Department investigating B & Es and arson

$500 reward offered

A $500 reward is being offered for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the a series of breakings and enterings and the arson of a house in the Klooster Road area of Marion Township Sept. 23.

Shortly before 7:30 a.m. Sept. 23 an unoccupied home belonging to a downstate family was burned by arsonists. The Charlevoix City Fire Department fought the fire, but by the time it was discovered and reported it was too late to save much of the structure.

In addition to the arson four other homes in the area were found to have been broken into and entered. Subsequent investigation resulted in the discovery of a number of stolen items from the homes which had been stashed in the woods.

Anyone with information about the crimes is asked to contact the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department at 547-4461.

A memorable first buck

So how does he top this? Matt Miller of Charlevoix got his first deer with a bow and arrow Oct. 3 and it was a 10-point buck with a 16 and a-half inch rack spread. The deer weighed 170 pounds field dressed.

Car/deer accidents increasing

By Laurie Lounsbury

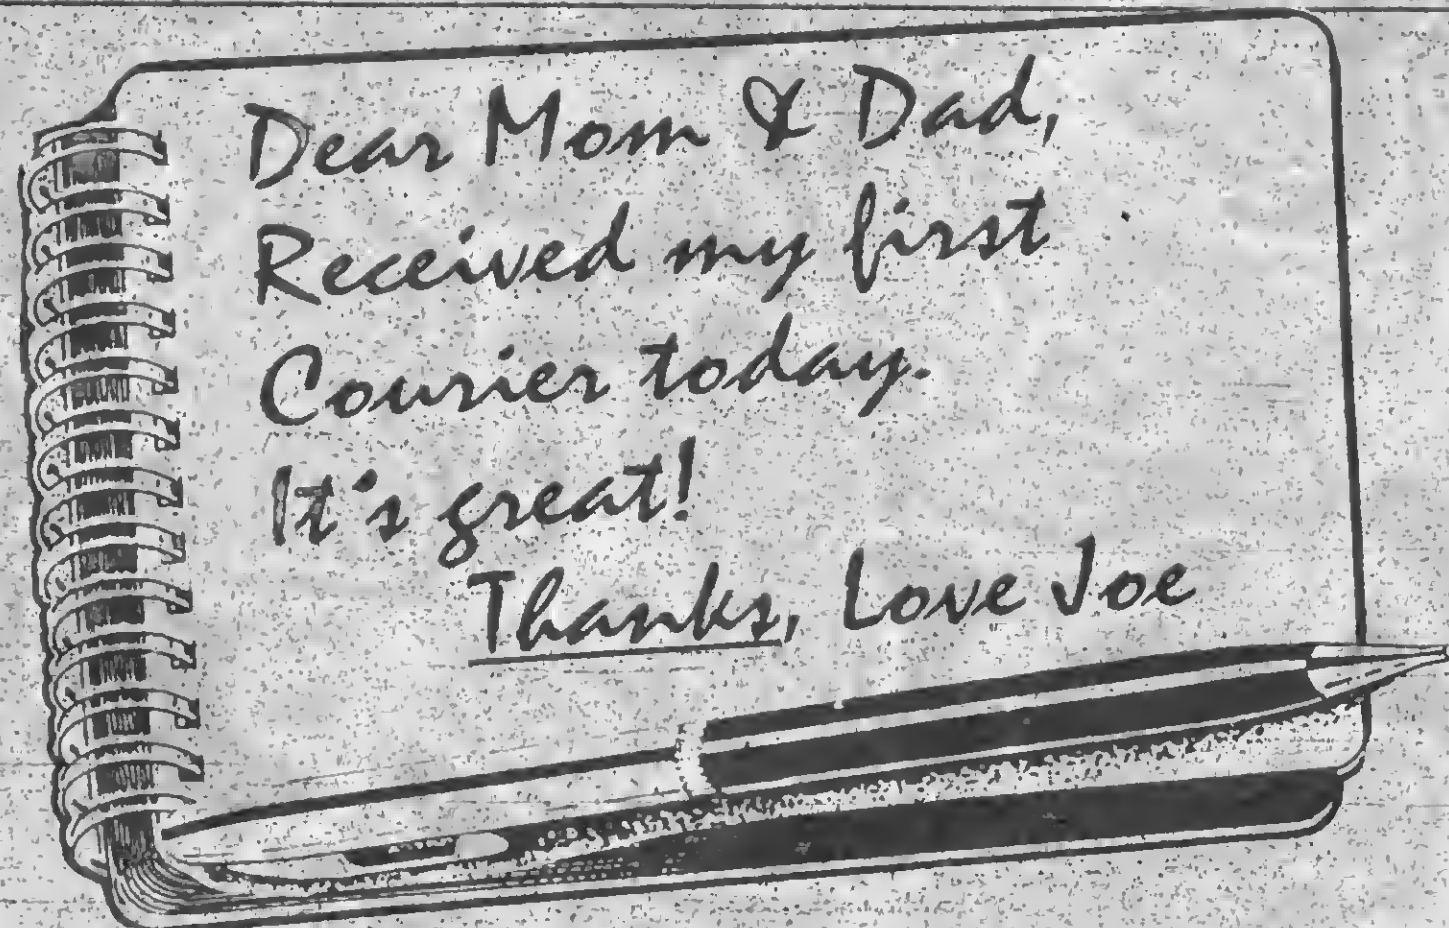

In the fall, a deer's thoughts turn to flights of fancy. Unfortunately for motorists, the deer often take flight across the streets and highways with hormonally driven reckless abandon. The Charlevoix County Sheriff's office reports that they are seeing an average of four car/deer accidents a day, resulting in property damage and sometimes personal injury.

The frisky deer aren't limiting themselves to the county roads. A car deer accident occurred last week in front of the I.G.A. on the north side of town. Deer have been spotted wandering through people's yards in the May Street vicinity, on the north side, anywhere near the golf course, and down Dixon near the Chicago Club. In other words, they're just about everywhere. Last Saturday a deer had to be killed by Stroud's cabins as a result of a car/deer accident on Petoskey Avenue.

Police Chief Dennis Halverson said that the city police usually have four to six car deer accidents in town each fall. Halverson said this year's deer activity in town doesn't seem to be anything out of the ordinary, but Undersheriff Dale Böhm thinks the deer activity county-wide may be slightly above average this season.

The Sheriff's department is suggesting that drivers slow down from their usual driving speed at night and be especially alert for deer. Night-time usually brings the most deer activity on the roads, but many deer have been spotted wandering the streets by day as well.

ANNOUNCING THE MERGER OF CHARLEVOIX COUNTY STATE BANK AND FIRST STATE BANK OF CHARLEVOIX

Sure, competition can take you far. But cooperation can take you farther.

Take Charlevoix County State Bank and First State Bank of Charlevoix.

They have joined forces to become a great new bank, CB North. Good for them.

Good for the whole Charlevoix area.

Because they're combining resources, knowledge, and experience, and they're supported by CB Financial, one of Michigan's premier bank holding companies.

Because all the time and energy and expense that used to go into competition will now be going into service, better service and more of it, for all of us.

Don't look for sweeping changes at the new CB North, just more of the same. Only better.

Because, competition's great, but friendship's greater.

Audit report shows city's books to be in order

By L. Scott Swanson

Auditors from Rehmann Robson & Company reported results of the annual city audit to the city council Monday evening. Auditors cited only a few problems and the majority of those have already been taken care of.

The audit report considered the status of Charlevoix's books on March 31. In at least one case a problem cited was corrected as of April 1.

Among the budgetary concerns raised were keeping an adequate amount of money in reserve to pay off the electric system revenue bond. That problem was partially corrected by an increase in electrical rates earlier this year. The remainder of the problem can be addressed by setting aside $26,000 of the insurance pay-off money from the electrical plant money as money in reserve for the bond payment.

As of March 31, the city had a deficit in a utility fund. Since that time that has been corrected through the collection of summer taxes.

For the 1992/93 fiscal year the city's general fund had expenditures of $1,760,733. That was up $76,334, or 4.5 percent, from the previous fiscal year's expenditures of $1,684,399. City general fund revenues for 1992/93 were $1,714,294 which was $46,439 less than expenditures. The difference was made up by dipping into the city's fund balance. City revenues for the 92/93 fiscal year were up $126,059, or 7.9 percent, from the previous fiscal year. Taxes account for largest share, approximately 47 percent, of city general fund revenue. Other sources of general fund revenue are: interest

By Laurie Lounsbury

Fourteen children with tiny, cherubic faces went tearing around the elementary school gym, laughing while they threw balls or rolled around on scooters. Their first year of school is progressing as a wonderful experience - not an emotionally devastating one. These are younger kids who used to be thrown into a regular kindergarten curriculum before they were ready to cope. That usually resulted in a handful of little kids feeling badly about their ability to learn. Their self-esteem really took a plunge when they were held back to repeat a year of kindergarten. Charlevoix has adopted a Young Five program designed to help the children who aren't quite ready for regular kindergarten.

Children in the Young Five program are those with birthdays occurring right on the edge of the school cut off date. The developmental difference between a five year old and a going-on-six year old can be a giant chasm, unbridgeable in the same kindergarten classroom. The young five program allows the younger children to have an extra year of development before they embrace the rigors of regular kindergarten.

Dorothy Miller is teaching the Young Five program, with assistance from Myrna Boss and Diane Van Guilder. All three women are staunch believers in the Young Five concept. "We're giving them the gift of time," Miller said. After spending a year in the Young Five program, the students will progress to regular kindergarten. All of the

Odyssey of the Mind program prepares for this year

Charlevoix schools' Odyssey of the Mind teams for the 1993-1994 year are currently being organized for all students in grades 3-4, 5 at the elementary school and any student in the middle and high schools. Information about the creative problem solving after school activity can be obtained at each of the Charlevoix schools. Parents should help students decide on the problems their students would like to solve and what their responsibilities as team members are. Parent volunteer coaches will be needed for all division levels. Charlevoix teams have been very successful in past years in all competition levels. Another unique part of the Charlevoix OM experience is that all students have the opportunity to join a team.

Steps to insure that all interested students are placed on OM teams include obtaining registration information, completing the enclosed form, and returning the signed form to the student's school by Oct. 22. An important parent meeting for organizing the teams will be held at the elementary school, Oct. 28, at 7 p.m. Kathy Martineck, working through the Char Em Intermediate School District, is conducting a coaches training session Saturday, Oct. 30. Questions about any part of the OM program can be directed to Carol Elliott at the K-5 building or Tom Southard at the Middle School.

Charlevoix Boy Scout Troop 11 meets from 7-8 p.m. at the Club 77 building on Lincoln Street. Boys interested in joining the troop are also welcome to attend.

parents of the Young Five program were enthusiastic about the idea. "The parents agreed to give their kids the time they need now, to help the learning process later," Miller said.

Miller has 14 children in her classroom. She keeps them busy with constant, quick activities. One of the goals of the program is to slowly increase the children's attention span by working on focusing and listening skills. The Young Fives will not be studying the alphabet or learning the sounds of letters. They just aren't ready for that. "The concept is to match the curriculum to their needs," Miller explained.

Miller makes smooth transitions from one short activity to another, leaving the children with no time to grow distracted or bored. To an observer, the pace is almost dizzying, yet the children seamlessly move from one activity to another. They spend five minutes playing loudly, standing next to one another without much cooperative play. It's a sign of their social level - again, they're not quite ready for group interaction. Miller makes sure that the planned activities are developmentally appropriate for the kids.

"This is the right place for these children to be at this time," she said.

The Young Five program is being embraced with open arms by the parents as well as the teachers. Miller reported that on parent's night, she had 100% participation from the parents of her students. No child was put into the Young Five program without the parent's permission, which was enthusiastically given. "This is an exciting place for them to be," Miller said, referring to both the parents and children of the Young Five Program.

and dividends, 4.7 percent; rents and royalties, 10.2 percent; fines and forfeits, 6 percent; charges for services, 12.9 percent; licenses and permits, 4 percent; state revenue, 14.9 percent; and miscellaneous, 2.3 percent.

This year's budget was adopted with a projected excess of revenues over expenditures of $18,000. That money would be used to increase the general fund's fund balance (i.e. savings or rainy day fund). The auditor said the city currently has enough money in the fund balance to cover expenses for one or two months. When asked by council member Chert Hoffman, how many months the fund balance should be able to cover, the auditor said that ideally he'd like to see a fund balance able to cover expenditures for six months to a year.

The audit report was accepted by a unanimous vote of the council. In other action Monday evening the council:

*Presented a Keep Michigan Beautiful award to the Karl and Carol Gilewicz family for their beautification efforts at their home near the intersection of Park Avenue and State Street.

*Renewed the city's insurance liability contract with the Michigan Municipal League Liability and Property Pool at a cost of $80,268 per year for $2 million in coverage. That cost is up from $69,977 in 1992-93, however the 1992-93 cost was down from $75,625 in 1991-92.

*Approved an agreement with Hayes Township which will allow the city ambulance to provide service to Hayes Township areas southwest of Maple Grove Road.

*Reviewed 1994 infrastructure project plans and approved engineering expenditures not to exceed $6,000 for a left turn lane on West Carpenter at the Bridge Street intersection. The left turn lane could lead to a stop light at the intersection some time in the future.

School compensation increases have been too high

Editor,

SUBJECT: Courier Editorial on October 13th (regarding school contract negotiations). Six years annual pay increases have been 77 percent higher than inflation. Next six years pay increases should be 77 percent lower than inflation. Rather than just salaries, let's put fringe benefits on a sane basis. Include fringe benefits as raises which they really are. Don't forget the fringe benefit of living in Charlevoix vs. Big City. Your comparison to average salary for people in Charlevoix County's private sector certainly is relevant.

Also, let's take a look at the terribly inflationary increases in costs per student per year. If vouchers were given for private education for the more than $6,000 per student the tax payer pays our system, teachers would have an entirely different contract, parents would have some input in the education process, and competition, choices, and many things which have proven to be the healthy backbone of our country's progress, could come into being. All of us in Charlevoix have a stake in our schools and must take an active part. To leave all of the input to educators, parents of students, or the State of Michigan, is not enough. We need more balance in our school systems management.

I have always believed in using the "best heads in town" to give direction to things. The pamphlet put out recently by the City of Charlevoix entitled "Ten Years of Progress in Charlevoix, Michigan" is an example of the joint efforts put forth by many of these people, including the management and staff of the City, the City Council and the many commissions and committees.

Cross country team was a pleasure to chaperone

Editor,

We had the opportunity to drive and chaperone the Charlevoix Girls Varsity Cross Country team to Carson City. With so much negative news printed in the newspaper each day, we just have to comment on how well-mannered and courteous these girls were. Their coach Mr. Plude and assistant coach Mr. Gelderblom should be proud.

Editor's notes

And they call it the "justice" system. Two things that just have to grind you recently occurred in court systems. In Germany, the headcase fan who stabbed tennis player Monica Seles walked out of a German court with a two-year suspended sentence. That means no jail time other than the few months he has already served. Seles, who is lucky to be alive, and the prosecutors of the case are justifiably irate. Prosecutors are appealing the sentence.

A short time after the Seles sentence was announced, a judge in Ingham County, Michigan came out with an even stranger ruling. This judge ruled that prison inmates are entitled to witness fees in court cases. The net effect of the ruling is that if your a prisoner and you're bored, you can have one of the other inmates file a lawsuit and name you as a witness. That way you'll get a field trip and get paid for it.

Frivolous lawsuits filed by prison inmates are a problem which legislators are simply going to have to address. A recent television show featured attorney's general from several states talking about some of the inmate cases their offices have had to defend. One inmate filed suit because he was served creamy rather than crunchy peanut butter. Such suits are costing taxpayers at least thousands, and more likely millions, of dollars.

On a more pleasant note many northern Michigan fans will be viewing this year's World Series with additional interest due to the presence of Bellaire native, Roger Mason, Mason is a relief pitcher for the Philadelphia Phillies. He pitched well in both of the first two series games. When Mason first broke into the major leagues with the Detroit Tigers in 1984, I was working with the Bellaire newspaper. In the off-season I covered a visit he made to a Bellaire fourth grade class. The fourth graders wanted to know why he didn't get to hit. Mason tried to explain how in American League baseball the designated hitter rule allows a better hitter to hit in place of pitchers. The kids weren't buying that. One of them asked, "Would you like to be a first baseman?" They get to hit," Mason smiled and said, "No, I like pitching."

Interestingly, this year's series is not using a designated hitter. Mason could conceivably get a chance to hit.

In addition to playing baseball, Mason is also an exceptional basketball player. He's about 6'8". I played against him in a men's recreation league in Bellaire. In one game, I was the tallest player on my team that day and ended up with Mason guarding me. At the end of the game, with about 30 seconds left, my team was trailing 99-31. Our team had the ball, and I didn't want the other team to hit 100 so I decided to try to dribble out the clock. The other team quickly figured out what I was up to, and Mason and his teammates started chasing me around the court. They finally trapped me and forced me to pass with 13 seconds left. My dumb teammate shot the ball. He made a basket, which pulled us to within 66 points, but also allowed the other team to go down the court and break 100.

I still chuckle about that whenever I see Mason pitching on TV. Above and beyond his athletic abilities, Mason is a real nice guy, someone northern Michigan can be proud of for the way he conducts himself both on and off the field.

State Representative Bev. Bodem was in Charlevoix Friday and stopped by the Courier office. She said school finance reform is the top priority in Lansing and is likely to stay center stage for the next several months. In Charlevoix, we'll be watching that debate closely. The Charlevoix school budget for the current fiscal year is projected to be in the red. State action could exacerbate that situation.

Higher property values translate into higher taxes

By Laurie Lounsbury

After holding a public hearing in compliance with the truth in taxation laws, the Charlevoix County Commissioners voted to approve the new millages for Charlevoix County.

Due to large increases in property assessments throughout the county, the Headlee Amendment rolled back the number of mills that the county could levy. Voters may see a smaller millage figure on their tax bills, but they will be paying more money.

The total amount of state equalized value in Charlevoix County rose from $660,473,099 in 1992 to $794,659,135 in 1993.

The county will pull in 10.96 percent more money this year than last year. County school districts will see a 10.33 percent increase over last year. Had the first millage proposal from the Charlevoix School District passed, the Charlevoix schools would have gained nearly 21 percent in additional revenue from the previous year. In 1992, the schools received a 3.26 percent increase in 1992 over the 1991 revenue.

Funding for 911, which was approved by the voters in 1992, will represent .8909 mill on the tax bill. Voters approved up to one mill a year for two years to fund the start-up costs of 911. Since a year has passed since the vote, Headlee rolled the one mill back to .8909 mill, the maximum allowable amount that the county can levy. The transit department will receive $176,971 in county funds, a 10.58 percent increase from $160,033 in 1992.

The townships had the largest increase over last year, with a 25.32 percent increase. This was primarily due to separate voted in millages for the townships themselves.

The Charlevoix DDA will capture a total of $466,913 dollars, but will refund a portion of that back to the schools, in accordance with a 1990 amendment to the DDA agreement. In 1993, 66.85 percent of all tax dollars will go to the school districts. Since the June school millage election failed, the summer school taxes were small. This means that the winter tax bill will be considerably larger than usual.

A large portion of the taxes this year will come from Medusa, which went from the industrial facilities tax abatement roll to the ad valorem roll. Medusa represents nearly $15,000,000 in taxable property.

Local girl wins pageant crown

Four-year-old Kayla Marie Potter of Charlevoix recently won the Little Miss Northern Michigan title. The Miss Northern Michigan scholarship competition took place Oct. 9 at the Holiday Inn in Traverse City.

Potter was one of several girls competing in the Little Miss Northern Michigan division. The competition consisted of a five-minute interview with the judges, modeling an outfit of their choice, modeling a party dress, answering a question, and a talent presentation. For her talent, Potter did a country line dance.

For winning the competition Potter received a crown, banner, queen's pin, trophy, jacket, portrait and savings bond. Her sponsors for the event were the East Jordan Iron Works, the Circus Shop of Petoskey and State Farm Insurance of Charlevoix.

Potter is the daughter of Jay and Deborah Potter of Charlevoix. Her grandparents are Timothy and Lora Shores and Quin Potter of Charlevoix.

Arts Council begins funding drive

Cracked Tree Arts Council's 1993-94 Business Fund Drive is now in progress. The Drive committee has set a goal of $10,000 with appeals being made to more than 300 Charlevoix and Emmet County business and professional firms.

Pat Bass, Arts Council President, points out the valuable contributions CTAC makes to the cultural life of our Northern Michigan Communities "without one dollar of local tax support."

"This includes on-going exhibits, dance, art, music instruction, this year's visit by Artrain, concerts and the current Anishnabe Festival," said Bass.

An example is the recently concluded "Behold Our Canada" photographic exhibition of Joanne and Gary McGuffin's trans-Canada travels by canoe and bike. While attracting viewers from every area community, it also was seen by visitors from Ontario, England, Alaska, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, New York, Wyoming, California, Florida, Pennsylvania, Missouri, Arizona and Texas.

Judy Landis, CTAC Visual Arts Co-Chair, estimates more than 5,000 area students shared the McGuffin's adventure through their lectures at local schools. Said Landis, "Without the support of local firms it wouldn't have happened."

Lisa & Norman (Boogie) Carlson, Jr.

Lisa D. Clum and Norman L. (Boogie) Carlson Jr., both of Charlevoix, were married August 21 in an afternoon wedding at St. Mary's Church in Charlevoix.

The bride is the daughter of Martha Clum of Owosso and Stanley Clum of Davidson. She was given in marriage by her father. The groom is the son of Norman Carlson Sr. of Winter Park, Florida and Joanne Carlson of Charlevoix.

The church was decorated with large white mum plants and topiary trees of white roses and mini carnations. Pews were adorned with white and gold pew bows.

The bride wore a floor length gown with a silk shantung, halter-style bodice. The open back of the dress was accented with a princess waist and a large bow. Her headpiece was a floor-length veil with a cascade of white Casablanca lilies and bridal white and champagne roses.

Maid of Honor was Pam Bussineau, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Vicky Chalker, sister of the bride, Lisa Heckendorf, Michelle Carlson, sister of the groom, Janice Branson, Shelly Novotny, Lynn Skeel, Laura Moser and Lori Mitchell. They wore gold em-

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

In my role as pastor, I spend a lot of time in nursing homes. I am the guardian for one woman who has no family left. Along with my colleagues in ministry, I take turns holding Sunday worship services at both Grandvue and Boulder Park Terrace. I know the decision to send a loved one to a nursing home has to be one of the most difficult decisions you could ever make. I only ask one thing of you: Stay involved in your loved one's life once they get there.

If you don't have anyone you know in a nursing home, please don't stop reading here because you think this story has nothing to do with you. I want to get you thinking too. You see one of the biggest needs people in nursing homes or foster care have is for companionship. The days get long and lonely when your world consists of a small room that perhaps you are even sharing with a roommate. You finger pictures over and over again remembering better times and you find yourself wondering if anyone cares anymore.

Again, if you are tempted to stop reading at this point, please stay with me just a little bit longer. The reason is simple. One day, time catches up with us all. We will be the ones that our children or grandchildren will not be sure they know what to do about. We could be the ones sitting in those rooms by ourselves. You have to give of your love. You have to invest your love. If you want to experience the dividends of that love later in life.

Admittedly, these thoughts were stimulated by a visit to Boulder Park Terrace last Sunday when it was my turn to lead worship. One woman cried out very mournfully, "If I could just find a husband again, that would mean everything in the world to me." She was lonely. She was simply seeking someone to be her friend.

Last you think this a discouraging column, after worship, I visited one of my parishioners who was not able to come down to the service. She is 97 and is recovering from a four hour surgery only weeks ago. We were reflecting on her life and she said to me, "Pastor, whatever happens, I am the happiest woman alive. Life has been more than good to me."

There is the point I hope you will catch. Our elderly folks not only need our compassion and/or care. They also have some tremendous words of wisdom and blessing to pass on to us. With a holiday coming on, why not take the children or the grandchildren over to visit a shut-in when they wear their costumes. It will make a grandma's heart smile. It will make your own heart feel warmed. It will give your little ones a memory that may come back to bless you later on.

It doesn't take much time or effort to be a blessing to someone. You just have to do it. Jesus said that even "a cup of cold water" can make all the difference in a heart that is seeking love.

(Rev. Bruce Hamilton is pastor of the Charlevoix Community Church of God. Beacons of Blessings is provided to the Courier by Hamilton and other members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.)

Iron Works remains a leader in its field

(The following story was written for the Courier by Ralph McRae. This story is a continuation from last week of a story regarding the East Jordan Iron Works. McRae is a former Charlevoix mayor and council member who continues to be involved in a number of civic endeavors, particularly those related to business and industrial development.)

By Ralph McRae

The East Jordan Iron Works is a family owned and operated business. It is under the guidance of the Malpass family. The plant was co-founded in 1883 by William E. Malpass and Richard W. Round. Malpass arrived in Michigan in 1879 from England. At the time he was 16 years old. Malpass met Round and for a time worked as a woodcutter on a piece of property owned by Round in the Port Huron area. Round was an ironmaster associated with the Jackson and Round Foundry in Detroit. Three years later, Malpass and Round moved to Traverse City to work with foundries in that city and in Elk Rapids. The following year they moved to East Jordan and set up their own foundry.

In the beginning the whole shop occupied only 1,500 square feet of space. The present plant covers more than 300,000 square feet and the office area is currently being enlarged. Malpass and Round were the first two employees. East Jordan Iron Works now has 675 employees in East Jordan plus another 100 working outside the plant.

Shortly after starting the foundry, Malpass married Round's eldest daughter, Alice. Thirteen children were born to the couple. By the mid 1940s the couple had 52 grandchildren and 68 grandchildren.

In addition to employing 675 people, East Jordan Iron Works also utilizes advanced automation systems to maximize productivity. Strong productivity is only merited by prime sales. To that end the Iron Works sales division directed by Tom Leake has added sales offices and sales people. The company also has several out of state warehouses supplying a network of distributors. Under Vice President Tad Malpass, industrial sales have greatly increased and have been a major factor in the company's surging sales figures. East Jordan Iron Works manifolds and drain covers can be found throughout the world and they can also be found close to home. The grates around the trees on Bridge Street came from the East Jordan Iron Works. Providing the sales force with well designed products is the responsibility of the engineering department. Members of this department use computers to design items which will meet customer specifications. A dozen engineers work in the drafting office. Eight others are constantly formulating production improvements within the plant. The company's top executives point out that the success of the plant is due the excellence of all of the employees. The welfare of the employees is the responsibility of Vice President William C. Christensen and his staff of eight people. Although Iron Works' employees work with heavy objects and hot metals, a company safety program and employees using good judgment has resulted in an outstanding record of accident-free days. The company also provides health insurance and recently initiated a wellness program. The company has many employees who have been with the East Jordan Iron Works for more than 25 years.

Charlevoix's boys' cross country team continued its tradition of making a mockery of polls. Going into Saturday's Resse Invitational the Rayders were ranked fourth among Michigan's Class C schools. In Saturday's race the Rayders took first with 55 points. Carson City-Crystal took second with 65 points and Sandusky placed third with 77 points.

Mike Bush led the Rayders, finishing second overall. Matt Dickson placed third. Other Charlevoix runners and their places were: Chris LeBlond, 10; Josh Dhasleer, 16; Jeff McCombs, 24; and James Conlan, 42.

Charlevoix's girls' team placed sixth among 12 schools. Becca Chamberlain placed tenth among all runners.

Rayder girls thrash Boyne City

Charlevoix swarmed and stormed past Boyne City 83-48 in girls' basketball play Thursday, Oct. 14. The Rayder press gave the visiting Ramblers fits all night long.

In the first quarter the Rayders failed to score until nearly two minutes into the game. But in the remainder of the quarter they picked up 23 points establishing a ten-point lead entering the second quarter.

The second quarter was more of the same. Boyne City attempted to break the press with long passes. It didn't work. Rayder junior Liz Grunch and sophomore Liz Kelly were anticipating and picking off passes. In addition to strong defense, Kelly, who played one of her best games of the season, also had a double-double with 11 points and 11 rebounds. Several of the rebounds and points were of the "garbage" variety. In basketball vernacular garbage rebounds and points are those which aren't necessarily pretty, but result from a player hanging around the basket, bumping into other players, working hard, picking up the ball when it's free and tossing follow-up shots into the basket. Grunch finished the game with seven assists. Two of them came in the second quarter on crisp passes to Becky Bragg who was lurking under the basket.

Although Boyne City rallied early in the second quarter and at one time got within eight points of the Rayders, the latter part of the quarter was dominated by Charlevoix and by halftime the lead was up to 16 at 43-27.

In the third quarter Charlevoix outscored Boyne City 25-12. Several of the Rayder baskets were off turnovers. Curiously, Boyne City had a difficult time even getting the ball in bounds following Rayder baskets. Bragg was guarding the in-bounds passer and on the evening either blocked and stole or at least deflected at least half a dozen in-bounds passes. That rarely happens on inbounds passes following baskets because the person taking the ball inbounds is allowed to run the baseline or at the very least step back from the defender. For some reason the Boyne City players didn't do that. So Bragg made their lives miserable.

When Boyne City was fortunate enough to get the ball in play, the player catching the pass was beset upon by Kelly and Jill Dreyer. If the player was able to pass before one of those two swiped the ball, Grunch stepped in and took the pass.

By the end of the third quarter Charlevoix led by 29 at 68-39. The fourth quarter was the lowest scoring quarter of the night and the final score ended up at 83-48.

Individually, Grunch led the Rayders in scoring with 21 points. Bragg had 18 points and Jamie Doan discretely scored 13 points.

Charlevoix won the junior varsity game 54-31.

Football team loses in an ugly way 60-7

A series of catastrophes in the fourth quarter turned an ugly game into a hideous game and a 60-7 loss for Charlevoix's varsity football team at Petoskey Friday night.

In a four-minute stretch of the fourth quarter Charlevoix fumbled twice and had a snap on a punt go away. And it's not as though things were going well for the Rayders until then. When that sequence began, Charlevoix was trailing 34-7 and had lost starting fullback David Skeel to a season ending knee injury.

Petoskey rolled up 445 yards in total offense.

Individually for Charlevoix Jess completed 10 of 18 passes for 151 yards. Trevor Williams caught three passes for 86 yards. Bryan Jaroma was the Rayders' leading rusher, carrying the ball five times for 50 yards. Defensively, Gregg Holmes and Keith Parish each had six tackles.

This Friday evening Charlevoix will host league leading Traverse City St. Francis.

Liz Kelly (34) spent a lot of time crashing into people and falling on the floor during Charlevoix's 83-48 win over Boyne City. Kelly's willingness to do the tough work in the trenches paid off with 11 points and 11 rebounds.

Last week's high school games were tough to call

The winner of last week's Charlevoix Courier Football contest was a repeat winner. Mike Webb of Charlevoix had a glistening 9-1 record and won a free oil change at Pat McKeown's Dodge City. The only game Webb missed was the Charlevoix at Petoskey game. Webb picked Charlevoix and Petoskey ended up winning 60-7. Note that Webb's son, Brandon, does happen to start at halfback and safety for the Raiders. Might that have had at least some miniscule effect on his pick? Who knows? Perhaps his pick in this week's Traverse City St. Francis at Charlevoix game will offer some additional insight.

As for the Courier selections last week, we went 7-3. The high school games were not kind. In addition to Charlevoix, St. Ignace and Boyne City were supposed to win. They didn't. The 7-3 mark in last week's contest leaves us at 25-13 on the season. Not bad, but not stellar either. But that doesn't mean this week's picks won't be perfect. And here they are:

Traverse City St. Francis at Charlevoix. Last week's game? This week's game? The less said, the better. Pick Traverse City-St. Francis.

Boyer City at Rogers City. After losing to St. Francis last week, if Boyer City has any character, they should show up at this game with an attitude. Pick Boyer City.

East Jordan at Harbor Springs. East Jordan's a pretty good team. Harbor Springs? They need work. Lots of it. Pick East Jordan.

Illinois at Michigan. This is a game which would be a tempting pick for an upset. But Michigan already was upset just a couple of weeks ago. Don't be surprised to see Wheatley go for 200. Pick Michigan.

Iowa at Michigan State. Michigan State is for real. Their offensive line is awesome and they should have beat Ohio State. Pick Michigan State.

Syracuse at Miami. Can you believe there were preseason polls that had Syracuse ranked in the top five? Get real. When they play Miami, the Orangemen are going to see just how unpleasant reality can be. Pick Miami.

Detroit at L.A. Rams. A match-up between two of the most inconsistent teams in the league. But Detroit has now not only settled on a quarterback, they've decided to let him throw to the wide receivers such as Herman Moore. Let's hope they try something new and go to a balanced offense for more than one week in a row. Pick Detroit.

Pittsburgh at Cleveland. Fans of tough defense and tightly wound coaches should love this game. Testaverde had a big game against Cincinnati last week which, given history of inconsistency and big game flops, probably means he's in for a dud this week. Pick Pittsburgh.

Buffalo at New York Jets. This is a toss up. Call it on a whim. Pick Buffalo.

Minnesota at Chicago. Chicago beat Philadelphia recently, but the Eagles aren't flying any more since Cunningham got grounded. Meanwhile, Cunningham's old back-up, Jim McMahon is still awaiting this year's injury. Pick Minnesota.

Report says school is not the source of contamination

By L. Scott Swanson

According to a report based on a review of 16,000 pages of information, the Charlevoix Middle School is not the source of groundwater contamination which required construction of a new city water plant in the mid 1980s. The school system recently forwarded the report to the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) and Michigan Attorney General's office, and asked the state to drop a demand for $444,000 in compensation from the school system.

In late June the state filed a demand for payment of $444,311.56 from the school district as compensation for state expenses incurred in investigating Charlevoix groundwater contamination and constructing a new municipal water treatment plant. The investigation began in 1982 and the DNR eventually concluded that the source of the contamination was the Charlevoix Middle School.

"I think it says clearly... 'Hey, we're not guilty.'"

Charlevoix School superintendent Dr. Roberta Jackson commenting on a groundwater contamination report forwarded to the State.

The school system responded to the demand by hiring John W. Voelpel an environmental attorney from Detroit and Braithwaite Consultants, Inc. (BCI) an environmental geology firm based in Ann Arbor. Between June and October

Voelpel and BCI reviewed more than 16,000 pages of information from the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and DNR regarding the groundwater contamination in Charlevoix. Following the review BCI issued a 39-page report with three main conclusions:

1. Groundwater flowing beneath the Middle School flows to the north-northeast, not to the northwest as the DNR concluded. Consequently, even if there had been a toxic release at the middle school site, it wouldn't have traveled toward the municipal well.

2. A 1982 test at a middle school monitoring well found no TCE contamination. Contamination at the middle school site was not found until after contamination was found in the municipal well.

3. Soil samples, soil gas surveys and hand-held detection equipment have never detected any evidence of a toxic release point at the middle school site.

AHEAD LINES

Daylight savings begins this weekend

This is the weekend: Daylight savings time will go into effect Sunday at 2 a.m. People should turn their clocks back one hour. Even though daylight savings doesn't officially begin until 2 a.m., chances are nobody will hold it against you if, rather than staying up late, you set your clocks back prior to going to bed Saturday night.

The other thing you might want to do is coordinate the clock turning among members of the household. One, and only one, member of the household should set the clocks back. If more than one person sets all the clocks back, you can end up saving too much daylight and running a bit slow in relation to the rest of the world.

Timms: I believe I can better serve the needs of the city taxpayers and not squander tax dollars.

Hoffman: The affairs of the City are serious business and need to be conducted as such. Councilmembers should be knowledgeable about business practices, and able to conduct City business in an objective, professional manner, under the guidelines set down by the Charter and Code, weighing the wishes of the general population, and evaluating the future impact of the decision. I believe that I have proven my ability to function in this capacity and would be honored to continue to serve the City.

We also need to keep close tabs on the annual budget, making provisions for continuing our high level of service, but at a cost that is affordable.

2. What are some specific challenges you see the council facing in the next two years and how do you feel these challenges should be handled?

Timms: Funding necessary services without raising taxes or utility rates.

Keeping City government to a minimum rather than letting it get out of hand. The City will have to self-sufficient because Federal and State grants and subsidies will not exist.

Hoffman: I believe the primary focus of the City, and the Council, should be to take whatever steps are necessary to insure a healthy business community so that there are jobs today and tomorrow. I have been an active member of the Industrial Development Committee, whose goal is to retain existing industry and attract new industry.

An issue which goes hand in hand with retaining and attracting industry (jobs) is housing. I believe the City needs to become proactive in planning to provide the opportunity for "affordable housing." I would like to see the City seek out and secure whatever financial assistance is available to private citizens and public enterprises to make progress in this area. Expansion of Pine River Place, our senior housing complex, would be a significant step in this direction.

3. The dismissal of four firemen this past spring caused controversy, a lawsuit, frequent public comment and played a role in a recall election. How do you feel about the way the situation was handled at both the city administrative and council levels?

Timms: The responsibility for the city fire department fiasco should be laid at the city manager's feet, where it belongs! Mr. Wiesner is the cause of the turmoil and dissension in the city fire department. The city council doesn't have the guts to do anything about it!

Hoffman: My feelings regarding this issue are a matter of public record. This was a personnel matter and personnel matters are not under the jurisdiction of Council. My personal belief is that all employees have to respect and abide by the decisions of their superiors. Employees who do not respect the authority of superiors create disharmony within a department and ultimately lead to destruction of morale and team spirit. I supported the actions of staff at the time of the incident, and that support has not changed.

4. Some council members have said they favor a change in city administrators while others have supported keeping the present city administrators. What is your position?

Timms: Mr. Wiesner has helped the city progress in many ways. But his inability to compromise and admit he is not always right is something I cannot overlook. I feel the City of Charlevoix would better served by a change of city managers.

Hoffman: To be effective, the people who make up the City "Staff" must have the respect and confidence of the citizens and Council. Charlevoix is fortunate to have the caliber of staff we currently employ. Their education, training, and experience have been invaluable in bringing Charlevoix to be the "Beautiful" place we all enjoy. This has been done, for the most part, on a pay as you go basis through the infrastructure millage, with no special assessments to private property owners. This method of funding provides the most effective use of tax dollars since all of the dollars spent go toward purchases, not financing costs. I respect the abilities and those who collectively are known as "staff" and have confidence that they will continue to do a good job for the City.

5. For the past several months, the "Public Comments" section of the city council agenda has frequently been lengthy. In response, the "Public Comments" agenda item has been moved from the beginning to the end of the agenda. What are your feelings on the role of "Public Comments" at council meetings and the decision to change the location of the item on the agenda?

Timms: The "Public Comments" section of City Council meetings is a very important part of the Democratic Process. To relegate Public Comments to the very last of the meeting is to say to the voters and taxpayers, "your input is not important. Some in city hall would like to do away with public input altogether! If elected, I will work to put Public Comments either at the first of the meeting or after Public Hearings."

Hoffman: When properly used, public comment is an important source of input for government officials and decision making bodies. I believe that a citizen with a concern or opinion has the right to be heard publicly. The Public Comment portion of the Charlevoix Council agenda is too often consumed with issues which have little or no public value. Placing this item at the end of the meeting allows those parties who have come before Council on business matters to conduct their business in a timely manner. The mayor's decision to move this item to the end of the agenda should improve the efficiency of the meetings.

6. The City of Charlevoix and Hayes Township recently worked out a disagreement concerning fire and ambulance protection. How do you feel about the city's relationship with surrounding townships? And are there any specific matters you feel should be addressed in the near future?

Timms: The "disagreement" with Hayes Township is the fault of Mr. Wiesner not consulting with the City Council before making an off-hand statement to the Hayes Township board of take this or else! I feel the City lost valuable income for the fire and ambulance departments. Without the income for the fire department from Hayes Township the city should reduce the number of full time firemen by one.

Hoffman: I am very pleased that the City and Hayes Township have worked out an agreement regarding ambulance coverage in the Township. I feel that we all need to work together for the common benefit of all of our "neighbors." Services can

by EDITH GILBERT

What would you say if I told you that more than $5 Million Dollars was raised in two weekend sales at the first Peruvian Auction of Llamas and Alpacas on Maplewood Farms this month. More than 500 buyers came to Charlevoix from Australia, New Zealand, the Netherlands, Canada and a dozen states to bid on these aristocratic, docile creatures.

As I strolled under the 60' x 12' tent on that blustery, windy Saturday, the chubby auctioneer chanted, "S80,000 once, going twice, sold!" That was the highest price for a male llama on this day.

The excitement among the buyers of 54 alpacas (they are cousins to the llamas and both are members of the camel family) is because these prized animals were raised in Peru and are the primary industry in this South American country. Here they are considered a national treasure, and this group is the first allowed to leave Peru and the first to be made available in the United States in 150 years. The animals were quarantined in Key West, Florida for 90 days, then they were loaded on trucks and brought up north. There are only 3,500 alpacas in the U.S. and their fur is most valuable to the textile industry. Alpaca wool is seven times warmer than sheep's wool and three times stronger.

OK. So the alpacas provide us with wool, but of what earthly use is a llama? According to the Vickers, who manage Maplewood Farm, a llama is a marvelous pet. They, too, give us wool. They are great pack animals and people use them in the Rockies when they go back packing. They are used on golf courses to carry bags. They guard sheep. They pull carts and some people ride them.

In addition, Nel Vickers says, "They are very intelligent, easy to train, very clean and inexpensive to feed. They live on grass and grain and only require 5 acres of land per llama."

I asked Nel how they first became interested in llamas and why they chose Charlevoix to start their breeding farm.

"My husband, Jim, is a veterinarian. He treated llamas in several zoos around Chicago. We also used to race in the Mackinac/Chicago sailboat races every year and we visited this area as sailors originally. We started our breeding farm here six years ago and we love the area. The local people, our friends and neighbors, have become very important to us, especially during these auctions. They helped us unload 426 animals that arrived in six trucks, and they helped us shampoo and groom the animals. They provide hauling services. Sheriff Lasater saw to it there was no traffic jam. We are very grateful for all the help we've had."

The local businesses, such as motels, restaurants and shops are also grateful for the unexpected flood of visitors from all over the world. Given the success of the first auction, chances are you'll hear more about the Vickers family, Jim, Nel and daughter Katie, who ran the office prior and during the auction. In the meantime, anyone driving along the Boyne City Road past Maplewood Farm can still take pleasure in the pastoral scene of a herd of lovely llamas grazing peacefully by the side of the road.

Not all calls are wanted

Apparently phone solicitors have been working the area quite heavily in recent months. Some of these people claim to be from a police agency soliciting funds for disadvantaged children. Others claim to be selling light bulbs to raise funds for handicapped people. Another group is pushing magazine subscriptions.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department recently issued a press release under the heading "Guarding Against Questionable Solicitations from Organizations Allegedly Representing Local Law Enforcement in Charlevoix County." According to the press release, the sheriff's department receives on average a call a week from Charlevoix County citizens who have been contacted by someone soliciting funds for the benefit of local law enforcement. This despite the fact that the sheriff's department doesn't support any agency which does phone solicitation.

When the subject of the calls came up during a conversation at the Courier office one morning, it turned out that three out of four Courier staff members had received the police agency call and two of four received the light bulb and magazine calls.

The callers were misleading and in some cases downright pushy. On the police caller, the caller said he was "confirming" our household's support for the cause. The implication is that either your spouse or you have previously supported the cause or agreed to support the cause. That was simply not true.

The magazine caller also took an interesting approach. The caller professed a desire to send five magazines to the household for free. When pressed hard, she finally said that there would be a monthly handling charge of something like $10 per month. If you do the math, a handling charge of $10 per month turns out to be more than the cost of a normal magazine subscription.

There are a lot of different policies and guidelines for dealing with unwanted telephone solicitations. Following are some suggestions you may wish to consider:

1. Don't agree to buy anything over the phone. If the solicitor is offering something you feel you may be interested in, tell him to mail you information which you will review at your convenience.
2. Don't give the solicitor any more information than necessary. You might wish to provide your mailing address, but you certainly don't want to tell them anything else such as credit card numbers or work schedule.
3. Don't feel a need to be polite and stay on the phone if you're not interested in what the solicitor has to offer. Tell them you're not interested and say "Good Bye." Then hang up immediately. The decision as to when the conversation should end is yours. You are under no legal or moral obligation to allow phone solicitors to waste your time.

A copy of the report and a cover letter from Voelpel were hand-delivered to the state agencies Oct. 14. In the cover letter, Voelpel cites the report and says the DNR Demand letter for payment from the school "can only be characterized as resulting from an incomplete and inaccurate review of available historical data and a failure to follow accepted hydrogeological principles. In addition, a number of legal flaws in the State's demand prevent recovery and any imposition of responsibility for future monitoring. Accordingly, CPS (Charlevoix Public Schools) denies any liability for the State's response costs at the Site and declines to pay the sum demand in the Demand Letter or to enter into any order." In concluding the cover letter, Voelpel says, "CPS believes that a rational reconsideration of this matter must result in the State dropping its demand in its entirety."

School superintendent Dr. Robert Jackson said the school's charge to BCI was to let the school know where they were at - if the school should write a check or fight. Of the report she said, "I think it says clearly... Hey, we're not guilty."

She said that now for the time being the ball is the DNR and Attorney General's court. The school has asked for the complaint to be dropped, but so far has received no response.

Chris DeWitt from the Attorney General's office said in a phone conversation with the Courier that they have received the report and are in the process of reviewing it. As for the school's request that the complaint be dropped, DeWitt said, "I'm not sure whether that's going to happen or not." He said there would be some response from the state to what the school has proposed.

School Business Manager Rich Kelly said that through the end of August, the school board had approved bills from Voelpel and BCI totaling $26,544.66. Kelly said that will not be the entire bill.

New officer joins City police

By Laurie Lounsbury

You can take a northern Michigan boy out of the country, but chances are good he will come back. Charlevoix's new police officer Jim Schlappi couldn't stay away from northern Michigan. He willingly left behind the sunny climes of Phoenix, Arizona to return to his native turf in Michigan. The Petoskey native joined the Charlevoix police force at the end of this summer.

Schlappi put some miles on himself from the time he left Petoskey at the age of five until the time he returned in 1990. He lived in Detroit before his family went west to Phoenix. After graduating from high school in Phoenix, Schlappi spent four years in the Army. When his tour ended he came back to Petoskey, where he attended North Central Michigan College and received an associate's degree in criminal justice. Last May he got his degree from the Northwest Michigan Police Academy.

Schlappi spent two and a half years on the Petoskey police force as a reserve officer. He worked the waterfront beat in Petoskey in the summer. "I was there to keep kids under control and to let them know someone was watching them," Schlappi said. He developed a rapport with the teens and young adults who he came across on a regular basis. He thinks that will be helpful when he takes his turn as the school liaison officer.

Schlappi's experience with the Charlevoix police has been a quiet one so far. He missed out on the summer season, and currently finds himself doing mostly traffic work. He'd like to get more experience handling complaints. Complaints don't come streaming into the police department this time of year.

Schlappi is getting to know some of the townfolk and some of the town wildlife as he makes his rounds. He's familiar with an eight point buck he often sees on the north side of town near Meech Street.

During the winter months Schlappi will be working for the police department on a part time basis. He has his Emergency Medical Training certificate and occasionally fills in for other EMTs in Charlevoix.

Schlappi is also a scuba diver. He was on the Emmet County dive team when he lived in Petoskey.

Schlappi describes himself as a private person. "I kind of like being able to go places where people don't know who I am - but that's changing," Schlappi said. In a town like Charlevoix, that sort of anonymity will be short lived.

Schlappi hopes that his part time position with the Charlevoix force will eventually grow into a full time job. "I was very lucky to get a job here," Schlappi said. "By working part time, I feel like I'm paying my dues here, and everybody's got to pay their dues."

Barb Scully received the official "Queen Sap" bucket upon being installed as the new president of the Charlevoix Kiwanis Club.

Charlevoix Kiwanis Club President Merle Vandenberg hands over the gavel to the club's 60th president, Barb Scully.

Barbara Scully was recently installed as the 60th president of the Kiwanis Club of Charlevoix.

Other officers and directors who took office at the same time were: President-elect John Lachman, Vice-president Michael Paliwoda, past president Merle Vandenberg, secretary treasurer Herbert Dishong, assistant treasurer Kenneth Weller and secretary emeritus Ralph Hamilton. Directors for the fiscal year are Edward Buday, John Kurtz, Richard Krueger, Robert Rajewski, Harold Pietz, Judy Petkewicz and Steven Guhrke.

Kiwanis of Charlevoix came into existence December 4, 1934 at the old Charlevoix Hotel that stood where east park is now located. The 25 charter members are all deceased. Oscar North was the first president and Dr. Frank Wilkinson Vice-president. Dr. Wilkenson is attributed with coining the phrase "Charlevoix the Beautiful". Unfortunately he and his wife were killed in an accident near Kalamazoo, and Robert Bridge became vice-president and later the second president.

Kiwanis' main fund raising effort is the maple syrup sales, a project started by Edward Shanahan in 1965. The sugar house is located on Carson Avenue. Other fund raising efforts are the kielbasa stands at local festivals. Prior to these, Kiwanis conducted so-called "white elephant sales."

Kiwanis major emphasis is "under privileged children - priority one" and the past fiscal year the club contributed $6,727.95 to local institutions. The major portion went to the teen center, the Herman Meyer Project at the Northern Michigan Hospitals and Camp Daggett campers. In all 22 organizations have benefited from funds raised by Kiwanis.

During the existence of the club more than $250,000 has been raised for the benefit of the local area.

All net proceeds collected must be returned to local institutions; no money is used for club operations.

Big Rock makes plans for the future

By Laurie Lounsbury

The constant, steady drone of the massive turbine engine at Big Rock Nuclear Power Plant will be silenced no later than May 31 in the year 2000, when the plant's nuclear license expires. Consumers Power Company is working on a plan now that might breathe life back into the old turbine after Big Rock ceases to generate nuclear power. "If there is an economic benefit, then Big Rock will be repowered," reported Tim Petrosky, Public Relations Director at Big Rock.

Converting Big Rock into a plant that generates power from a different source of energy is not simply a matter of just deciding to do it and then proceeding with the plan. De-regulation in the utilities industry has changed that. Consumer's Power will have to bid for the opportunity to have a generation plant in northern Michigan. The Michigan Public Service Commission will review any bids and decide whether or not to let Consumer's Power build a new generation plant at the Big Rock site. "We have several things working in our favor," Petrosky said. "Generation plants to make electricity are few and far between in northern Michigan. There has been a lot of growth in northern Michigan, most of it on the west side of the state. We have support in Petoskey and Charlevoix. And we can probably use the existing turbine in the new plant, which will save a lot of money," he explained.

Consumer's Power has established a decommissioning team of 12 people at Big Rock. The team will study the best way to re-power.

Big Rock. The current choice of fuel is natural gas, Petrosky said, because it is environmentally benign and the cost is attractive. The team will submit a plan to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission by the end of next year.

At this point in the planning stage, Consumer's Power is considering a 200 to 300 megawatt plant. Big Rock is generating 67 megawatts now, which provides power for 38,000 citizens. The increased size in generation will not translate to increased numbers of jobs at the new plant. Because nuclear power plants have so many safety features and regulations, it requires a lot more employees than a conventional power plant. Big Rock currently employs 200 people. The new plant would probably employ half as many at most. The decommissioning plan will also include a human resources decommissioning plan. "We would hope that everyone who wanted a job would have one," Petrosky said. He added that jobs for present employees may be elsewhere in the company, not necessarily in this area.

While the new plant would provide fewer jobs in the area, the $200 to $300 million dollar project would provide Charlevoix County with a great deal of additional tax revenue.

The timetable for a new plant depends on how long the nuclear plant continues to run. "We will run until the end of our license as long as we can do it safely," Petrosky said. No one forces any potential problems that could require an early shut down, but that can't be predicted. In 1991 a bolt was found during a routine vacuuming after a scheduled refueling. The plant had to shut down for 168 days to fix the problem. If that type of situation occurred again, the company may decide it's not cost-effective to shut down and restart the nuclear reactor. After the nuclear plant is shut down, the site will be left alone for about five years to let the reactor and fuel rods cool down. After that, it would take another two to four years to build a new facility.

Regardless of whether or not a new facility is built, the old containment facility will have to be dealt with. According to the law, Consumer's Power may leave the structure as is or they can return it to a green field, as it was when they acquired the property. If they left the containment center as it is, they would have to continue to guard it. "We like to think we're good neighbors, so we'd prefer to return it to a green field," Petrosky said.

Rayders put a scare into unbeaten Elk Rapids

By L. Scott Swanson
Charlevoix's girls' basketball team gave undefeated Elk Rapids a scare before losing 55-53 last Thursday evening. Elk Rapids lost just once last season and has a perfect record this year, but trailed the Rayders 51-50 with just 46 seconds left in the game.

The Rayders opened the game poorly. Elk Rapids employed a half court trap defense which initially gave the Rayders fits and caused several turnovers. Adding to Charlevoix's first quarter woes was Elk Rapids' offensive rebounding which led to baskets on second and third shots. The first quarter closed with Charlevoix trailing 21-11.

In the second quarter Charlevoix made some adjustments which quickly paid dividends. In the first quarter Charlevoix's smaller guards had problems when they were double teamed near half court. In the second quarter they did a better job of getting the ball into the hands of Jamie Doan and Liz Grunch either on the wings or more often near the free throw line. Grunch and Doan maintained their composure and responded to double team defensive pressure by making an opportunity of it rather than a catastrophe. They simply held the ball until they found an open teammate. Often, that teammate was senior forward Becky Bragg. Bragg was working the baseline, moving to get open. In the first quarter, her efforts generally went unrewarded due to offensive problems at the top of the key. In the second quarter she received passes from Grunch and Doan. Several of the passes had to be thrown sharply before the defense could adjust. Grunch and Doan demonstrated the poise and physical strength to make the passes while Bragg had the good hands to catch them and a nice shooting touch to promptly deposit the ball in the basket. For the night, Bragg collected 20 points and Grunch finished with six assists.

The Rayder rebounding also improved during the second quarter primarily due to the efforts of Shannon Rowell and Melissa Anderson. Anderson, who is by no means a finesse player, came off the bench and started moving bodies and just generally making the lane a much less pleasant place for Elk Rapids players to operate.

By halftime Charlevoix had trimmed the Elk Rapids' lead to six at 31-25.

With 3:40 left in the third quarter, Anderson hit a shot from the baseline to tie the game at 34. With 3:02 left in the quarter Charlevoix took its first lead 34-32 on a basket by Doan. The Rayders took their biggest lead of the game 41-36 with 1:45 left in the third quarter on another Anderson basket off a nice pass to the baseline from Doan at the high post. Elk Rapids then scored the final two baskets of the quarter which ended with Charlevoix leading 41-40.

The final quarter was a see-saw throughout with both teams trading baskets and freethrows. Neither team led by more than a basket until the final minute. With 35 seconds left Elk Rapids made a basket and a foul shot to go up 53-51. Charlevoix then missed a shot and Elk Rapids scored again with 13 seconds left to go up 55-51. Charlevoix scored its final basket at the buzzer.

Rayders lose to St. Francis 40-33

Going into Friday night's game against Traverse City, St. Francis, things did not look pretty for the Rayder varsity football team. St. Francis was undefeated in league play and considered to be among the toughest Class C teams in the state. Charlevoix, on the other hand, came into the game with a 3-1 record after being beaten by Petoskey 60-7. In terms of common opponents, Charlevoix had been beaten by Boyne City 37-12 while St. Francis had hammered Boyne City 40-0. Looking at it objectively, the thinking had to be that Charlevoix was going to get blasted.

But wait a minute. Not so fast. There was a little matter of character. The Rayders may have gotten pounded last week, but this was another week and getting pounded wasn't something they intended to let become a habit. Charlevoix gave St. Francis all the game they wanted despite ending up losing 40-33. Charlevoix never trailed by more than 14 points and in the final moments of the game closed to within seven at 40-33 and had the ball on the St. Francis 30 yard line before their final drive stalled.

St. Francis scored in the first quarter on a 50 yard punt return and kicked the conversion to take a 7-0 lead. Charlevoix responded with a drive which was completed by a two-yard touchdown run by quarterback Don Jess. Robbie Stradner kicked the extra point to tie the game at seven.

Later in the first quarter, St. Francis scored twice, first on a 34 yard run and later on a five yard run to take a 21-7 lead.

Just prior to halftime, the Rayders cut the lead to 21-13 on a four yard touchdown pass from Jess to Bryan Jaroma.

St. Francis again bumped their lead up to two touchdowns early in the third quarter on a one yard touchdown run. The Rayders promptly responded with a 16 yard touchdown run by Brandon Webb. Stradner kicked the extra point to make the score 28-20.

In the fourth quarter St. Francis scored on a five yard run which Charlevoix answered with a three yard scoring pass from Jess to Jaroma making the score 34-26.

St. Francis concluded its scoring with a 21 yard run. With 1:50 left in the game, Charlevoix scored on a four yard pass from Jess to Duhan. The extra point made the score 40-33.

The Rayders then successfully executed an onside kick which was recovered by Chuck Pop. The Rayders hit a pass to get the ball to the St. Francis 30 yard line, but then the drive fizzled.

Individually, Jess had his best passing night of the season completing 20 of 30 passes for a total of 260 yards. Jaroma carried the ball 13 times for 93 yards and caught four passes for 35 yards. Chris Pair also caught four passes while Josh Watros caught three.

Defensively, Travis Wood had seven tackles while Gregg Holmes and Jess each had six and Keith Parish five.

Cross country team takes second

Mike Bush took first place in leading Charlevoix's boys cross country team to a second place finish in the Class A, B and large C division of the Elk Rapids Invitational Saturday. Bush finished with a time of 15:49, two seconds ahead of a Cadillac runner and seven seconds ahead of Rayder teammate Matt Dickinson.

Despite the first and third place finishes by Bush and Dickinson, Charlevoix, as a team, finished second behind Cadillac. Cadillac totaled 38 points while Charlevoix had 70.

Other Charlevoix places and times were: 27-Josh Dhaseler, 17:04; 29-Jeff McCombs, 17:13; 36-Paul Henne, 17:35 and 39-Scott Campbell, 17:46.

In the girls' Class C-D race Charlevoix's Becca Chamberlain placed second with a time of 20:33. Other places and finishes for Charlevoix were: 29-Lisa Hoadley, 23:49; 33-Katie Thorp, 24:28; 37-Catlie Siwarga, 24:47; 51-Amy Pfeucke, 26:46; 57-Tracey Boyer, 28:35; 60-Betsy Wakula, 29:24.

Grant Meggison (87) catches a pass in the Charlevoix Middle School's intersquad football game this past Thursday.

Dreyer, yes Bill Dreyer, wins Courier football contest

The winner of this past week's contest was none other than Bill Dreyer with a sparkling 9-1 record. The only game Dreyer missed was Buffalo's win over the Jets. He atoned for that by correctly calling the Illinois over Michigan debacle. And you'd better believe he foresaw the thrashing the University of Miami administered to Syracuse.

Dreyer is among the contestants who fax us their entries. This past week the Courier even received a fax entry from Merrit Clark in Reed City. For those of you who wish to fax in your entries, the number is (616) 547-4992.

For winning this past week's competition, Dreyer will receive a free lunch at the Flight Deck.

The Courier picks this past week were 8-2, best of the season. That runs the Courier season record to 33-17. Not bad. Not bad.

Here are this week's picks:

Charlevoix at East Jordan: Prior to last Friday, you probably would have had to pick East Jordan. But despite losing to Traverse City St. Francis, the Rayders showed well and indicated they're a team with some talent and character. But will that character show up again this week? Will Rayder fans see gang tackling on defense and an effective offense? Or will it be back to sloppy tackling and a fumble-fest? For the answers to these and other questions, tune in Friday night.

And beyond those questions, bear in mind East Jordan has playoff hopes and always gets a big thrill out of those rare occasions when they beat Charlevoix. But then how badly would the Rayder team feel about spoiling East Jordan's fun? No doubt they could still live with themselves. Pick - Charlevoix.

Michigan at Wisconsin. Were Illinois, Notre Dame and Michigan State all fluke losses or is Michigan just not that good this year? Michigan and Wisconsin will both be hot after disappointing losses this past week. Wisconsin is a team on the Performing arts students to collect bottles and cans

Charlevoix High School performing arts students may look like overgrown trick or treaters, but actually they will be collecting returnable cans and bottles Saturday evening, October 30, from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. in Charlevoix.

Proceeds from the bottle drive will be used to help pay the expenses of the Performing Arts Teams' numerous competitions and programs, including debate, speech and drama, throughout the coming year.

rise, but Michigan is still Michigan. Pick - Michigan.

Michigan State at Indiana: Michigan State shouldn't have any problems here. Pick - Michigan State.

Georgia at Florida. Neither team is the best in their state, but this is still a good match-up. Pick - Florida. Arizona at UCLA. UCLA has a wide receiver who is a great prospect, but that probably won't be enough to beat Arizona. Pick - Arizona.

Nebraska at Colorado. Apparently they're still playing football in the Big 8 although you don't seem to hear much about them this year. This year Nebraska is the best in a league of anonymity. Pick - Nebraska.

Penn State at Ohio State. This is the marquee college game of the week. Pick - Penn State.

Detroit at Minnesota. Look for Minnesota's defensive line to have a monster game. Pick - Minnesota. Dallas at Philadelphia. A Randleless Philadelphia just isn't too impressive. Pick - Dallas.

New York Jets at New York Giants. The Giants are looking more and more for real while the Jets are looking less and less for real. Pick - Giants.

...Reid and Sitzema seek third ward council seat

the city's Zoning Board of Appeals; co-founder of the Charlevoix Heart Start program; working with Keep Charlevoix Beautiful; chairing a fundraising drive to purchase defibrillators for two Charlevoix ambulances; serving as a certified CPR instructor and initiating programs to certify high school students and middle school aged babysitters in CPR.

Following are the candidates' responses to questions asked by the Courier.

1. Why are you running for a City Council seat?

Sitzema: I feel that the council should work for the people of their ward. The questions that are asked of the City and council should be answered! Even if that question has been answered in the past, I feel that if someone feels they should ask the question, then it is up to the council to answer.

Also, the spending has to slow down. For example, if we were to redo a street, or whatever, we should make sure that everything under that project is in one shape. I'm tired of seeing things being done just to do or because it's been there for a time. I feel that if it's not broken, don't try to fix it.

Yes, maybe I don't really know what's going on in the City, but I would like to help make a difference if I could.

Reid: My decision to run for City Council was prompted by recent turmoil in City Hall and my concern that City Council may lose its focus on the major issues affecting our quality of life. I believe that personality conflicts need to be set aside. The well-being of our community must come first. I feel that I can effectively serve our community.

ty, since I am politically independent and not tied to any faction or group.

2. What are some specific challenges you see the council facing in the next two years and how do you feel these challenges should be handled?

Sitzema: I would really like to see the council work for the people by hearing what they have to say and what they want to have happen. I feel that we should tighten our belts like all of us have had to do. That's the City as a whole! Spending should be cut rather than spending money from two years away. We should work for today.

Reid: I believe the City should continue to provide its fine level of services and civic improvements without increasing taxes. This can be accomplished through more smart budgeting and vigorous pursuit of state and federal grants. The city also needs to diversify its base of employment. I believe, based on my experience in the industrial sector, that a more aggressive marketing approach by the City and Chamber of Commerce would result in additional industrial employment. This will also strengthen our tax base.

3. The dismissal of four firemen this past spring caused controversy, a lawsuit, frequent public comment and played a role in a recall election. How do you feel about the way the situation was handled at both the city administrative and council levels?

Sitzema: I feel that all have to be treated equally. I think that the council should have done the investigating and they should take the action. As I have said, please let the people be heard. The City lets the people pay their taxes.

...first ward candidates express their views

be expensive to provide. It makes sense that governmental units who are geographically connected should share as many services as possible to keep the cost of providing those services affordable. That cost needs to be borne equitably by all of those who depend on the service.

7. Changes by the State in regard to school finance have nullified an agreement between the city, school and county to have the city's Downtown Development Authority (DDA) come to an end in 1998. How long do you feel the DDA and the tax increment funding system used to finance it should be allowed to continue?

Timms: The State legislature has not decided anything on school finance reform and I will not second guess as to what will happen. I believe 1998 is a good cutoff date.

Hoffman: Since its inception in the early '80s the DDA has done much to improve the quality of the face of downtown. These public improvements have led many private owners to make significant improvements to their properties. Our downtown is healthy and growing, which creates jobs, adds to our tourist economy and improves the quality of all of our lives. The restructuring of school finance has also led to a reduction in the amount of funds which will be collected by the DDA, which means that projects which are in progress will take longer to be completely funded. The DDA has a Council approved list of objectives. Considering the positive changes it has brought to our community, I would favor leaving the DDA in place until these objectives have been accomplished.

Reid: The information which was so widely publicized in this matter seems to be more speculation and hearsay than fact. I am unwilling to engage in such speculation. I intend to focus my efforts on the future of our wonderful community.

4. Some council members have said they favor a change in city administrators while others have supported keeping the present city administrators. What is your position?

Sitzema: I feel that if they are doing their job and they are worth keeping, then so be it. I feel that one person cannot do it alone. And it is much better if you can work with others in a good environment. I also feel that the people should feel like they can call the city and have their questions or concerns answered.

Reid: I look forward to the opportunity to work with our city administrators. I believe my political independence will allow me to form a fair and objective opinion of their performance. I will, as in all my business dealings, expect and demand the highest degree of professionalism.

5. For the past several months, the "Public Comments" section of the city council agenda has frequently been lengthy. In response, the "Public Comments" agenda item has been moved from the be-

Signs of the season

It's probably safe to say that the color season blew right by us last week. If you didn't get out on a color tour yet, don't bother. (Top right) Sixty mile an hour winds stripped the autumn leaves from the trees in a big hurry, blanketing lawns and paving streets in crimson and gold. (Middle right) The wind also wreaked havoc with the trees and power lines in town. A large old tree on Dixon lost half of itself to the wind. (Lower right) Rosemary Horton's 20 year old willow was uprooted by the wind.

(Below) This scarecrow managed to keep his head during the high winds while others were losing theirs, but he did suffer a loss of his hat and scarf.

gining to the end of the agenda. What are your feelings on the role of "Public Comments" at council meetings and the decision to change the location of the item on the agenda?

Sitzema: I feel that the City should have had a "Public Hearing" like they would have had if you or I wanted something from the City. I think the public opinion is very important to the city. If the council would at least give ten minutes to the people and then close to finish the meeting that would be fine. That would let the council know what's going on. Also, I feel when council goes into closed session they should do that after all business has been taken care of. The people who attend have just as many rights as the people who are there asking for the hearings. Public Hearings belong at the top of the agenda. And that goes for all boards. Again, it worked for a long time. Where did it go so wrong?

Reid: This is not an unusual procedure as many government bodies set public comments at the end of the agenda. Public comments related to agenda items are and should be addressed at the time the agenda items are up for discussion. In this way, Council can conduct its business in an orderly manner and the public can still air their views on general matters.

6. The City of Charlevoix and Hayes Township recently worked out a disagreement concerning fire and ambulance protection. How do you feel about the city's relationship with surrounding townships? And are there any specific matters you feel should be addressed in the near future?

Sitzema: I hope that we can work together. We should not have had this happen either, but it did. Like I said, if it's not broken, don't fix it. It's too late, but let's hope we learned from what we did.

Reid: I believe that people in Northern Michigan have always shown care and concern for their neighbors. The City, likewise, should act as a good neighbor with the surrounding Townships. The Townships, must however, be prepared and willing to pay their fair share for City services.

7. Changes by the State in regard to school finance have nullified an agreement between the city, school and county to have the city's Downtown Development Authority (DDA) come to an end in 1998. How long do you feel the DDA and the tax increment funding system used to finance it should be allowed to continue?

Sitzema: As I stated earlier, we all must buckle down in our spending. I'd hope that our city should run on its tax dollars, or that means that we are really over spending. The sooner it ends the more we have to learn to do with less!

Reid: The DDA has helped the downtown of Charlevoix to become the envy of all Northern Michigan. This is the reason that Petoskey and East Jordan wish to form their own DDAs. The DDA must, however, closely order the priority of its projects, so that the important projects can be completed and the DDA can be phased out.

Teachers reiterate complaints at school board meeting

By Laurie Lounsbury

Charlevoix teachers and support staff made another show of solidarity at the last Board of Education meeting. About 40 school faculty members attended the meeting while Stan Martin, president of the Charlevoix chapter of the MEA, read a prepared statement to the board. His statement complained that teachers are less able to do their jobs well when they are worrying about working without a contract. "Teachers should not be diverted from their efforts to focus full energy and attention on the educational needs of our students.... One deterrent to this objective is the disappointing progress in negotiations and the impact an unsettled contract has on the ability of all school personnel to work together as a cohesive unit to focus our combined attention on our students," Martin said.

Martin also quoted the Book of Mark, saying, "A house divided cannot stand. Surely the wisdom of this message cannot be denied, nor can its implication to our school system be ignored."

Martin went on to say that in the spirit of cooperation and solidarity with the board, the teachers and staff wanted to share the following:

1. The teachers and support staff are not asking for "a big pay increase" and are negotiating in good faith towards a fair and equitable settlement.

2. The regrettable slow pace of negotiations is not the fault of the board or the employees.

3. The teachers asked for help from an outside negotiator only after being informed that a Lansing lawyer had been hired by the board.

When Martin finished reading his statement, board president Scott Beatty said that he was sorry to hear the work "divisive" being used. "I hadn't heard that word before, and I'm sorry to hear it here. I believe we've been having ongoing

Big Rock to continue storing nuclear waste in spent fuel pool at least for next two years

By Laurie Lounsbury

Everyone knows there is nuclear waste lurking somewhere out at the Big Rock Nuclear Power Plant. But like a tornado that hovers somewhere just beyond the horizon, most people fear nuclear waste, feel threatened by nuclear waste, yet never see it or fully comprehend it. The nuclear waste at Big Rock seems far less threatening when the nature of it is better understood.

Nuclear waste at Big Rock falls into two different levels. High level waste consists of spent fuel rods from the nuclear reactor. Low level waste consists of everything else, including used protective gloves and paper towels. Both types of waste are stored at Big Rock.

Fuel rods used to power the nuclear reactor are filled with uranium. When the energy in the rods is no longer sufficient to power the reactor, the old rods are removed and replaced with new rods. The old, spent fuel rods still generate a tremendous amount of energy in the form of residual heat. They will continue to give off radioactive, residual heat for thousands of years, which is why the proper storage of spent fuel rods is such a concern to the public. The rods are stacked vertically in a spent fuel pool containing cooled and filtered water - it looks innocuously similar to an indoor swimming pool. The pool is inside the containment center at Big Rock. The spent fuel pool has been storing used fuel rods since the plant's inception. Currently, the spent fuel pool has enough room in it to accommodate a full load of fuel rods from the reactor. In the event that the reactor needs to be shut down for repairs for maintenance as it was in 1991, the reactor's fuel rods could be completely off-loaded into the spent fuel pool. By the year 1996, that will change. Spent fuel rods will occupy the majority of storage space in the spent fuel pool, leaving an inadequate amount of space for the total number of rods in the reactor. This means that any problem requiring a reactor shut down in or after the year 1996 will force Consumer's Power to make one of two decisions: They can either shut the reactor down permanently and leave the fuel rods in the reactor, or they can add dry cask storage to the facility. Dry cask storage seems to meet with greater resistance from the public, primarily because the casks are stored outside in public view. The decision to use dry cask storage is one that Consumer's Power may not have to make. Public Relations Director Tim Petrosky said that the decision will be made only if an unforeseen problem occurs, and the decision will be based on economic factors at the time.

Assuming all goes well until the year 2,000, Big Rock will store its own nuclear waste on site - but then what? Petrosky reported that a federal nuclear waste repository is scheduled to open in 1998. A possible site for the repository is Yucca Mountain, Nevada. The Department of Energy will have the responsibility to remove nuclear waste from the 109 nuclear plants around the country. "The technology is available now to store nuclear waste," Petrosky said. The technology, according to Petrosky, allows for safe storage of nuclear waste for 10,000 years to come. "Everything in the nuclear industry is overengineered for maximum safety, no matter what happens," Petrosky said. Engineers of the federal repository have taken into consideration possible earthquakes, floods,

Deer appreciate gardens this time of year

These deer did a little trick or treating of their own last week. The treat for them was eating the shrubbery around a home on Waller Road. The trick is for the homeowner to figure out a way to protect their flora from the fauna.

Liaison officer meets with school students

By Laurie Lounsbury

Students in Terry Smith's high school English class eyed police officer Gerard Doan with a mixture of suspicion and respect. Doan was sitting on a desk top, dressed casually in jeans, argyle socks and a plaid shirt. He didn't look like a law enforcement officer that day - he didn't act much like one either. He was visiting the classroom as the new school liaison officer, answering questions and getting to know the students on a personal level. It didn't take long for the conversations to get personal. Students asked Doan if he'd ever busted a drug dealer, if he'd ever seen a shooting and if he'd ever been in trouble as a juvenile. They also asked the obvious: "You eat doughnuts, man?" One student asked: Doan fielded questions with straightforward answers, laying the groundwork for a greater rapport with the students. Weeks, months, or years from now, that rapport could make a difference in a young adult's life.

The concept of a school liaison officer was brought to Charlevoix by City Police Chief Dennis Halverson. Halverson served as the school liaison officer in Traverse City several years ago. Halverson explained the concept of a school liaison officer as a way for policemen to get involved with a segment of the community in a positive way. It makes police officers more approachable to young adults. "Being a school liaison officer was probably the funnest, most rewarding job of the many jobs I've had," Halverson said.

Doan is the first of four police officers to spend nine weeks as school liaison officer. The liaison officers will spend time in each of the three school buildings. High school students pose the biggest challenge for Doan. "It's the kids' turf," Doan said of the high schoolers. Doan's goal with the high schoolers is to build a positive relationship with them and to be perceived in a non-threatening way. "It's going to take a long time for the kids to accept that," he acknowledged.

The students in Terry Smith's class were warming up to Doan by the end of the class session. Student Dan Juarez said he thinks the new school liaison officer will be accepted by the students in time. "It would be better if there was just one officer. That way you get to know them," Juarez said. Student Jenny Seese agreed. "There should be one officer for as long as they do the program," she said.

Funding for the school liaison officer was shared equally by the school district and the police department. The police department got most of their share of the funds from a private donor.

RIF encourages children to read

Editor,

Recently, U.S. Secretary of Education, Richard W. Riley, delivered yet another wake-up call to the American public about the sorry state of children's literacy. He reported that, according to a new nationwide study ("1992 Reading Report Card for the Nation and states"), more than two thirds of American's fourth, eighth, and twelfth graders haven't even attained the basic reading levels for their grades. And, he was quick to point out that "basic isn't good enough anymore."

In reporting on their reading habits and practices, the report notes: "At all three grades (4th, 8th, and 12th) students who reported reading more frequently for fun on their own time had higher average reading proficiency than those who reported reading less frequently."

Getting children to read for the fun of it on their own time is what Reading is Fundamental has been doing since 1966. RIF, Inc. of Charlevoix is one of over 15,000 locations across the nation where young people benefit from the RIF program.

As RIF volunteers, we are part of a grassroots movement to put books directly into children's hands and homes - more than 130 million to date - at no cost to them or their families. Books can make a world of difference to the many young people in our country who are growing up in homes that do not value books and reading.

We are all increasingly aware of the literacy challenges that confront our nation - and each of us as members of this society. Through our involvement with RIF, we look forward to helping more than three million children each year to discover the joy of growing up to be readers. We urge your readers to join us in this rewarding - and extremely vital - work.

Here are some things they can do:

- +Read to the children in their lives - just ten minutes a day can make a big difference.
- +Let their children see them reading, talk to them about reading and books.
- +Take them to the library and let them choose books that interest them.
- +Control what and how much television they watch.
- +Volunteer to read to children at homeless shelters, in hospitals, in RIF projects, at schools, and other places.

Our children believe what they see. Our actions, as well as our words, should convey the dual message that reading is fundamental - and it's fun.

Pool proponents want to build a pool at Ferry Beach

Editor,

Ferry Beach on Lake Charlevoix is being proposed by Friends of the Pool (FOP) as a site for the community indoor swimming pool.

Almost a century ago Charlevoix had an indoor pool near the depot on Lake Charlevoix. Recently, the FOP executive committee analyzed six sites using 14 criteria as follows: Cost of Acquisition; Near Recreational Site; Sewer; Aesthetics; Neighborhood Reaction; Politically Advantageous; Parking; Proximity to Schools; Security; Water, Accessible; Energy Conservation; Grant Eligibility; Non-school User Convenience.

This is the third time in the recent history of the pool effort that Ferry Beach has been proposed for an indoor pool - once in 1968 and again in 1991. However, the City wasn't ready to vacate the electric plant on this potential site. A fire destroyed the building last spring which put this site back on the list of potential sites.

A basketball court is presently proposed at this location and scheduled for completion next spring. Preliminary pool plans will not conflict with this schedule.

Friends of the Pool hopes the City Council will consider the many advantages of having a community indoor pool at Ferry Beach, the town's favorite "swimming hole." Charlevoix has seven public beaches on Lake Michigan.

Michigan and three on Lake Charlevoix for cold-water summer swimming but Ferry Beach has been the most popular by far. Even before $1.4 million, including grants, was spent at Ferry Beach for parking, sidewalks, pavilions, boat launching, basketball and volleyball courts and fish cleaning station. Incidentally, these are all outdoor activities. An indoor pool will allow this fine area to be utilized year-round.

Recent surveys indicate that Charlevoix citizens want a pool located near a recreation complex, managed by a pool authority, not on school property, with units of government cooperation, without burdening the taxpayers and constructed for less than $1,000,000.

Neighborhood approval is an important consideration and this was obtained in 1991 and confirmed this week.

Referring to a Nov. 29, 1991 letter to the Charlevoix City Council, neighbors said "we would like to support this concept as a logical extension and enhancement of the area. We believe that the Charlevoix area community would benefit greatly year round from such an indoor facility as part of this recreational complex. Therefore we urge the Council to explore the feasibility of this location."

Already, four companies have donated their services for a scaled-down version of previous plans and it is estimated the pool could be built for much less than $1,000,000 and still fill the needs of the community for: Water Therapy, Water Safety, Physical Fitness, Family Swimming, Handicap Swimming, Pre-school Swimming, Recreation.

If we are successful with grant applications to Michigan foundations and corporations, we hope to break ground in the spring of 1994.

With City Council approval of a 99-year lease we are confident that we can raise the balance with a much smaller fund-raising drive.

For several years now, the Friends of the Pool have listened carefully to the concerns and objections some people have expressed regarding the pool. We've taken their comments seriously as many are thoughtful and legitimate. We believe this proposed course of action would meet all their requirements.

Navy Petty Officer 3rd Class Guy W. Gengle, son of William F. and Sue Gengle of Charlevoix, recently spent a weekend in Russia aboard the guided missile cruiser USS Bunker Hill, forward deployed to Yokosuka, Japan.

The crew enjoyed a port visit to Vladivostok, which serves as the Pacific Fleet Headquarters for the Russian Federation Navy.

USS Bunker Hill opened its decks for general visiting and attracted more than 15,000 former Soviet Union citizens. Hats, collar devices, jumpers, pea coats and other uniform items were swapped with Russian military until the final uniform worn by both country's sailors was a mixture of the two.

Gengle is one of 364 crewmen aboard the Ticonderoga-class cruiser armed with guns, missiles and torpedoes.

Big Rock contributes to literacy program

A $750 grant by Consumers Power Company's Big Rock Point nuclear plant will help bring an enhanced computer-assisted literacy program to unemployed adults in northwest Michigan.

The Enterprise Learning Lab in East Jordan offers literacy and basic skills programs for unemployed adults who need to improve reading, writing and math skills to succeed in job training programs and subsequent employment. Programs are also available for dislocated workers and currently employed adults who need to upgrade skills to meet the challenge of a changing work environment.

Nancy Postma, an operations specialist at Big Rock Point recommended that the plant support the purchase of a desktop scanner for the lab. Big Rock Point's Community Partnership Team reviewed Postma's recommendation, the Lab's proposal and mission, and awarded the grant.

Paul Hodge, Enterprise Learning Lab coordinator said the desktop scanner will be used to assist students in the development of computer presentations. The scanner will allow students to copy or "scan" graphics, pictures and information onto a computer disk. Students may then utilize the information in computer-generated reports and presentations.

Bodem to host meeting to discuss State education reform efforts

State Rep. Beverly A. Bodem, R-Alpena, is sponsoring a town hall meeting in Charlevoix Nov. 4 to discuss the Legislature's ongoing efforts to restructure Michigan schools.

The 106th District lawmaker will meet with constituents at 7 p.m. Thursday in the City Council Chambers, 210 State St.

"Area residents know what they want from their schools and deserve to be heard. I encourage everyone to attend. We all have a stake in what's finally developed," Bodem said.

For more information, contact Bodem's Lansing office at (517) 373-0833.

dialogue (with teachers and staff) in every phase of negotiations," Beatty said.

Later in the meeting, Dr. Roberta Jackson gave an update on the state school restructuring plans. She and board member Joan Buday attended a school restructuring meeting in Gaylord. While the status of restructuring changes daily, Jackson said it looked like the state would put a cap on per pupil spending at $6,500. "We'll be at $6,500 next year without salary increases or heat and utility increases," Jackson said. She stressed the importance of having a local option of property tax millages to make up for any extra funds needed by the schools. "It's clear that in Charlevoix we're going to be in financial constraint no matter what happens," Jackson said.

In other business, the board approved the implementation of Public Act 194, which will require students taking driver's education to meet certain criteria. The students must have been in school the semester before taking driver's education. Principal Dave Smith said that the requirement is an incentive for kids to stay in school.

Sue Miller was selected as head ski coach for the high school ski team. She is one of the few non-teacher coaches in the school district. New high school teacher Pete Scholten was chosen as assistant ski coach. Joe Powers will be the new freshman basketball coach.

Fall education program provides hands-on learning experience outdoors on Beaver Island

The phrase "hands on" describes only part of the experience that students at Beaver Island Community Schools recently had while investigating the great outdoors. Hands, feet, noses, ears and eyes of 58 young naturalists had an opportunity to learn more about nature through the Little Traverse Conservancy's environmental education program.

The Conservancy conducted field trips for Beaver Island's kindergarten through sixth grade classes Monday, Oct. 4. Conservancy environmental education instructors Melissa Hansen, Maria Affhalter, and Chuck Robbins led classes through Barney's Lake Nature Preserve on the north end of Beaver Island. The preserve is one of more than 60 areas protected by the Conservancy.

The Little Traverse Conservancy recently conducted outdoor field trips on Beaver Island for area students.

Kindergarten students used their senses to study the colors and shapes of leaves and other natural objects. First and second graders learned about plants and seeds, while the third and fourth graders focused on the food chain and life in decomposing logs. The fifth and sixth graders rode their bikes on the four mile trek from the school to Barney's Lake preserve to study water and forest ecology.

By the end of autumn, more than 1200 students from 15 elementary schools will have participated in the Conservancy's fall education program. Most students visit Thorne Swift Nature Preserve, north of Harbor Springs, or North Point Nature Preserve in Charlevoix. Little Traverse Conservancy also offers winter and spring education programs at their preserves free of charge to schools. For more information call Chuck Robbins, Conservancy education coordinator at 347-0991.

Foster children receive something to hold onto Charlevoix County Department of Social Services received a supply of "Tote Bags" for children going into foster care from the Christ Child Society. The tote bags are filled with items appropriate for the ages of the children receiving them. Terry Salacina, Director of Charlevoix County Department of Social Services said children going into foster care at times have nothing with them. The tote bag and its contents will be the child's to keep, giving them something they can claim as their own.

Doug McCombs, services supervisor said "The tote bags will be a nice touch during a difficult situation. Workers will appreciate having something positive to offer the children during an anxious time."

The tote bags will be replaced when used so a supply will always be ready for use when needed.

Civil War enthusiast to explain re-enactments

Kevin Stark of East Jordan is a member of the Second Tennessee Cavalry CSA. Every summer he travels to locations all over the United States to take part in Civil War battle re-enactments. And even more interesting, he does the re-enactment on horseback. He and his fellow enthusiasts recreate Civil War battles wearing authentic period clothing, using antique equipment and weapons, and riding or walking into battle shooting cap & ball (blanks) guns and swinging sabers!

On Tuesday, Nov. 9, at 7 p.m., Stark will be giving an informational talk about the Civil War, and will show a 30-minute film of the 130th Anniversary of the Battle of Perryville, Kentucky Re-enactment. The original battle was one in which many troops from Michigan were involved. It started at Squire Bottom's house, militarily significant because it was the location of the only spring in that area. Stark will be wearing clothing of the period and will have on display authentic equipment, weapons and artifacts. The informational/educational presentation will be held at the Char-Em Service Center, 08568 Mercer Blvd., Charlevoix, in the main conference room.

Everyone is invited to attend.

The program is being sponsored by the Exceptional Riders Program, a non-profit organization that focuses on making horseback riding as therapy available to physically, mentally and emotionally challenged individuals in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties. There is no charge, but donations to the Exceptional Riders Program will be accepted. For more information call Barb Lane at 347-3300.

BEACONS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

There are certain jobs in life that seem so easy that you wonder how folks can take money for doing them. They look easy until the time comes to really put your skills to use. I watched a team of doctors work with someone I care about deeply this weekend. Try as they might, every test they ran came back negative.

A surgeon was even called in to do an exploratory probe to see if the human eye could find something that machines were overlooking. He was puzzled. He found nothing. Monday, the puzzle was solved. They found a heart problem that had really been hidden. The next difficulty they face is how to deal with it. They will figure it out because they truly care about the well being of every patient that places their trust in them.

My mother was a first grade teacher for 29 years. She heard all the stories about only working nine months a year and getting three months paid vacation. I know better. I watched her as she constantly scouted stores, libraries and other resources for ways of improving her classroom. I giggled when "Mom" went back to school herself in the summer time, not realizing then that it was required for her certificate.

When the school year was on, I remember her talking about different kids and their family situations at the dinner table. She didn't just teach a lesson during the day and punch out at quitting time. She took every child that was in her charge right into the depths of her heart. I suspect that the same love holds true for every teacher that is helping all of our children come to value their world.

Being a policeman looks easy. Wouldn't it seem fun to just drive around town all day long? But it's not so easy to come up to a darkened building in the middle of the night knowing that someone is lurking in the shadows that shouldn't be there. It's not so easy to work a traffic accident when the injured parties are people you know and care about. Their devotion to duty is something we ought to respect.

From grocery clerks to farmers, whatever the job may look like, there is real work involved. From nurses to school aides to firemen, you have to care about what you do if you are truly doing it right. I hope more of us would look around at the labors of love that are taking place every day and thank God for the blessing of people who truly care. I hope more of us would realize what it means to share our appreciation with those who do try their best in what they do. Who knows? You may find that when you share your love with someone else that it has a way of coming back to you.

(Rev. Bruce Hamilton is pastor of the Charlevoix Community Church of Church of God. Beacons of Blessings is provided to the Courier by Hamilton and other members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.)

Boys Cross Country team qualifies for State Finals

Charlevoix's boys cross country team qualified for the Class C State Finals with a third place finish at the Regional meet Saturday at Benzonia. Suttons Bay won the meet with 67 points, followed by Clare with 88 and Charlevoix with 95.

Individually for the Rayders, junior Mike Bush took a second place, completing the 3.1 mile course in 16:20. Other Rayder Angie Potter (30) prepares to join the fracas for a rebound against Inland Lakes.

Football team closes season with 26-6 loss to East Jordan

A disappointing Charlevoix varsity football season came to an end Friday evening with a 26-6 loss at East Jordan. The loss left the Rayders with a 3-6 record for the season.

The season began with three straight losses (to Rogers City, Reed City and Boyne City) and concluded with three straight losses (to Petoskey, Traverse City St. Francis and East Jordan). Sandwiched in between were three straight wins (over Grayling, Elk Rapids and Harbor Springs).

Against East Jordan the Rayders played reasonably well in the first half, but crashed and burned in the second half.

In the first quarter Charlevoix drove the length of the field before fumbling into the end zone. East Jordan recovered the fumble and began a 13-play, touchdown drive at

J.V. football team beats East Jordan 26-8

Charlevoix's junior varsity football team beat East Jordan 26-8 Thursday evening to finish the season with a winning record at 5-4.

The Rayders dominated the first half and built an 18-0 halftime lead.

Casey Crain opened the scoring in the first quarter, returning an East Jordan punt 65 yards for a touchdown. Later in the quarter Mark Boss threw a 32 yard scoring Ann Marie Terryberry is one of the eighth grade teams taller players, but runs the floor well. Terryberry and her teammates are undefeated this season.

Soccer team closes first season at 5-14

The Charlevoix soccer team closed out its first season with a 2-1 loss to Northport in the Class C-D District Soccer Tournament, this past Thursday. The loss left Charlevoix with a season record of 5-14. Earlier in District play, Charlevoix beat Harbor Light 2-1.

In the Northport game, Charlevoix led 1-0 for a brief time early in the second half. Seth Kilander gave the Rayders the lead on a break-away goal. But less than a minute later, Northport scored on a penalty kick and a short time after that scored the go ahead goal.

Playing a strong game for the Rayders were Mike Rostar, Scott Boyer, Chris Mikulski, Eric Heiss, Eric Howard, Kilander, Tony Frederick, Steve Carland, Noel Kammerman, Steve Firman, Nate Martin, David Bellaires and goalie Cam Carr.

Tie breaker decides Courier football contest

Chuck Lent ends up winning

The winner of this past week's Charlevoix Courier football contest was Chuck Lent of Charlevoix. Lent tied with Corky Cavo and Mike Marr at 7-3, but won in the tiebreaker. For winning, Lent will receive a free custom car clean up at South Point Auto.

Last week's Courier picks were at an all-time low, 3-7, consequently placing last week's selections in the same category as the Charlevoix and U of M football seasons - "The less said, the better."

Here are this week's picks. They've got to be an improvement. Cheboygan vs. Bay City John Glenn. Knowing nothing about Bay City (other than the water there tastes funny and they have a really messed up bridge), but knowing that Cheboygan worked over a good St. Ignace team, we'll take Cheboygan. Pick - Cheboygan.

Montague vs. Boyne City. Historically, teams from the Lake Michigan Division of the Great Northern Conference have not fared well against Montague in the playoffs. Pick - Montague.

East Jordan vs. Iron Mountain. Glad to see East Jordan go to the playoffs, but sorry to have to say how they're likely to fare. Pick - Iron Mountain.

Traverse City St. Francis vs. St. Ignace. This game is prime-time northern Michigan football. Let's say St. Ignace can beat these jokers. Pick - St. Ignace. Purdue vs. Michigan. Even Michigan's offense can score against Purdue. Michigan's wide receivers should have a big day. Pick - Michigan. Northwestern at Michigan State.

Speaking of lackluster offense. Where was the MSU offense against Indiana? After a week off, they should perform better against Northwestern. Pick - Michigan State. Ohio State vs. Wisconsin. It's in the best interest of fan safety for Ohio State to win. And they will. Pick - Ohio State. Tampa Bay vs. Detroit. Detroit often plays poorly against Tampa Bay, but normally that happens in Tampa rather than in Detroit. Pick - Detroit. New York Giants vs. Dallas.

What did the Giants think they were doing losing to the Jets? I'm still bitter about that. Pick - Dallas. Indiana vs. Penn State. Penn State has been baptized to Big Ten football with two losses. Might Indiana beat them too? Not in Happy Valley. Pick - Penn State.

With the exception of Lake Superior, precipitation on the basins of the Great Lakes was above average for September. For the second month in a row, below average precipitation fell on the Lake Superior basin, contrasting with the above average tenor seen so far in 1993. The above average precipitation on the Lakes Michigan-Huron, Erie and Ontario basins was in keeping with the year's higher trend. For the year to date, precipitation is about 10 percent above average for the entire Great Lakes basin. In September, the net supply of water to each of the Great Lakes was below average.

In comparison to their long-term (1900-1992) averages, the September monthly mean water levels of Lakes Superior, Michigan-Huron, St. Clair and Erie were 3-, 10-, 15 and 12 inches, respectively, above average, while Lake Ontario was at its average level. Shoreline residents on Lakes St. Clair and Erie, and to a lesser extent Lakes Michigan-Huron, are cautioned to continue to be alert to adverse weather conditions, as these could compound an already high lake level situation. Further information and advice will be provided by the Corps of Engineers should conditions worsen.

A more detailed summary of Lakes Michigan-Huron water levels follows. All elevations are referenced to International Great Lakes Datum 1085.

Lakes Michigan-Huron at the end of September were at elevation 580.05 feet (176.80 meters) above the mean water level at Rimouski, Quebec, or about 31 inches (80 cm.) above Chart Datum. The September monthly mean level of 580.15 feet (176.83 meters) was about 10 inches (25 cm.) above the long-term average for September. The lakes were about 22 inches (55 cm.) below the all-time high September monthly mean level, which was recorded in 1986. The forecast shows that the October monthly mean level of Lakes Michigan-Huron will be about 2 inches (6 cm.) below what it was at Mid-September. The lakes are expected to complete their seasonal decline in February. The water level in Mid-March 1994 is expected to be about 10 inches (26 cm.) above the long-term average for that month, or about 6 inches (15 cm.) above what it was at the same time in 1993.

Ferry Beach pool proposal receives planning's blessings

By L. Scott Swanson

Supporters of an indoor community swimming pool have received the blessings of the city planning commission to build a pool at Ferry Beach. At Monday evening's planning commission meeting a motion to recommend that the city council give consideration to building a pool at Ferry Beach passed by a 6-2 vote. Mel Renaud and June Cross voted against the motion. Bruce Reid, Bob Clock, Nancy Wood, Leonard Slatley, Barb Fels and Jim Tank voted in favor.

Pool supporters from the group Friends of the Pool said they have considered several locations over the years, but currently feel Ferry Beach is the best because it is located near an existing recreational area and next to adequate parking. They would like the city to lease the property to a pool authority (an organization which would operate the pool) for $1 a year.

In the past proposals to fund either construction of or operation of a pool with tax dollars have failed. Monday evening, Friends of the Pool co-chairman Dave Strawbridge stated emphatically on several occasions that the current proposal is for no tax dollars to be used either for construction or operations.

Present pool plans are scaled down from past plans. The present plans call for a pool with four, 20-yard lanes. The pool would be six and a-half feet deep at the deep end and two and a-half feet deep at the shallow end. There would also be a hot tub with room for eight to 10 people. Pool supporters estimate construction costs at $650,000 and annual operational costs at $88,000. Strawbridge said he estimates the pool could raise up to $102,000 per year for operational costs through fundraising and other means besides taxes. He said that if there was an operational shortfall, the pool could be closed for a portion of the year, perhaps three months in the summer.

City manager Mike Wiesner, who has in the past been requested to estimate pool funding needs, said that although he isn't opposed to a community pool he disagrees with pool supporters' cost estimates. He feels the annual operational costs of a pool would be between $130,000 and $135,000. He said he feels pool supporters' figures underestimate salary costs and that comparisons to East Jordan and Harbor Springs pools don't exactly equate because those pools are operated in conjunction with schools rather than as stand-alone facilities.

The proposed location for the pool at Ferry Beach is to the lake-ward side of the basketball courts on a site currently occupied by the old restrooms. Architect Jack Begrow proposed removing the old restrooms and connecting the pool to the new picnic pavilion. Renaud said he feels this pool proposal is better than past proposals, but rather than having the pool take up beach area, he would rather see it on the other side of Ferry Avenue.

Cross referred to a memo from city attorney Jim Young to Wiesner and said that before a pool can be built on city property at Ferry Beach, it will have to be approved by city voters. According to the city charter the city cannot sell, lease or otherwise dispose of city property that lies within 100 feet of the water without approval by city voters. At the site proposed, the pool would be 300 feet away from the lakeshore, but it would be on a portion of a piece of property which is lakefront property.

Cross also said that since voters have in the past voted against a pool that if there is another election the election costs should be paid by pool supporters. Clock argued that past votes were on a different issue, i.e. tax funding of a pool, not on the issue of pool location.

Area garbage business grows competitive

By Laurie Lounsbury

Waste Management is getting a run for their garbage - at least the garbage in Charlevoix County. BFI (Browning-Ferris Industries) is the new contender vying for a piece of the garbage pie in Charlevoix. Competition from BFI will put two dents in Waste Management's business. Waste management makes money on garbage collection and they also make money on tipping fees at the Cedar Ridge Landfill.

BFI is in the process of acquiring a new landfill in Presque Isle county. Any garbage they collect in Charlevoix is being hauled up to Presque Isle. Kevin Best, sales manager for BFI, said that the company's decision to offer service in Charlevoix was based on numerous requests from county residents for service.

Larry Sullivan, director of the Charlevoix County Planning Commission, reported that Charlevoix is in the process of signing an inter-county waste agreement with Presque Isle County, permitting waste to be hauled from one county to the other. Charlevoix already has an intercounty agreement with Crawford, Antrim, and Emmet counties. Provisions have been made with Manistee County in the event that the Charlevoix landfill or the Manistee landfill closes, either county can haul waste to the other's landfill.

Sullivan is pleased with the agreement, saying, "There's going to be more competition in the area and I think that's healthy."

Waste Management is not as excited about competition in the area. Don Pizzurro, manager of Waste Management in Charlevoix, claims BFI is breaking the law by hauling garbage out of Charlevoix county before the intercounty agreement is signed by both Charlevoix and Presque Isle counties. However, Waste Management is already hauling waste out of Grand Traverse

So as a consumer, what's your best bet?

What's your best bet for garbage and recycling service? The best deal depends on a family's garbage usage and devotion to recycling. A family that uses four garbage bags a week and wants curbside recycling will pay $12.60 with Waste Management, $10.50 with BFI, and $11.00 with Three R's. A family using only two bags per month with curbside recycling will pay $8.80 to Waste Management, $8.50 to BFI, and $8 to Three R's. A family not using curbside recycling and using eight garbage bags a month will pay $15.20 to Waste Management and $12 to BFI. Three R's doesn't offer garbage collection without recycling pickup.

Three R's is the best choice for devoted recyclers. Three R's accepts the largest variety of recycling.

County and taking it to the Cedar Ridge landfill even though Charlevoix and Grand Traverse counties have no reciprocal agreement in their solid waste plans. Pizzurro also said, "We do something for this community that they (BFI) can never do - we put money back into it." Pizzurro cited the fact that 75 percent of Waste Management's employees live in Charlevoix county, with the other 25 percent living in Emmet county.

A smaller, third party in the race for the waste is Three R's Recycling, a David in the Goliath of the garbage industry. Skip Canfield, manager of Three R's, is unperturbed over the arrival of BFI in Charlevoix. "BFI is not going to bother me a bit," Canfield said. Since Three R's started providing garbage collection along with curbside recycling, Canfield claims he's getting busier every day. Canfield isn't worried about BFI's lower curbside recycling rates either. "I can guarantee BFI will raise their rates," he said. "They have a new landfill in Presque Isle and they need to fill it," he added.

elable material, making it possible to further reduce your waste. BFI is the winner for non-recyclers or for people who generate large volumes of garbage.

To calculate the business with the best buy for your family, here is a breakdown of the prices:

Waste Management: $1.90 per bag, $5 for twice monthly curbside recycling.

BFI: $4 a month basic charge for garbage service, $1 a bag, and $2.50 for twice monthly curbside recycling.

Three R's: $1.50 a bag and $5 for once monthly curbside recycling.

Tank said he feels the location proposed is an excellent location and he would hate to see the planning commission stand in the way of letting the people of the city decide whether or not they want it there. Reid, who will take a seat on the city council as a third ward representative next Monday, supported the planning commission recommending that from a planning and land-use perspective the site makes sense and then letting the city council decide issues such as if and when a vote is necessary and what terms of a lease should be.

Tank said that from a land-use perspective all the planning commission is saying is that this would be a good use of location and the council can work out the logistics.

Getting a first-hand look at this town

The world is a new and exciting place in the eyes of a four year old. For that matter, many familiar spots in Charlevoix are new and exciting places to a four year old. The Charlevoix Co-op nursery school is taking the four year old students on a variety of local field trips to familiarize the children with some of the community businesses and activities. The students toured the Coast Guard station last week, where Petty Officer Jeffrey Zappen explained the massive buoy tenders and lake charts to the children. "There are places in town we see every day, yet know nothing about," said Gayle Lvingood, teaching assistant at the school.

EDITH GILBERT

If only you could have been with me at the very posh affair in Detroit last Thursday! Governor John Engler presented the Crooked Tree Arts Council with the Governors Arts Award for its outstanding contributions to the advancement and support of the arts.

The special event took place at the Detroit Institute of Arts (DIA) and was attended by 600 black-tie movers and shakers, including actor James Earl Jones, and sculptor Marshall Fredericks — he received the International Achievement Award. The $150 evening was masterminded by the Concerned Citizens for the Arts in Michigan which "encourages greater financial and volunteer support for the arts in public and private sectors."

These are not hollow words, either!

Much to our surprise, after we were called on stage in the gorgeous auditorium of the DIA to receive the award, the Dayton Hudson Foundation on behalf of Hudson's, Mervyn's and Target Stores, presented Crooked Tree Arts Council with a check for $10,000!

Many well-wishers congratulated us including Bev Bodem, the Joseph Hudson Jr.s, Judith Dow Alexander, and our corporate sponsors, Bill and Sue Vituoe (that's the ANR Pipeline Co.). Everyone we talked to seemed to know about the McCune Arts Center (Headquarters of the Crooked Tree Arts Council). Many have a cottage up north and these visitors enjoy the exhibits at the McCune Arts Center, or have taken a class here in painting, dance or music, or have seen a play or foreign film here, or attended a concert. We enjoyed chatting with the renowned architect Louis Redstone, who received the Civic Leader Award this year. Incidentally, you'll be pleased to remember, he had a one man show last year at the McCune Arts Center of his architectural drawings and watercolors, and where he also autographed his books.

After the presentations, everyone went into dinner to their assigned tables in the courtyards of the DIA. Here chefs were stationed at tables of pasta, roast beef, Caesar salad, an array of cheeses, wine, and a wide assortment of cakes, pastries and puddings, arranged in the most artistic manner. A small group of musicians played for our enjoyment. The evening wound up conveniently when we offered our valet parking tickets to the attendant.

As I sank into the comfortable seat of our automobile to return home, I wished that everyone in Charlevoix and Emmet County had been at this lovely and well organized affair. As they say, it would have done your heart good!

Dry cask storage can be done without

Editor,

Reply to front page story on Big Rock, Nov. 3, 1993 Charlevoix Courier.

The reason dry casks storage meets with resistance from the public is that the VSC-24 casks for high-level radioactive waste have never been tested, not, as the article stated, that they are stored in public view.

Dr. Marvin Resinkoff, scientist and author, advocates that the casks should have automatic temperature devices on top and bottom. He indicated that storing spent fuel rods is not like fitting pickles into a jar... if only a little of the radioactive materials gets out of the container you're going to have a major accident.

The more we understand about nuclear waste the more we find disturbing. The U.S. Academy of Science says, "Unlike the disposal of any other type of waste, the hazard related to radioactive wastes is so great that no element of doubt should be allowed to exist regarding safety."

After 50 years, the federal government had not been able to find a location that is suitable for a repository for high-level radioactive waste generated by the nation's utilities. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission just lurches from one short-term solution to the next.

The Attorney Generals of Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin have filed suit against the NRC's approval of the dry cask storage on the shores of Lake Michigan, which would be 150 yards from the lake, as had Don't Waste Michigan, and Lake Michigan Federation.

Dr. Resinkoff had given us an accurate assessment of what is at stake here. In his affidavit, he stated the following: "Neither the Environmental Assessment or safety documentation by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) adequately describes the magnitude of what is being proposed at the Palisades reactor. Each Palisades irradiated fuel assembly, cooled five years, contains approximately 200,000 curies of radioactivity. Thus each VSC-24 cask contains approximately 200,000 curies of radioactivity of 312 Trinity-type explosions... or 240 Hiroshima-type explosions."

Recently management at Consumers Power Co.'s Palisades nuclear plant was given a slap on the wrist by the NRC over fuel-handling problems. They were fined $50,000 for violations during refueling operations. This is the third time they were in violation for the same infraction. Consumers Power also owns Big Rock nuclear plant.

Once before Tim Petrosky has said that Consumers "May not make the decision to use dry cask storage at Big Rock." However, Consumers management vice-president, Dave Hoffman, said earlier that indeed dry cask storage was being considered.

It would be helpful if media would run in-depth articles about radiation; problems with nuclear power, about alternatives that are safe, clean and inexpensive and to get their information from sources other than Big Rock Public Affairs office.

Former Energy Secretary, James Watkins said to Congress: "If we do not solve the spent-fuel issue on the existing 110 plants we have, not counting expansion, then there won't be any future for nuclear power."

Since 1948, nuclear power has gotten more than half of the U.S. energy research money but provides only one-tenth of the energy supply.

In a 1990 article in Science magazine, Stanford University geologist, Conrad Krauskopf, wrote: "No scientist or engineer can give an absolute guarantee that radioactive waste will not some day leak in dangerous quantities from even the best repositories."

In Western Europe, nuclear expansion plans have come to a halt in all countries except France. In Belgium, Germany, Italy, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and now England construction has been stopped entirely, or are phasing out by 2010.

Doris Schaller
Alanson, MI 49706

P.S. Northern Michigan Eco-Watch: The answer to the problem of radioactive waste, which is ultimately the long-term product of the nuclear industry, is to stop producing it. Nuclear energy is not sacred, people and nature are.

On second thought, maybe that new bridge railing has its merits

By Laurie Lounsbury

When the new guard rail was installed on the west side of the bridge, it sparked an uprising from Charlevoix citizens whose aesthetic sensibilities were offended. Many Charlevoixians, including myself, thought the new guard rail was ugly with a capital U. Bridge rail experts in Lansing informed us that the ugly guard rail was designed for function, not beauty. The new rail was designed to withstand a 60 mile an hour vehicle impact.

I scratched my head over that piece of wisdom. How could a car traveling straight down Bridge Street at the 25 mile an hour speed limit possibly get far enough out of control to impact with the guard rail? Silly nonsense. That's what I thought until last Friday night.

Friday evening, around 7:30, I turned left off of Park Avenue and headed north to cross the bridge. It was cold, windy, and still snowing. The concrete portion of the bridge was icy. My old Volvo station wagon went into a mild skid on the concrete. I wasn't alarmed. My front-end heavy Volvo routinely skids on ice, and driving in northern Michigan has given me ample opportunity to practice pulling out of skids. I turned into the skid and waited patiently for the car to straighten its course. Then I hit the steel grid portion of the bridge and blew a tire. My sedate family wagon instantly metamorphosed into a free spirited bucking bronco. With a mind of its own, the car went careening straight towards the old, decorative guard rail. In that moment a series of thoughts flashed through my brain, all related to the submerged vehicle study that took place in Charlevoix two years ago. OK, I thought, after I break through the guard rail and plunge into the channel I have to climb into the back seat, wait for the air and water pressure to equalize, open the back door while the car is sinking, shed my winter coat and swim to safety. That is, if I'm not unconscious from the crash, if I don't get disoriented in the black night water, and if the cold temperatures don't give me a heart attack.

My car, giddy with its new found reckless abandon, suddenly did an about face and propelled itself towards the new guard rail. The ugly guard rail. The 60 mile an hour impact resistant rail. I breathed a heavy sigh of relief and started making plans to call the insurance company in the morning to report a wrinkled front end on my car.

The old car ran out of steam at that point, returned to its former sedentary behavior and limped back south across the bridge where it came to rest. When my heart rate finally dropped below 400 beats per minute I climbed out to assess the damage. The tire was flat as a pancake and the rim looked like a pit bull had attacked it. I leaned against the car to steady myself and glanced back at the scene of the near disaster. Boy, was I lucky, I thought. I was going slowly and my heavy, low to the ground car didn't jump the curb. What if the same thing happened to a person driving too fast in a light weight vehicle? What if there had been oncoming traffic doing 40 miles an hour and the driver swerved mightily to avoid me?

With all of that going through my mind, the decorative old guard rail looked puny and pathetic; a poor barrier between an out of control car and the icy water below. The new, galvanized steel guard rail suddenly looked mighty attractive to me.

LOVE for Children agency hires new director

Dinah Crozier (far left) has been hired as the coordinator for LOVE for Children, a group recently formed to help Charlevoix County's children. Crozier recently met with organization's planning committee and prospective board members and their spouses.

The Charlevoix County agency is one of two in Michigan chosen in 1993 to participate in the developmental stages of a new program by LOVE for Children, which is affiliated with World Vision, the largest Christian relief agency in the world. LOVE for Children is being supported by a $1.3 million, five-year Kellogg Foundation grant.

If successful, LOVE for Children could be a model for other communities to improve coordination between WIC and Head Start as well as expand the role of volunteers in both programs. Volunteers at head start agencies will read to children, provide baby-sitters and resource aids to parents.

Plant tour is an eye-opener

By Ralph McRae

The East Jordan Iron Works is located at the end of the south Arm of Lake Charlevoix. Its west boundary touches the east beach of the lake. Its east boundary adjoins the business block of the city.

Before starting a recent tour of the plant I was fitted with a hard hat, a protective jacket and side shields for my eye glasses. During the next two and a-half hours I saw, heard and felt the intense activity of the plant's production processes. My guide for the tour of the 300,000 square foot plant was Tad Malpass, Executive Vice President.

For an outsider, the plant is a spectacular scene. One must stay clear of the whirling gears and avoid heavily loaded fork lift trucks, especially the one carrying a cauldron of molten, gold-colored metal as it rushes to pour its contents into a waiting mold.

Before entering the plant, we took a look outside where the process all begins with huge cranes lowering circular magnetic pads

U.S. House approves lamprey funding

The U.S. House of Representatives recently passed legislation which includes $2.7 million for re-registering and application of a chemical used to kill the sea lampreys in the Great Lakes; U.S. Rep. Bari Stupak (D-Menominee) announced.

"The sea lamprey possess a serious threat to the ecosystem of the Great Lakes," Stupak said. "This legislation will allow us to continue waging war against this creature which has preyed on Great Lakes fish."

Funding for the re-registration and application of the chemical lampicide was included in the Commerce, State, and Justice Appropriations conference Report on H.R. 2519. The conference report now moves to the U.S. Senate for a final vote. If the Senate passes the legislation, it will be sent to President Clinton for his signature, which would make it law.

In May, Stupak submitted testimony to the Appropriations subcommittee on Commerce, Justice and State, concerning the importance of funding the lampicide program.

Stupak also wrote U.S. Rep. Neal Smith (D-Iowa), Chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee on Commerce, Justice requesting that funding for lampicide program be appropriated at full funding for Fiscal Year 1994.

The $2.7 million, along with $300,000 appropriated this year for the National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration's (NOAA) lampicide program brings the Great Lakes Fishery Commission its lampicide program.

into piles of scrap iron and steel. Several hundred pounds of metal are drawn to the pads and lifted high to the open jaws of the cupola. As it is needed, the scrap metal is fed into a seething mass of bubbling molten iron. Fueled by coke energized with 1,000 degree blasts of pressurized oxygen, the cupola spews out fifty tons of liquid iron hourly.

One of the crane operators, Bill Skrocki, has been on the job for the last 29 years. When he started, wages were less than $1 an hour. He recalls that before cranes and magnetic pads, scrap metal was hand-loaded into a wheel barrow and then hoisted to the throat of the cupola. On his 63rd birthday, Jan. 17, Skrocki will be retiring and live on a company pension and social security. He will be giving up the crane for hours of hunting and fishing.

Production increases led to the installation of ten units of dust collectors. Large ventilators pull air through ducts into the dust collection building. There, 1,500 cloth vacuum bags collect the dust. When the dust accumulates, a burst of air drops it into a recovery pit.

In the building, the first stop was in the core room. Here, a special mixture of sand is blown into a casting with a hollow center. After it is baked and cured, the form is used as a mold pattern to accept melted steel. In another system, the sand can be packed solid so the it will become firm without baking. Still another special system, perfected by the Iron Works, includes a machine that will automatically produce a continuous stream of large green sand molds ready for the pourings. This process places the Iron Works head and shoulders above many of its competitors. While many foundries have gone out of business, the Iron Works is going strong.

Approximately every minute the cupola produces a ton of melted iron at a temperature of 3,000 degrees. And approximately every minute it has to dump that load. Empty buckets suspended from a rail roll up to the cupola. After being filled, these buckets are then lowered to various pouring stations to pour their contents into waiting molds. This is a very exciting sight. Sparks fly in every direction as the golden fluid cascades into channels. These furious displays of heat and fire are repeated many times each day.

Pressed within these molds are the various patterns that will shape and form scores of solid iron products. Depending on their use, many of the products will have holes drilled, edges smoothed or surfaces ground and polished. Before leaving the plant, some things are dipped into an asphalt emulsion to enable them to withstand corrosive soil conditions. Other products are wrapped in plastic covers before being shipped directly to customers. The plant had a very modern machine shop with most of the machines incorporating computer guided controls. Certain products, such as fire hydrants and gate valves, require assembling.

Patterns must be made for each product. This is done in the pattern shop by expert craftsmen. It is a very slow process requiring measurements with a minimal degree of tolerance. Some of the patterns are carved from blocks of sugar pine or mahogany. Most are made from solid steel and a few from plastic. Patterns are often designed from customer specifications owned by the customers.

A large building has been built to store patterns. The building contains many aisles between tiered racks which hold the patterns. Some of the patterns weigh as much as 2,400 pounds. Individual patterns can be quickly located using a computer.

It isn't easy to describe the atmosphere common to all large factories or fabricating plants. They are often a jungle of jumbo sized machinery with workers dwarfed by the equipment. They control safety precautions are a must. Areas which aren't safe if you don't know what you're doing are strictly off limits to nonworkers. To an outsider a large plant can seem overwhelming, but workers, such as Bob Stanek who has been with the Iron Works plant for 38 years and will retire early next year, see it change over the years become accustomed to the facility. For these people the plant isn't overwhelming...except when they stop to think about it.

Mike Bush and Matt Dickinson made the all-state team, leading the Charlevoix boys' cross country team to a third-place finish in the Class C State Finals in Belding Saturday. The Rayders beat Suttons Bay and Clare; the two teams which they finished behind in regional competition, but failed to outrun Leslie and Carson City Crystal. Leslie won the Class C race with 147 points. Carson City

Crystal placed second with 157 points and Charlevoix took third with 161 points. Bush, a junior, took second in the individual race with a time of 16:43, just seven seconds behind Carson City Crystal junior Justin Curry. Dickinson, also a junior, placed eighth, 26 seconds behind Bush. Other Rayder runners and their places and times were: 36 - Chris Lebut, 17:56; 54 - Jeff McCombs, 18:07; 61 - Josh Dhaseler, 18:13; 98 - Justin Davis, 18:47; 104 - Paul Henne, 18:52. Dhaseler was the only senior running for the Rayders. There are 130 Class C cross country teams in Michigan. Becca Chamberlain ran in the girls individual race. She placed eighteenth in 21:28, missing all-state status by less than a minute. Chamberlain is a junior.

Shannon Rowell led Charlevoix in rebounding with eight Friday evening against Kalkaska. The Rayders beat Kalkaska 58-49 to even their season record at 9-9.

Basketball team beats Kalkaska with strong third quarter

Kalkaska hung around in the first half, but in the third quarter Charlevoix went on a scoring binge and ended up beating the visiting Blue Blazers 58-49 Friday evening. Charlevoix led after the first quarter 14-11; but then fell behind 27-26 at halftime.

When the dust settled at the end of the third quarter Charlevoix led 48-36 and was on the way to their ninth win. Grunch finished the night with 27 points and six assists. Shannon Rowell led the Rayders in rebounding with eight while Doan had five. The win raised the Rayders season record to 9-9 and league record to 7-4. Charlevoix will close out the regular season Friday evening at Harbor Springs.

Kavo wins football contest on tie-breaker

Corky Kavo of Charlevoix won this past week's Charlevoix Courier football contest. The winner had to be decided by the tie-breaker. Kavo was one of four contestants who were 8-1. (The Ohio State vs. Penn State tie was thrown out.) The other three were Chuck Lent, Mark Dreyer and Bill Joy.

The tie-breaker was a prediction of the total number of points in the St. Ignace vs. Traverse City St. Francis game. The actual total number of points was 38. Kavo's prediction was 37. Joy was the next closest with a prediction of 42. Dreyer faxed in his entry from Florida. The Traverse City St. Francis and St. Ignace game crossed up Kavo, Dreyer and Joy while Lent missed the Cheboygan and Bay City John Glenn game.

For winning, Kavo will receive a free oil change at Pat McKeown's Dodge City.

Last week's Courier picks were a near-perfect 9-0. (All right, so I didn't call the Penn State and Ohio State tie. Cut me some slack.) The picks were right there in front of all of the contestants, but nobody would believe them. Why, I ask you? Why? Perhaps the previous week's 3-7 record had something to do with it. The nine correct calls brings the Courier season record to 42-24. Not too shabby. Here are this week's picks. This week's games are trickier than last week's. Don't count on these picks being perfect.

Cheboygan vs. Flint Powers. Let's go with Cheboygan for one more week. Pick - Cheboygan.

St. Ignace vs. Iron Mountain. It's the "No-Troll-Bowl." Traverse City St. Francis last week and now Iron Mountain. Did St. Ignace draw a rough road in the playoffs, or what? What does that do to a team; toughen them up or beat them up? We'll claim it toughens them up. Pick - St. Ignace.

Florida State vs. Notre Dame. It's the biggest college game of the season. Is Florida State quarterback Charlie Ward healthy? Can those Florida boys play in cold weather? Is Notre Dame over-rated? Tough to say. Pick - Florida State.

Michigan vs. Minnesota. Even when they win this year, Michigan seems to make their fans suffer. This game should be a scoring extravaganza. Pick - Michigan.

Michigan State vs. Purdue. After pounding Northwestern by two points, MSU moves on to Purdue. Purdue is playing this season without a defense, but then MSU has occasionally played without much of an offense. Pick - Michigan State.

Indiana vs. Ohio State. Indiana nearly beat Penn State while Ohio State played Wisconsin to a draw. Ohio State should win this game, but don't be too surprised if Indiana upsets them. Pick - Ohio State.

Illinois vs. Penn State. This is the upset of the week. Illinois upset Michigan and is going to do the same thing to Penn State. Welcome to the Big 10. Pick - Illinois.

Minnesota vs. Denver. Minnesota has stumbled in the past two weeks, but they're still not such a bad team. Last week, Denver took advantage of a faltering Cleveland team. Pick - Minnesota.

Kansas City vs. L.A. Raiders. The Raiders beat Chicago, but it was an ugly win and nothing to be too proud of. Remember the old games between these two teams. Whatever happened to Daryl Lamonica, Len Dawson, George Blanda, Buck Buchanan? These days the Chiefs and Raiders match-up just doesn't have the same flavor. Pick - Kansas City.

Chicago vs. San Diego. As the Lions found out last season, other positions get all of the acclaim, but the offensive line is the guts of any football team. The Bears are learning the same lesson this season. Pick - San Diego.

Conservancy purchases Beaver Island property

The Little Traverse Conservancy recently announced that it has reached agreement to purchase a 59-1/2 acre parcel on Beaver Island encompassing 1,360 feet of sandy beach, interdunal wetlands and the endangered Michigan Monkkey Flower, which is known to live in only thirteen locations in the world.

The parcel, located on Little Sand Bay, is only a mile from the port area of St. James on the island's northeast side. Conservancy

Executive Director Tom Bailey said that the Conservancy is acquiring the land "in order to protect its natural character and for the benefit of the people of Beaver Island."

Fund raising is already under way, with more than $53,000 in pledges already made by island residents and resorters. Financial support has also been pledged by the Michigan Nature Conservancy and will be forthcoming from other sources. Bailey indicated that the Conservancy seeks contributions from anyone who loves Beaver Island and has an interest in preserving its natural beauty and biological diversity. Individual contributions, special grants and other types of funding will be sought to cover the estimated $300,000 cost of the total project.

"Anyone interested in the project may contact the Little Traverse Conservancy, 3264 Powell Road, Harbor Springs, Michigan 49740 or call 616-347-0991.

Three juveniles arrested in arson investigation

The attempted arson of a vacant house on Holy Island Road was squelched by the combined efforts of a barking dog, an alert neighbor, the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department and the Charlevoix City Fire Department. In addition to saving the building, three juveniles from the East Jordan area were arrested and are expected to be cited into Probate Court.

At approximately 7 p.m., Saturday Nov. 6 a resident who lives near the vacant house heard his dog barking. When he looked to see what was going on, he saw flames on the side of the vacant building and a pick-up truck. Before the pick-up could leave the scene, the witness got a look at the license plate. He then extinguished the fire and notified the sheriff's department.

Deputy Pat Avery was the first officer to arrive. Upon discovering that arson was involved, he notified Sgt. Don Schneider to assist in the investigation. Schneider subsequently requested assistance from the Charlevoix City Fire Department and Fire Chief Doug Carver and fireman Bob Lindstrom responded.

The investigation found that a bottle filled with a flammable liquid (commonly referred to as a Molotov Cocktail) had been thrown up against an exterior wall of the house. Part of the siding was charred, but the damage was not substantial.

Further investigation revealed that some time prior to the external fire, a similar bottle of flammable liquid had been thrown through a second floor window. That incident had caused a small fire in a bedroom, but apparently it had burned out before doing any extensive damage.

While deputies and firemen investigated at the scene, another patrol car was dispatched to the address matching the pick-up plate numbers. The truck was not at that address.

Later, as the officers and firemen were finishing gathering evidence they spotted a pick-up coming up the road. The pick-up matched the description and the license plates.

Deputies stopped the truck, found combustibles in the truck and took the three juveniles into custody.

Schneider said that at this time he has no reason to believe the Nov. 6 incident is connected to a fire earlier this fall on Klooster Road.

Schneider noted that arson cases are often difficult to resolve, but that in the case the sheriff's department was extremely fortunate to have a witness and also benefited from having an excellent working relationship with the city fire department.

Coast Guard receives oil spill test results

U.S. Coast Guard test results from an oil spill which occurred in Round Lake last month indicate the spill probably originated from a boat named the Key Largo which was registered in Pennsylvania. The boat left Charlevoix's harbor on the morning of the spill and was later located near Frankfort.

Fuel samples were taken from the Key Largo as well as from several other boats that were in Charlevoix's harbor at the time of the spill. According to the Coast Guard's Marine Safety Office in Sault Ste. Marie tests matched the sample from the water to the sample from the Key Largo.

The Coast Guard estimates that between 150 and 200 gallons of diesel fuel were spilled into the harbor. The resulting oil slick extended along almost the entire length of the municipal docks. The cost of cleaning up the slick was approximately $22,000.

According to a Coast Guard spokesman a report of violation is in the process of being filed. The report will go to the Coast Guard's district headquarters in Cleveland and then to a hearing officer in Massachusetts. The case, which is civil as opposed to criminal, will be handled in federal court.

Environmental damage from the spill was minimal.

Ferry Beach pool site - Is it a part or a parcel?

By Laurie Lounsbury

The Friends of the Pool committee went before the Charlevoix City council Monday to present plans for a $650,000 indoor pool to be located at the site of the old electrical plant.

Co-chairman Dave Strawbridge stressed that this is an entirely new proposal. The committee plans to form a non-profit organization and fund the pool through fees, pledges, private grants and occasional fundraisers. The committee is not asking for city sponsorship or tax dollars.

What they are asking for is a lease or deed to the city's parcel of land where the electric plant once stood. City attorney Jim Young reminded the council that the city charter, drafted in 1978, says that the city can't lease or deed any parcel of land within 100 feet of Charlevoix waterfront without putting it to a vote of the people. The proposed pool site is 300 feet from the water's edge, but Young maintained that the site is now part of the larger Ferry Beach park parcel, which runs up to the water's edge.

piece of land as a separate parcel. It's up to the council to interpret it, Young said, adding, "As far as I'm concerned, you treat it as one parcel."

After the meeting, Young acknowledged that if the council decides the parcel is separate from the park, then the issue can't be put to a public vote. "The attorney general doesn't allow advisory votes," Young said.

Comments and questions from the council members ranged from the city's liability for the pool to the city's financial responsibility in the event that the pool authority cannot meet its funding needs. "There's no way we're going to ask the city or the taxpayers to fund this," Strawbridge said.

Council member Cheri Hoffman wanted to know if the committee considered the city's street department garage site as a possible pool site. Strawbridge said it had been considered but the street department is not prepared to vacate the site. "Personally, I don't like the site that blocks the view from the road," Hoffman said. Audience member Wendy DeGrow responded to Hoffman's concerns during public comment. "There's been a building there all along—a much higher building, and not a very pretty one," DeGrow is a therapist currently working at the East Jordan pool. The council agreed to table any action on the pool site until they receive more input from their constituents.

In other business, the council approved an amendment to the ordinance pertaining to recreational vehicle storage. The amendment allows residents to park their boats and recreational vehicles on their property without being restricted to rear yard parking. Audience member Shirley Gibson asked if the new wording would allow her neighbor to park his two-story boat in his yard. Gibson was told that there is no size or quantity restriction in the amendment.

The council approved a motion to allow Harbor Industries to do additional environmental drilling at the city airport. They will be drilling four wells and one tracer well.

The DNR also received permission from the council to make mine additional borings at sites along Lincoln and Garfield streets.

The council voted to acknowledge receipt of the environmental report on the Ionex property. State law requires that the report be made public and sent to the DNR before the city can proceed to purchase the property.

DDA approves proposed design for bridge railing

By L. Scott Swanson

The Downtown Development Authority (DDA) has voted to move forward on installing decorative metal work on the Memorial Bridge railings. The cost to the city for the additional metal work (including installation) will be between $19,000 and $25,000.

John Hess and Edith Gilbert presented the proposed design at the DDA's Nov. 10 meeting. Hess and Gilbert have been in contact with state and federal authorities in working out the design. The design ultimately arrived at (see accompanying drawing) met with approval from both state and federal officials.

A cry went up from Gilbert and other people of the community in May when the new bridge railing was installed on the west side of the bridge. The new railing was installed as part of a Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT) bridge renovation project. Gilbert and others complained that the new railing was unsafe, in that there was enough room between the horizontal rails for small children to slip through and fall into the channel. They also complained that the new bridge railing, which is a sterile gray and looks like a three-tiered highway guardrail, is ugly.

In response to the safety concerns, MDOT added two small horizontal rails between the larger rails. In regard to the aesthetic concerns, MDOT officials said they were open to suggestions for improvements, but those improvements would have to be funded by the city and couldn't adversely affect the structural integrity of the railing. Leaves and grass turned to fertile soil

By L. Scott Swanson

Now here's some interesting dirt on the City of Charlevoix. In fact, it's 800 yards of the prettiest and most fertile black dirt your little heart could desire.

In recent years the Charlevoix City Street Department has initiated a composting program. That composting program is now producing black dirt.

Throughout the year the street department collects leaves, grass clippings and brush that city residents put out at the curbside. That in itself is no small endeavor. According to street department superintendent John Martin collecting leaves in the fall takes two or three men working full time for several weeks.

Material collected is taken to the old city dump south of town. There it is piled in long rows. Each row is more than six feet high and more than 100 feet long. Martin said each row represents about one year's accumulation.

Several times each year a street department worker will take a loader out to the site and turn the piles to keep the decomposition process active. Martin said it takes about two years for the piles to decompose into usable black dirt.

The final step in the process is for the compost to be screened with a large machine. The machine, which is owned by the City of Traverse City, is a large contraption with a conveyor belt leading into a tube-shaped screen. A loader puts the compost onto the conveyor which feeds it into the upper end of the screen tube. The tube spins and as it does the small material (which is the finished product) falls out and is hauled to the black dirt pile. The larger material, which needs to decompose more before it can be used, works its way down to the bottom end of the tube where it is collected and taken back to the decomposition pile. A set of large round brushes keep the screen clean.

Martin said Traverse City received a grant several years ago to purchase the machine which at that time carried a price tag of nearly $100,000. Traverse City uses the machine for its composting project and rents the machine out to several other northern Michigan communities for a day or two each year. The machine was in Charlevoix last Tuesday and Wednesday.

Martin estimated that this year's composting project will net the city about 800 yards of black dirt. That equates to about 80 large dump trucks worth. He said the volume of raw material, i.e. leaves, grass clippings and brush chips, which made that compost was probably two to three times that many yards.

Dirt produced by Charlevoix's composting operation will be used throughout the year for various city projects. Some of it will be used in the cemetery to take care of grave sites. The dirt is also used to replace topsoil displaced along roadways and parks during work projects. Although at this time the city of Charlevoix plans to use all of the dirt it produces, Traverse City's project produces more dirt than the city has use for. The excess dirt there is sold for $10 a yard.

"We're not trying to reinvent the wheel," Martin said of Charlevoix's program. "Traverse City and some of these other cities have been into it. We're just following their lead."

Before Charlevoix began the composting program, most leaves from the community either ended up in a landfill or burned. Next year a state law will make it illegal to landfill leaves and burning leaves is becoming a thing of the past.

The machine above screens compost for several northern Michigan communities. Each community has its sticker on the side of the machine. Charlevoix's is shown in the photo to the left.

Letters to the editor

Bodem says teacher union brochure was misleading

Editor,

I wanted to respond to the telephone calls I have been receiving in regards to a statewide mailing about school finance and the current reform proposals in the Legislature.

The brochure implies that it was sent by my office. This is not the case. The brochure claims to be sponsored by "A Partnership for the Future." In fact, the brochure was sent to you compliments of the Michigan Education Association, the Michigan Federation of Teachers and the Michigan Parent Teacher Association.

While these groups are completely within their rights to send the information, they have no responsibility to make the information in the brochure factual, and legally they can call themselves any title they choose.

This letter is to help people understand exactly who provided the information in the brochure and to assure you that I had no involvement in its production or distribution.

The school reform issue continues to work its way slowly through the legislative process. The first components of a plan are just beginning to be developed and it is too early to estimate what the final package might look like.

The final decision must be based on what is best for our children. Their well being must be placed ahead of the political news of special interest groups.

Sincerely,

Beverly A. Bodem
State Representative
106th District

Drivers ask to get weather news from the media

Editor,

As post commander of the Petoskey Post, I am asking readers in this area to again assist the Michigan State Police in providing the best possible law enforcement services during the coming winter months.

With the Michigan State Police Travel Advisory Network, road conditions are reported by the Michigan State Police to local radio and television stations throughout the state. With this network, we were able to provide travel condition information to you through the local media, thus eliminating hundreds of calls to the post asking for the latest road conditions. In the past, these calls tied up existing emergency lines, prevented priority calls from coming in, and took troopers from other law enforcement assignments.

Your willingness to rely on your local media to receive travel conditions during inclement weather, just like you do for school closings, is greatly appreciated. Last winter, by not calling the post, you allowed us to keep emergency lines open and to use troopers and other post personnel for more important law enforcement services. We hope the same will occur again this year.

Sincerely,

William A. Atkins,
First Lieutenant
Post Commander, Petoskey Post

...DDA likes bridge rail design

erations, Hess also worked with DDA members to try to come up with a design which would be harmonious with other facets of the community. For example the design for the metal work incorporates some aspects of the old bridge railings which now serve as a fence in Hoffmann Park.

At the Nov. 10 meeting DDA members were receptive to the design and approved going forward with the project, but raised questions as to funding sources.

DDA board member Dan Barron said he feels the project is worthwhile, but noted the DDA always seems to be a catch-all for funding projects that arise. He asked if the city council might have other sources of funding for the bridge railing project. Mayor Dave Novotny, who as mayor is a member of the DDA board, said there are no other sources of funding for the project.

Audience member Bill Supernaw asked if leaving the bridge railing as it is could be considered an option. Gilbert replied that would be an option only if he wanted to have children falling into the channel. Supernaw said that is an emotional argument and emotions shouldn't come into play in the decision.

The DDA board voted to pursue installation of the metal work, although there was some concern about the DDA's authority to do so. City attorney Jim Young said in a letter to Mike Wiesner, "It is my opinion that the DDA is the proper entity to make a final determination regarding the plan."

Area author to sign books

Northern Michigan columnist and author Bea Smith will hold a book signing from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. on November 19 to launch the publication of her newest release "Four Seasons Cookbook."

McLean and Eakin Booksellers, 307 E. Lake, Petoskey, will host Smith in this rare public appearance as she personally autographs copies of her new book, published and printed in Michigan by Avery Color Studios of Marquette.

"Four Seasons Cookbook" is Smith's fourth book, and contains recipes from all over the United States, but it keeps its Michigan heritage close, for Bea not only reports the oldest and newest in popular foods and how to prepare them, she intersperses the recipes with seasonal observations and commentary on the history of foods.

During construction water service to some houses has been turned off for an hour or two at a time. Swern said that he has tried to notify residents a day in advance when that has had to happen. Between now and project completion, a small section of homes along the

The new water main is replacing an old four-inch diameter main which has been a trouble spot for years. The old main, which runs under the street, has been in place for more than half a century. About 40 years ago the street was redone and lowered. The old main wasn't lowered accordingly. Consequently it was left too close to the street surface and freezes in the winter unless residents living along the main leave their water running. The net effect, northside residents have had their water running constantly for more than 40 winters.

The ends of several streets have had to be temporarily blocked off during construction. Swem said about half of the streets have already been reopened and within the next week and a-half the remainder should be open most of the time.

A listing of the latest accomplishments and endeavors of local business people.

Dr. Lane has a very active practice at Charlevoix Area Hospital. He does laparoscopic surgical procedures for gallbladder removal, hernia repair, and appendectomies, as well as all traditional types of surgery both major and minor.

In addition to the aforementioned information, the book also contained general information about Charlevoix and its business and recreational pursuits. The 1940 phone book played heavily on Charlevoix as a summer resort known for fine fishing. "One of Charlevoix's chief claims to fame as an ideal summer resort is its fishing. What more need be said! The Charlevoix County Humane Society will host a Christmas Open House from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m., Sunday, Dec. 5 at the animal shelter behind the Sheriff's Dept. at 1004 Grant Street. The shelter is seeking donations of cat box filler, dog, puppy, cat and kitten food as well as monetary donations or saved grocery store receipts.

A story in the Nov. 10 Courier stated that Three R's garbage and recycling service does not offer garbage collection without recycling pick-up. That is incorrect. They do offer garbage collection without recycling pick-up.

The book also extolled some of the city's municipal facilities: "According to the 1940 book, 'Within the past few years Charlevoix has taken steps toward the cleaning up of the harbor and channels; in so far as the disposal of sanitary sewage is concerned, and they now operate probably one of the finest and well-equipped sewage treatment plants in Michigan. In 1940, Charlevoix was also quite proud of the new City Hall complex. "During 1939 the City of Charlevoix constructed a new City Hall and Fire Station. This building is now completely equipped. The building and equipment is no doubt the finest, for a town the size of Charlevoix, in the state of Michigan. The building is entirely fire-proof and contains a Community

The book also spoke of other community assets such as the school system. The enrollment of the Charlevoix Schools is 596. There are 52 enrolled in the St. Mary's Parochial School. There are 92 students from other school districts for whom the State pays tuition enrolled in our high school. Consolidation with neighboring school districts has not taken place.

The book also mentioned the local public library, which at the time contained 6,500 books as well as 36 magazines and newspapers.

Northern Lakes Economic Director Tom Johnson went before the county board of commissioners to request a 16 percent increase in the amount of money the county is contributing to the economic alliance. The county had been paying a per capita rate of 76 cents. Johnson asked for that to be raised to 90 cents per capita, which would bring the alliance an extra $3,005 from Charlevoix county.

same per capita increase is being asked of Antrim and Emmet counties, who share in the economic alliance. The county has been paying 76 cents per capita for the last nine years. When the alliance was formed, grant money from the state provided the alliance with enough working capital. When the alliance lost their grant money, Michigan State University joined the alliance and provided additional revenue, but not enough to make up for the loss of grant money.

Chuck Lent wins Courier Football Contest

The winner of this past week's contest was —. For winning, he will receive a free lunch at the Flight Deck.

With high school football wrapped up for area schools our attention this week can be completely focused on college and pro games. And some fine ones there are.

Ohio State vs. Michigan: Could Michigan pull an upset? No. Much to the dismay of Wisconsin, Ohio State is headed to the Rose Bowl. Pick - Ohio State.

Alabama vs. Auburn: Alabama is over-rated. Auburn is on probation, but is good. Pick - Auburn.

Illinois vs. Wisconsin: Although Ohio State is going to the Rose Bowl, Wisconsin is still for real. Barry Alvarez is a good coach. You have to wonder how long it will be before he moves to a school with more exposure or to a pro team.

UCLA vs. USC: As evidenced by the pounding from Notre Dame, USC ain't much this year. Meanwhile, UCLA has receiver Rodney Stokes, one of the best college receivers in the past decade. Remember Harold Carmichael of the Philadelphia Eagles? Stokes has some of those characteristics. In some ways, he also brings to mind Sterling Sharpe. Pick - UCLA.

Detroit vs. Green Bay: This is interesting because it's at Green Bay. But on the other hand Green Bay is coming off of games against two tough teams, Kansas City and New Orleans while Detroit has been healing injuries for two weeks. This is a tough call, but take the Lions. Pick - Detroit.

New York Giants vs. Philadelphia: Has anyone heard when Cunningham is coming back? Without him, the Philadelphia offense ain't much. And here's another question: How does New York Giant running back Rodney Hampton compare to Detroit Piston guard Joe Dumars? Answer - Both were draft day steals. Hampton was the twenty-second pick of the draft. He should have been top ten. Dumars was an eighteenth pick. His Piston teammates still pick on him about being taken after players such as Uwe Blabb and Bill Wennington. At the time they drafted Hampton the Giants were desperate for a good running back. Now they've got about three of them. And depth at running back is a good thing to have. You Lion fans remember where you read that some day when Barry Sanders gets injured. Pick - Giants.

New Orleans vs. San Francisco: Did New Orleans give any consideration to signing Bernie Kosar? The Wade Wilson and Steve Walsh combination just isn't that impressive. But they've still drafted well in recent years i.e. Renaldo Turnbull and Willie Roaf. The New Orleans defense lining up against the San Francisco offense should be fun to watch. Pick - San Francisco.

Tennessee vs. Kentucky: Supposedly Kentucky has a good team this year. But then Tennessee has a quarterback who some people are talking about as a future number one pick in the draft. Pick - Tennessee.

Miami vs. West Virginia: West Virginia is better than some of Miami's other opponents such as Georgia Southern and Temple, but Miami still should win. Pick - Miami.

Minnesota vs. Tampa Bay: Minnesota has been inconsistent, sometimes good and sometimes bad. Tampa Bay has been much more consistent. You can pretty much count on them to play bad. Pick -

Charlevoix deer beards abound

John Murray grew a handsome beard, but will probably have to part with it after deer hunting season. Apparently his wife doesn't like it very much. Tom Erber went with a goatee for deer season. John Haggard will be doing his hunting 32 miles offshore, on Beaver Island. Tom Meggison grew his beard back for deer hunting season, but will part with it as soon as he gets a deer. The volunteer fireman said that O.S.H.A. regulations won't let him go into a burning home with a beard. His son Justin has his own opinion about his father's beard: "Shave it off," he told his dad. Gary Brodin at the post office grew his beard for a little extra warmth in the winter. Ray Wallick is just getting started on his deer beard, but he's ahead of the game on his apparel selections, already dressing in flannel shirts and flannel lined jeans.

Court fees withheld

A state mandated increase in court filing fees met with strong distrust from the Charlevoix County Commissioners at the most recent county commissioner meeting.
The increased court fees; payable to the state, are supposed to be returned to the county courts to pay for trial court costs. The opposition from Charlevoix County commissioners to the new law, HB 4873, stems from the fact that many Michigan counties have been short-changed in their share of court funding from the state in past years.
Charlevoix County joined 79 other Michigan counties in a lawsuit against the state because court funds were inequitably distributed throughout the state, with the bulk of the money going to Wayne County.

The state adopted a new Public Act to correct the wrong done under Public Act 438. With the new Public Act, a state court fund is supposed to gather increased court revenues and return them to the counties to pay for all trial court costs. Commissioner Don Smith has little confidence that the money will be returned to Charlevoix County. He asked other commissioners to support his motion to put the revenue from the fee increases in an escrow account until the county receives written assurances from the state that the money will come back to Charlevoix. Other commissioners supported Smith's motion. Several other counties are putting the increased revenue funds in an escrow account until the state revises the wording in the new act.

BEACONS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

OF BLESSINGS

We journeyed the back roads to Grand Rapids Monday. Where usually the road between Elk Rapids and Fife Lake is pretty well deserted, it was littered with parked vehicles. A lot of folks were in the woods looking for that opening day deer. Every once in awhile, a hint of orange was visible as we zipped along. But we went by early enough that there probably wasn't time to see signs of success.

Though I don't know if I could shoot a gun, I would not mind taking a camera into the woods with some knowledgeable person. It fascinates me how some people have been preparing for this week for a long time. They have put their hunting stands up many moons ago so that the deer will think they are a natural part of the landscape. Some have laid out apples, carrots and even salt blocks in hopes of attracting a big one to their favorite spot. Considering Monday's half mist and half snowy morning, the dedication of those intrepid sportsmen and women amazes me. Cold, wet, and unavoidably damp, they patiently sit beseeching heaven for that eight point to come strolling along.

It must really be big business too. All the "Welcome Hunters" signs along U.S. 131 indicated something was happening. That big display of day-glow clothing as you walk in the door of K mart says a lot. Even the cashiers in Glen's were dressed in camouflage over the weekend.

What has always intrigued me about this is how easy it is for us to put extra effort into the things in our lives that we consider truly important. Please don't misunderstand. I like venison and am grateful for those who have shared it with me. My heart cries out wishing that more people would put even half as much effort into their faith as they do into their two week quest for a bigger rack. Those who hunt have repeatedly said that preparation is the key. That even though a "lucky shot" may occasionally come their way, there is no substitute for being ready.

If you recognize that it takes effort to make hunting a success, is it so hard to see that putting more effort into your faith can also lead to a more satisfying experience with the Lord? God went to great lengths to attract your attention.
His "blind" was the cross of the Calvary. Surrounding it are the fragrances of forgiveness, hope, and never ending love. The major difference is that God does not try to attract us in order to take a shot at us. He attracts us in order to help us learn what it really means to live.

For those of you who have already been successful, let me offer heartfelt congratulations to you. Don't forget to give thanks to the One who put your deer there in the first place. For those of you who are still trying, keep the faith and don't give up. We should all be glad that God never gave up on us!

...in 1924 school yearbooks were written in flowery prose

The Chanicleer appears to have been the equivalent of the modern day high school yearbook. It is written in flowery prose and holds predictions of greatness for the class of '24 as evidenced in the prologue to the "Annals of Ye Senior Class."

The prologue reads, "I was dead. I sat in the valley of the shadow. About me lounged the great literarians of the world. Reposing in the cow fodder was Homer, playing his

Who will fund DARE officers?

By Laurie Lounsbury

Charlevoix County commissioners sympathize with local school districts looking for a D.A.R.E. (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) officer in the schools, but they aren't inclined to put another officer on the county payroll to do the job. Several school districts have contacted county commissioners requesting that the D.A.R.E. program be reinstated in the schools. The D.A.R.E. program, previously provided by the Michigan State Police, fell by the wayside when grant money to support it disappeared. The sheriff's department wants to hire a new officer for the position of D.A.R.E. officer. Commissioner Phil Johnson was strongly opposed to that idea, saying that it should be the responsibility of the city police officers to handle the D.A.R.E. program. Boyne City has two police officers who go into the schools and teach D.A.R.E.

Charlevoix has a school liaison officer who could possibly be trained to teach D.A.R.E.

Commissioner Howard Hostler supported a D.A.R.E. officer for the sheriff's department and a new detective for the sheriff's department as well. Johnson opposed hiring a new detective. "We can utilize the Michigan State Police any time we need to. All we have to do is call them. We don't need to put it on the taxpayers," Johnson said.

Service people to receive greeting cards mouth organ, yonder by the cider press Longfellow was making faces at the hired girl; down beside the horse barn Shakespeare was digging grubs; still farther down the lane came Browning with a double-barrelled shot gun over his shoulder, singing "Maggie, Maggie, the Cows Are in the Clover;" and lastly I could just see Shelley and Keats playing tiddle-de-winks out in the orchard, and Hank Longfellow said Jane Austin was in the pantry paring her corns. And as I sat there an inspiration struck me: I gazed upon the mass of crumpled pages at my feet—I had been vainly endeavoring to write the Annals of the Class. No longer would I rack my brain. I would seek the talent of these patriarchs of the pen.

"I was dead. One by one I had asked them—Homer, Longfellow, Shakespeare, Browning, Shelley, Keats and Jane Austin. All had refused. Why? Ah, that is the point. The job was too stupendous; too colossal for them to attempt!"

In addition to extolling the virtues of each of the high school's four classes, the Chanicleer also contained passages on school related social activities which were: The "Laeti Latini" Club; The "RG" Shortland Club; The "C" Club; The Orchestra and Glee Club; and The Camp Fire Girls. Brief explanatory paragraphs which accompanied photos of each of the organizations also heaped on praise. Of the "Ho-De-Os-Sch Camp Fire" group it was written, "Camp Fire is a band of girls who appreciate the highest value in life and wish to live so that their daily lives may be the application and expression of their ideals."

The Chanicleer also had sections on the school's competitive teams: debate, football, basketball and baseball. The 1924 debate team had a 3-1 regular season record and was 1-1 in state competition, beating Elk Rapids before losing to Cheboygan.

The 1923 football team had a record of 5-2, beating Harbor

Springs, Mancelona, Boyne City, East Jordan and Traverse City while losing to Petoskey and Cheboygan. Of the football team it was written: "Under the captaincy of 'Doc' Gordon Todd, and with the efficient training and point coaching of Mr. Austin and Mr. Altenburg afforded, the team went better than it has for years and left behind it a commendable record. The school showed a rousing enthusiasm for Football and the support the team received was not surpassed by any school in the north. Even at the out-of-town games a mob of young fans always followed up their team and did their share of the rooting."

Mail carrier honored for rescuing injured man

By Laurie Lounsbury

Neither snow nor sleet will keep mail carrier Herman Heuvelhorst from making his mail deliveries, but a man lying unconscious on the sidewalk will certainly take precedence over the next mail box on his route. Heuvelhorst stopped in the middle of his route last July 6 to help Art Emmons when he found Emmons lying unconscious on the sidewalk in front of his garage. Heuvelhorst knelt down and talked to Emmons until he regained consciousness.

Emmons clearly remembers the day. "I was in the garage rearranging some sheets of plywood I had stacked, then the pile slipped and knocked me to the ground. The next thing I knew Herman was talking to me," Emmons said.

Heuvelhorst tried to make Emmons comfortable and then ran to the house and called the ambulance and Emmons' wife, Helen. In a typical small town fashion, Heuvelhorst knew without asking where to reach Emmons' wife. He does his banking at CB north, where Helen works.

After Helen arrived at the scene, Heuvelhorst quietly went on his way to finish delivering the mail. When he got back to the post office, he never said a word about the incident to anyone at work. That night, Heuvelhorst repeatedly called the Emmons residence until Helen got home. Heuvelhorst was concerned about Art and wanted to check up on his prognosis. Art had broken his hip and promptly underwent surgery.

"It's something you'd do every day, except I usually don't find people laying around on the sidewalk every day."

It was Helen Emmons who brought the incident to the attention of local postmaster, Jay Wheatley. Wheatley put in for a commendation, and was able to present it, along with a check for $500, to Heuvelhorst last week. After receiving his award, Heuvelhorst was self-effacing. "It's something you'd do every day, except I usually don't find people laying around on the sidewalk every day," Heuvelhorst said with a gentle shrug of his shoulders. After receiving the commendation, Heuvelhorst quietly departed to go deliver the day's mail.

Charlevoix High School students took a trip down memory lane that wandered through the books of their youth last week when they participated in a trivia contest based on classic children's stories. The contest was in recognition of the National Children's Book Week, and was sponsored by the library and the high school enrichment center. Finalists in the contest were Becca Chamberlain, (left) Chelsea Gorkiewicz, (right) Paul Henne, Andrew Laucher, Mike Post, and Stacy Urban. Paul Henne took first place and Andrew Laucher was the first runner up.

Workers from the Camp Pellston prison camp crews were treated to a picnic by Keep Charlevoix Beautiful (KCB) last week in appreciation for the crews' efforts in keeping Charlevoix's petunia beds free of weeds. The picnic was an indoor event at the Mount McSaubas ski lodge. In addition to helping with the petunias, the crews also do a variety of other tasks to help with the upkeep of city facilities.

KCB host end of year picnic for Camp Pellston work crews

By Laurie Lounsbury

Keeping Charlevoix beautiful takes more than grand ideas and a positive attitude. Someone actually has to hit the streets with shovels and brooms and good old elbow grease. Camp Pellston prisoners have been lending their muscle to the year round task of cleaning and grooming Charlevoix for the past four years. To show appreciation for the prisoners' efforts, Keep Charlevoix Beautiful (KCB) hosted a picnic for the prisoners at the Mt. McSaubas ski lodge. Ted Dobrowski of Tad's catered the luncheon, serving Delmonico steaks and shrimp.

"They (the prison crews) do a lot of things for Charlevoix to keep it beautiful, not just petunias," said Bruce MacArthur, one of the hosts for the picnic.

It was city manager Mike Wiesner who first thought of approaching Camp Pellston and asking for help from the prisoners. Initially the camp thought Charlevoix might be too far away to safely transport prisoners for work, but after a closer review of the distance they decided it would be safe.

...Children will be decorating city tree Friday afternoon

Friday, the day after Thanksgiving, the City of Charlevoix and the Chamber of Commerce will host the annual Community Christmas Tree Decoration and Lighting ceremony in East Park. Children are invited to place an ornament on the tree sometime between 2 p.m. and 5:30 p.m. The City's bucket truck will be present to lift children to the dizzying heights at the top of the tree. Children are invited to participate in the tree decoration by making their own weatherproof ornament and placing it on the tree.

At 5:30 p.m., following the tree decoration, there will be a brief Christmas ceremony with Santa Claus on hand to check out the tree and help sing Christmas carols. Following the ceremony, Santa will begin his trip back to the north pole with a stop at Stafford's Weathervane which will provide Santa and his Charlevoix friends with free cookies and hot cocoa. Pictures will be taken - compliments of Charlevoix Camera.

Pool committee explains Ferry Beach proposal

Editor,

Now that the Charlevoix City Council is considering Ferry Beach as a possible site for the Charlevoix Community Pool, there's been a great deal of renewed interest in our project. Many people have asked us about funding, construction, and plans to operate the indoor pool. So, to bring everyone up to date, here are some answers to the most frequently asked questions.

Q. What's different about this new pool proposal?

A. First of all, the size and scope of the indoor pool have been reduced, so the construction estimate is $650,000 instead of nearly $2.3 million. Next, Friends of the Pool are forming a non-profit corporation to oversee construction and operation, so no tax money will be needed. Finally, in response to community preference, the new pool site is not on school property, yet is still conveniently located and adjacent to a recreational complex.

Q. How has the pool changed?

A. The planned pool now has five lanes, one of which will be a ramp with a shallow, 30-inch deep instruction pool dedicated to water safety instruction and safe play for children. The ramp will provide for easy entry and handicapped access. The new plan also includes a therapeutic health spa right next to the pool.

Q. When do you plan to break ground?

A. In the Spring of 1994.

Q. How much money do you have, and how much do you need to build the pool?

A. Currently, we have $357,537 in cash, confirmed pledges, bequests, and trusts. Of these funds, we estimate $300,000 will be available to begin construction. The remaining $350,000 would be raised through in-kind services, fundraising activities, and grants from Michigan foundations.

Q. Where will money to operate the pool come from?

A. We estimate our annual operating expenses to be $116,000. That estimate is based on the cost to run similar pools in other Michigan and Wisconsin communities. Part of our operating income will come from fees paid by those who use the pool—other support is expected from local business and industry, and we'll continue to hold our successful fundraising events like the annual auction, too.

Q. Will everyone pay the same amount to use the pool?

A. Many generous people have donated funds to make the pool a reality. They come from the City of Charlevoix, the township, down state, and out-of-state. The pool will be available to everyone who lives here, works in, or visits our area—everyone will be charged equally.

Q. Why pick the Ferry Beach site?

A. It's conveniently located, close to other recreational facilities, and close to adequate parking. We're looking at the land formerly occupied by the old electric plant.

Q. What is being asked of the City of Charlevoix?

A. If the pool is built within the city at the Ferry Beach site, we'll ask the city to take care of normal outdoor maintenance—mowing, plowing and the like.

Q. What happens if the Ferry

Beach site doesn't work out?

A. Several other sites will be re-evaluated—some of which are being offered to Friends of the Pool at no cost by property owners who view the pool as a great asset to the community.

Q. We're surrounded by water! Is a pool really needed in Charlevoix?

A. As anyone who dips a toe into our lakes can attest, the Charlevoix outdoor swim season is awfully short! But a pool is more than a frivolous toy. It's a year-round facility for learning water safety, a safe, supervised, wholesome place where youngsters and teenagers can gather; good fun for the family; a training site for tomorrow's competitive swimmers; a wonderful therapeutic tool for those who are elderly, handicapped, or recovering from surgery; and a great opportunity for all of us to stay healthy and fit. In short, it's something all of us can use and enjoy for many years to come.

Sincerely,

Dave Strawbridge on behalf of the Executive Committee of Friends of the Pool

What happened to the raft from the CARL D. BRADLEY?

Editor,

November 18, 1993 marked the 35th anniversary of the sinking of the CARL D. BRADLEY in northern Lake Michigan. While it is not a time of celebration, it certainly is a time to recall and remember how the event shocked the city of Charlevoix, particularly because the USCGC SUNDEW, then homeported in Charlevoix, participated in the rescue attempt. It was an event that put Charlevoix in the national headlines for a few days but more importantly, it helped bring together the citizens of Charlevoix and the crew of the SUNDEW. The city always appreciated the presence of the Coast Guard, and the SUNDEW in particular, but for a few days the crew of the SUNDEW was thankful for the support given by the fine citizens of the city; the concern for the crew's safety and the many dependent families residing in Charlevoix. Unfortunately only two crew members of the BRADLEY survived. They were brought to Charlevoix by the SUNDEW on the afternoon of the 19th of November. It was silent, somber time as the SUNDEW came through the channel to moor near the highway bridge and off-load many bodies of the brave seamen.

mission will remain forever in my memory, as will the night of November 18, 1958.

I was able to visit Charlevoix for a day this past summer and noted in your paper the return of the BRADLEY lifeboat to Beaver Island. The SUNDEW picked up the lifeboat after it had washed up on one of the small islands near the sinking. We found the lifeboat during one of the days after the incident as we continued to look for any possible survivors.

I have a question: What ever happened to the raft from where we picked up the two survivors? We hoisted the raft on the SUNDEW after the rescue of the survivors on the morning of November 19th. The raft was delivered to the Coast Guard Depot near the railroad bridge. If anyone knows the whereabouts of the raft please contact me. The raft should join the lifeboat at Beaver Island.

Respectfully yours,

County CROP Walk exceeds funding goal

Charlevoix County CROP Walkers met their challenge and went "over the top" on October 2. One hundred forty-three walkers from the three county cities have raised, to date, $11,062.96 according to Mary Teske, walk treasurer.

Walk coordinators this fall challenged the CROP walkers to aim for a total goal of $7,000 in pledges for their six mile hike, with funds going to fight hunger locally, in the United States and abroad.

Sixty-one Charlevoix walkers raised $4,200; thirty-seven Boyne City walkers contributed $2,842.66; forty-five East Jordan walkers raised $4,020.30. Top money maker in the county was Nancy LaCroix of East Jordan who covered the six miles in her wheelchair.

One quarter of the money raised by CROP Walkers is returned to local food pantries. Last year food pantries in Charlevoix, Boyne City and East Jordan each received $540.98.

Service organizations in the county take turns providing light refreshments for the walkers at the Ironon walk destination. This year the East Jordan Rotary prepared and served hot dogs donated by the East Jordan Glen's Market, juice from Carey's Corner IGA Market and apples from Rosenthal's Orchard.

East Jordan Rotarians are selling tickets in advance and tickets can also be purchased at the door. Additional information is available by calling Bob Tambellini at 536-2440.

The Charlevoix County Department of Social Services (DSS) recently hosted a dinner in honor of the many people who serve as foster parents and volunteers. Many of those honored have opened their homes to children and helped in countless other ways for several years. (Photos courtesy Charlevoix DSS)

Foster parents and volunteers honored

Charlevoix County Department of Social Services (DSS) recently honored its Children Foster Parents and Volunteers for their service and devotion. A dinner was held at the Wolverine Dilworth Hotel in Boyne City. More than 80 foster parents, volunteers, guests, staff and board members were present for the dinner and awards. Entertainment was provided by the Hotel's own Bob "Rag Time" Darch.

In acknowledging the serious responsibilities taken on by children's foster parents Doug McCombs, Services Supervisor said, "Parents should have a basic understanding of what foster parents face. All children pose many challenges for parents on a daily basis. But the challenges facing foster parents go far beyond what most of us experience."

Special Awards and certificates were presented to the foster parents by Social Services Board Member Eliene Rouse. Robert and Rose Davis received their certificates and 5 year pin for fostering children. Lawrence and Sandra Bergmann received their certificate for 7 years of fostering children; Paul and Deborah Gelderblom received their certificate for 2 years of fostering children; James and Sandra Malewitz received their certificate for 2 years of fostering children; and Ken and Kathleen Bradley are new foster parents with 8 months of service.

Vasco Zuchiat, Volunteer Services Supervisor, said, "Volunteers provide the department with that extra push, that extra special service the huge department doesn't have. Each volunteer, no matter how small the service, has an impact in contributing to a better quality of life for people in need." Some volunteers provide direct services to clients, other volunteers provide indirect services and still others provide supportive service to enable the department to accom-

OF BLESSINGS

by JAN BOSS

Fall is basically over. We've seen the leaves turn, fall, and be raked. We've had Indian Summer. We've even had our first snow. So now we are headed into the long stretch of winter, but not before two more major celebrations of who God is: Thanksgiving and Christmas.

I looked out my window this morning and could see the clouds turning many shades of pinks and oranges celebrating the beginning to a new day. Thanksgiving is just around the corner and I always get sentimental and have many warm fuzzies about all the neat things God has given us. Each year I try to come up with a list of wonderful things to thank God for and each year the list gets longer, but the real question is: "Do I really make the list a part of me each and every day or is it just something that happens this time of the year when everyone and everything is telling me to be thankful?"

I think every day should be a celebration of life and all those little things around that we so often take for granted. I came across a writing by Ann Weems reminding me of the wonderful things we have to celebrate. Here is part of that writing:

"I celebrate balloons, parades, and chocolate chip cookies.
I celebrate seashells and elephants and lions that roar.
I celebrate roasted marshmallows and chocolate cake and fresh fish.
I celebrate aromas: bread baking, mince meat, lemons...
I celebrate seeing: bright colors, wheat in a field, tiny wild flowers...
I celebrate hearing: waves pounding, the rain's rhythm, soft voices...
I celebrate touching: toes in the sand, a kitten's fur, another person.
I celebrate the sun that shines slab dab in our faces...
I celebrate snow falling... the wondrous quiet of the snow falling...
I celebrate the crashing thunder and the brazen lightning...
I celebrate anger at injustice.
I celebrate tears for the mistreated, the hurt, the lonely...
I celebrate the community that cares... the church...
I celebrate the times when we in the church made it...
When we answered a cry.
When we held to our warm and well-fed bodies a cold and lonely world.
I celebrate the times when the Church is the church.
When we are Christians.
When we are living, loving, contributing.
I celebrated perfect love... the cross... the Christ loving in spite of...
Giving without reward...
I celebrate life... that we may live more abundantly..."

As we approach Thanksgiving let us all make up our own lists of celebrations which include all those people, places, and things that touch our lives for the better and celebrate God who encompass us each day with all the unconditional love!

Tad's brings new ethnic food to town

By Laurie Lounsbury

No one will accuse you of having bad manners if you start to salivate when you walk into Tad's delicatessen. The aroma of home baked chicken pot pies, pierogis, and stuffed cabbage is sure to get your juices flowing.

Ted and Janet Dobrowolski opened their new catering and take-out business featuring ethnic foods in August. Since then, a steady stream of loyal customers continue to find their way to the small business on U.S. 31 South.

For Ted and Janet, slipping back into the food business was as easy as slipping on a well worn cooking apron. Ted is the son of the former Jordan Inn owners, where he worked as chef for ten years. Janet also worked at the Jordan Inn, specializing in desserts.

The two now offer an ever changing array of home made ethnic foods, primarily of Polish and Scottish origin. "I thought the time was right for Charlevoix to have a few ethnic things," Ted said. Even the name of the business is a shortened version of Ted's ethnic first name, Tadeusz. Ted has a repertoire of 42 soups; so the daily soup special changes on a regular basis. Meat pies and chicken pot pies are always on the daily menu board.

The Dobrowolskis aren't concerned about launching a new business in Charlevoix at the end of the tourist season. "I feel my products are good, so eventually it will catch on and things will be fine," Ted said. He considers his take-out operation as a nice alternative to fast food. Ted is totally committed to

Open house planned

Pepper berry branches and wreaths hang enticingly from the walls and rafters of Sue Louise's rustic cabin. The inside of the building looks like it could be an elf family dwelling along with providing shelter for Louise's business, "From the Wildside."

Louise has changed her style of dried floral arrangements to encompass a more nature oriented theme. She uses no artificial sprays or dyes

Sue Louise will host an open house at her shop called, "From the Wildside." The shop focuses on the use of natural items in floral displays and uses no artificial sprays or dyes. The shop is located on Old Norwood Road south of Charlevoix.

What the Dobrowolskis may lack in location, they make up for in their desire to please the customer. Ted will make any type of food requested for catering with a few days' advance notice. Take out food can be taken hot and ready to heat or cold and wrapped for storing. "We'll do anything," Ted said.

THE UNITED STATES ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY IS ACCEPTING PUBLIC COMMENTS ON THE PETOSKEY MUNICIPAL WELL FIELD SUPERFUND SITE PETOSKEY, MICHIGAN

From DECEMBER 1, 1993 - JANUARY 29, 1994

The United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) recently completed a Baseline Risk Assessment/Focused Feasibility Study (BRA/FFS) for the Petoskey Municipal Well field Superfund Site in Petoskey, Michigan. EPA has prepared a Proposed Plan identifying the preferred alternative, along with rationale for the preference.

EPA evaluated five alternatives in addressing the groundwater contamination:

- Alternative 1. No Action
- Alternative 2. Development of a New Groundwater Source
- Alternative 3. Development of a Lake Michigan Surface Water Supply Intake and Treatment System
- Alternative 4. Treatment of Ground Water from the Ingalls Shore Well Aquifer using Air Stripping
- Alternative 5. Treatment of Groundwater from the Ingalls Shore Well Aquifer using Granular Activated Carbon.

EPA, in consultation with the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, is recommending Alternative 4 as the best method for addressing the groundwater contamination at the Petoskey Municipal Well site. This alternative may be changed, however, based upon any new information received during the public meeting or public comment period.

Copies of the BRA/FFS and the proposed plan are available for review at the Petoskey Public Library, 451 East Mitchell Street, Petoskey, Michigan 49770. A Proposed Plan Fact Sheet is also being mailed to area residents, elected officials, and other interested parties.

PUBLIC MEETING

A public meeting has been scheduled to discuss the BRA/FFS and the Proposed Plan. The meeting also provides the community an opportunity to submit oral comments. The meeting is scheduled for:

Thursday, December 2, 1993, 7:00 p.m.
Petoskey High School Auditorium
1500 Hill Street, Petoskey, Michigan

Oral and written comments will be accepted at the meeting. Written comments, postmarked before January 29, 1994, may also be mailed to:

Charlevoix kicks off holiday season

Charlevoix kicked off the Christmas season Friday with the lighting of the community Christmas tree. Children from the community decorated the tree in the afternoon and former mayor Ralph McRae did the honors at the tree lighting in the evening.

Winter tax bills will be higher than summer bills

By L. Scott Swanson

Hmmmm, now, here's an interesting early Christmas gift that came in the mail. And...oooh, it's a big one.

Charlevoix city taxpayers will be receiving their winter property tax bills this week and the bills will be for more than usual. For most Charlevoix taxpayers, the winter bill will be about 1.5 times what the summer bill was.

The main reason for the high winter bill is that virtually all of the Charlevoix Public School taxes are being levied on the winter tax bill. In the past, school taxes were divided equally between the summer and winter bills. This year that was not the case because the school's first operational millage request failed in June. A subsequent school operational millage request passed in August, but by that time summer tax bills had already been sent out. With the June failure of the school's voted operational millage, the school levied only 4.6146 mills on the summer tax bill, but will levy 19.646 mills on the winter tax bill. (For a definition of a mill and other tax terms, see the box accompanying this story.) Each mill the Charlevoix school district levies brings the school approximately $327,000 in property tax revenue. Revenue from summer taxes brought the school $1,541,878. School revenue from winter taxes will be $6,469,130.

The school district receives both allocated and voted operational millage. Allocated millage (which for the Charlevoix school system is about 9 mills) does not require voter approval. Voted millage, which is levied in addition to allocated millage, requires voter approval.

In June, a school request for 16.55 mills was rejected by a vote of 637 to 621. In August, a revised request for 14.55 mills passed by a vote of 1,022 to 711.

Local property taxes account for more than 90 percent of the Charlevoix school district's budget. Since the voted operational millage didn't pass until after the summer tax bills had been sent out, the school district had to borrow $1.1 million for fall expenses. The interest rate on the loan was 2.64 percent. The total finance cost of the loan was $16,778.

From a taxpayer perspective, the $16,778 was money that either wouldn't have had to be spent or could have been spent on school programs rather than finance charges had the June millage proposal passed. On the other hand, the difference between the June millage which failed and the August millage which passed was a tax decrease of $654,000.

If present school finance reform efforts by the state legislature are successful, next summer's property tax bills could be significantly lower. Lower property taxes would be offset by increases in other taxes, such as sales taxes and possibly state income taxes.

Like other school officials throughout the state, Charlevoix school business manager has been watching state legislative efforts closely. "There's still going to be a big push to settle this thing in December," he said. "Your guess is as good as mine as to what's going to happen."

City tax bills are sent out by the City Treasurer's office. City Treasurer Rick Brandt said that he hoped to have the bills in the mail by Monday with taxpayers receiving them within the next two to three days. Although the bills go out in December, payment is not due until Feb. 14.

In addition to the school tax situation, another factor which will make winter property taxes higher this year is the addition of $909 of a mill by Charlevoix County to cover start-up costs of a 9-1-1 emergency phone system.

Property tax terms

Market value - The price a home would theoretically sell for.
State Equalized Value (SEV) - Half of market value.

A mill - $1 for every $1,000 of SEV.

Total property taxes - Number of mills (.001 per mill) multiplied by SEV.

Listed below is a comparison of the summer and winter property tax bills for a Charlevoix city homeowner with a home with a market value of $80,000.

| Summer tax bill | Winter tax bill |
|--------------------------------|-------------------------------|
| City operations - $340 | County operations - $167.49 |
| City debt - $52.40 | County transit - $8.91 |
| City infrastructure - $146.40 | Grandvue - $26.61 |
| School - $184.58 | School operations - $766.58 |
| | County 9-1-1 - $35.64 |
| Total - $723.38 | Intermediate school - $84.99 |

Pull the dead petunias

Editor,

The dead petunias and weeds along the streets do not enhance the beauty of Charlevoix. These dead plants detract from the beauty of our town and leave it looking shabby and neglected. The following poem offers a suggestion on what to do.

"When the Bloom is Gone"

In Charlevoix the petunias grow
Along the street in an endless row
While blooming flowers line the street
"Charlevoix the Beautiful" is hard to beat.

All summer petunias brighten up our town
Until fall weather leaves them
They are ugly for the next two months or so
Or until winter covers them with snow.

There is "Petunia Planting Day" each spring
With a picnic, volunteers - the whole thing
There should be "Petunia Pulling Day" each fall
With the same ballyhoo we could pull them all

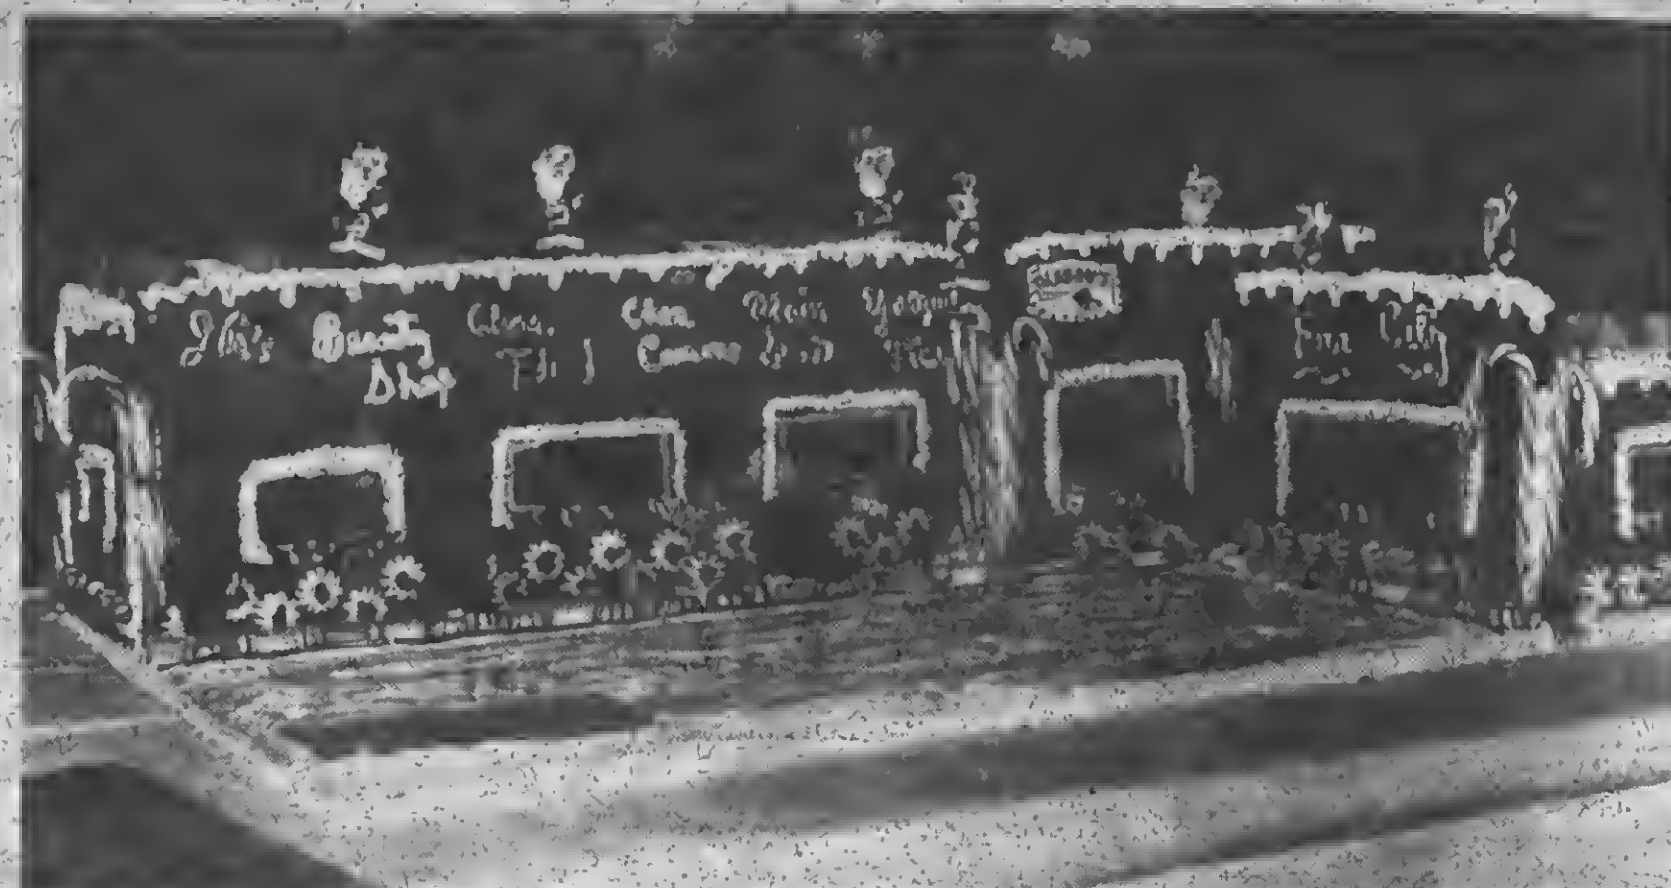

Pull the dead flowers, weeds, everything
It would look better now, and in the spring
With the dead stuff gone from along the street
Our quaint village would again be neat.

There would be a bonus here
There would be less weeds next year
That's what every flower grower needs
Less and less of those pesky weeds

Then all the work is done
Not be left out and miss the fun
The Petunia Truck could lumber through
To "touch-up" and wash away the debris too.

There now, I have put my two cents worth in
For better or for worse
Now I must apologize for writing such lousy verse.

Charlevoix Courier Wednesday, December 1, 1993 - PAGE 5

(Editor's note: The following information was submitted to the Courier by Kenneth Heining. Heining studied economics at the University of Michigan and has remained interested in the field throughout his life. The information which follows are his notes from an annual conference he attends.)

by KENNETH HEININGER

I recently had an opportunity to "listen in" on two conferences sponsored by the University of Michigan: a study of methods of projecting results of international trade sponsored by Professor Robert Stern; and the annual conference on the economic outlook for the U.S., our region and the State of Michigan, sponsored by Professor Saul Hymen.

Over the years, since my time as a U of M student and a continuing observer, the arrival of computer technology has encouraged increased use of mathematical "models" using equations and formulae in prediction. It is my observation that room for error remains from failure to include all appropriate items in the model equations. This calls for much continuing study of past predictions and re-study of appropriate information input to the model. Less experience exists in the international trade field. Therefore, as in all of the studies published on the effects of NAFTA, there is likely to be much difference in opinion about future effects of international trade policies.

Two generalizations can probably be made. (1) Most qualified professional economists see long term (over several decades) gross domestic product (this includes goods and services) increases for all trading partner nations under free trade conditions. They see the "good" from this exceeding the shorter term troubles that are caused by dislocation and relocation of jobs, possible lower wages and whole industries moving in the process. (2) A consensus of economist and political persons seems to be that at, and from this time, it will be impossible to operate a governmental-managed trade policy (we used to call this fair trade) and therefore the best policy for the USA is to emphasize increased export sale of whatever goods and services we can find in international market for, and to put up with shorter term possible pressure on our labor's general wage level and the possible short term elimination of some jobs for some of our people. These economic groups would favor this thinking for the US approach to trade matters involving all areas of the world including the Asian countries.

Economists taking a quick look at NAFTA under this policy seemed to feel that there would be a 50,000 to 200,000 job dislocation and relocation; one future activity model displayed a downward pressure against future labor wages of only two-tenths of one percent; a 2 percent decrease in capital deployment in US; substantial gains for financial, insurance, electronic and communications, trucking and heavy equipment industries producing above average wage payments. Some fabricating plants will move to lower wages.

The economic outlook conference always takes a more detailed look at some factors affecting the economic outlook. These include, (1) consumer attitudes, (2) availability and interest cost of borrowing, (3) wage prospects.

Some quick summaries would include the following.

1. Consumer outlook is generally a lot more up-beat than one year ago but not as optimistic as six to eight months ago. Consumers believe it is now a good time to purchase and finance a home and that this is most true in the Midwest-Great Lakes region. They believe that general price inflation will increase through 1995. Persons over age 48 expect to be more comfortable with their real income than do

FAMILY

Rogers - Seymour

Victoria Susan Rogers and Michael Kent Seymour, Jr., were joined together in marriage on September 18 in an afternoon wedding at the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix. 150 guests witnessed the double ring rites performed by the Reverend Phil Schairbaum and Reverend Phillander Carter of the Christ Episcopal Church.

The bride is the daughter of Barbara Rogers and the late Richard Rogers of Charlevoix. The groom is the son of Jean and Michael Seymour of Charlevoix.

The church was decorated with white roses, white carnations and pinks.

The bride was escorted down the aisle by her mother. The bride wore a full length satin gown accented with delicate lace and sequins in pastel on a fitted bodice with a bow of satin on the back. She carried a bouquet of white roses, purple iris and greens.

Music at the ceremony was provided by "Magic with Maggie and Murray." They performed "Right Here Waiting" by Richard Marx for the processional, and "Cross My Heart" by George Strait during the Unity Candle.

The matron of honor was Michelle Stevens. The bride's attendants were Christine Turner, Shan Jones and Doretha Anderson, all of Charlevoix. They wore off the shoulder, deep purple dresses with ankle length hems. They carried a single white rose with greens and a cream ribbon.

The flower girl was Rebekah Schaberg of Paducah, Ky. She wore a deep purple dress with an ankle length hem. She carried a basket of brightly colored rose petals which she threw as she walked down the aisle.

The best man was Andrew Monteith of Charlevoix. Groomsmen were Steve Lenhart, Chris Seymour, brother of the groom, and Donald Zipp, all of Charlevoix. Ring bearer was Ryan Callender, cousin of the groom, of Novi. They all wore black tuxedos with purple paisley cummerbunds and bow ties.

A reception was held at the Belvedere Casino, given by the bride and groom with help from family and friends. The casino was decorated with candles and balloons. The cake was served by Julie Schaberg and Debbie Rogers, sisters of the bride.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents at Nanhy's Restaurant the evening before the wedding.

BEACONS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

OF BLESSINGS

We went over the river and through the woods to grandmother's house in Tennessee last week. Most of the journey was on expressways, but every once in awhile we would get off and check out smaller towns. It was kind of neat to see Christmas decorations almost everywhere. Main Street U.S.A. is aglow with lights of all kinds. Shopping centers were bursting at the seams in holiday anticipation. The question that struck me was what were they anticipating?

In a previous pastorate, the manager of our local KMART was a member of our church. One Friday night, Harold called me in a panic. He had scheduled breakfast with Santa Claus for about fifty kids the next morning and his Saint Nick had just called him saying he was sick. Would I help him out and fill in as the jolly old soul for all those little kids? It sounded like an adventure. I accepted immediately.

There is something about putting on that red suit that changes you. You sense the love that people expect of you and you discover that "ho-ho-ho" comes surprisingly easy when every piece is in place. Walking through the restaurant with the kids was great fun. But the real challenge came when I sat in the magic chair and let the children unfold their wish lists in my lap. Yes, as you might gather, most of them asked for toys. But every once in awhile, one would come along that would jerk my heart right out of its chest. "Could you make my Mom and Dad stop fighting all the time?" "My grandpa's sick and I'm scared he's going to die." "Would you give my Mom a job for Christmas?"

Thank the Lord that children are open and honest with their feelings. That's something I wish we'd hold on to as we grow up. That's why I also find myself asking with all the decorations, all the sales, and all the other festivities, do we realize what it is that we are really anticipating?

If the children could ask such deeply personal things of Santa Claus, just imagine the hope and the strength that would swell up in their hearts if we would help them understand that Christmas marks the birth of Jesus Christ, God's Son, our Savior. Sadly, as Santa Claus, a lot of wishes I heard could only be answered with "we'll see" or "I'll talk to your folks." With men and women, even the most heart felt wishes are sometimes impossible. If you learn nothing else out of our voyage together, remember that with God, all things are possible.

We have gotten to where we promote Christmas as a time of fantasy and wonder. A little bit of wonder has always been good for the soul. But in this case, the true wonder comes from focusing on what really happened long ago in a stable at a small country town called Bethlehem. The birth of Jesus is what brings both the wonder and hope to Christmas. He can make anything new again.

Eastern Star members honored

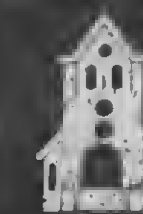

Charlevoix Chapter #72, Order of the Eastern Star, met Nov. 17, with Worthy Matron Esther Carey conducting the meeting. Honored Guest was Katharine Early, Matron, Membership Promotion Committee for the Grand Chapter, O.E.S., Michigan. Mrs. Early brought information from the Grand Chapter, including the fact that 29 Grand Jurisdictions, Order of Eastern Star were present, including members from Italy and Mexico, at the Grand Chapter sessions recently held at Western Michigan University. A banner made by Beverly Plum, Charlevoix, was displayed.

Charlevoix Chapter #72 will host the School of Instruction to be held Monday, Dec. 20, at 7 p.m. Guest Chapters will be Beulah Chapter, East Jordan, and Evangeline Chapter #95, Boyne City. Pamela Waac, Associate Grand Conductress will conduct the joint school at Charlevoix.

In other business, it was noted that a donation had been made by the officers to the Peggy Carey Northway Scholarship Fund, Charlevoix Hospital, in honor of Esther and Tom Carey for their past year of service; a donation was made to the Masonic Home for their Christmas Happiness Fund; a donation was made to the Charlevoix Christmas Project for socks to be given to the needy children; a donation was made to the Golden Age Fund in memory of deceased member Marva Poole, Charlevoix, and it was suggested that instead of a gift exchange for the Christmas program that all members bring sacks of food which will be given to the Charlevoix Food Pantry.

...economic forecast contains a mixture of messages

those that are younger under the conditions that they expect during the next five years. More persons feel in position to borrow, but caution is expected.

2. The consensus is that long term bank interest rates will rise by three quarters of one percent with short term rates increasing slightly more through 1995 and that the Federal Reserve system will move rapidly to encourage this should rate of inflation move toward 4 percent. Financial markets will be in position to make personal and commercial borrowing available.

3. Considerable pressure from various sources against wage increases is anticipated. While it is expected that overall total real wages (wage increases minus price increases) will increase by 2 percent in 1994 and 1.6 percent in 1995, many will experience no increase and even some decrease.

To summarize the USA economic outlook that was presented, one can best paraphrase items from Professor Hyman's own summary: The limping annual expansion rate of 2.4 percent during the past two years is far below the rate experienced in past post recession periods. While it is not expected that the expansion will end any time soon, an early vigorous expansion is not anticipated any time soon. Professor Hyman's group expected gross domestic product to increase at 2.7 percent in '93, 2.4 percent in '94, 2 percent in '95. These forecasts of gross activity are somewhat lower than those issued lately by Business Week and by economist Diane Swonk of the First National Bank of Chicago who also spoke at the conference.

Swonk expects the Midwest states surrounding Chicago to fare a bit better than the national averages during 1994 and 1995. This may not apply to Michigan, however, according to a consensus of forecasts. Some comparisons through 1995 are: Unemployment rates: National - 6.5 percent, Regional - 6.1 percent, Michigan - 6.7 percent. Growth of real income: National - 1.6 percent, Regional - 1.6 percent, Michigan - 1 percent.

A brief attention was also given to National budget considerations by several participants. A consensus on the future rate of deficit seemed to now be $237 billion in 1993, $170 billion in 1994, $152 billion in 1995. Conferees seemed to agree however that in the years following 1995 the rate of deficit would again rise rapidly if conditions, rules and taxes stayed the same as they are now. Consensus included: (1) Use of government funds for health care purposes is expected to increase considerably between 1995 and 2000 under the present rules, and what will happen under changes in rules and methods is unknown, but increase is more likely than decrease, (2) studies indicate that if rules are not changed, more persons will retire sooner and individual pensions and benefits will be greater thus considerably increasing the annual cost from governmental sources.

It is interesting to note that economists present seemed not to be too concerned about a national budget deficit of $150 billion in 1995 (2.2 percent of the gross domestic product), but showed concern if it were to increase. Some other economists that I visit with occasionally would be happier with half of that figure and are particularly concerned with the possible return to higher interest rates causing a substantial increase in federal interest cost of the federal debt.

My comment is that increases in taxes and various user fees should be expected.

Icy road conditions causing traffic accidents

Following roll over, driver and passenger escape before truck explodes

With the onset of winter road conditions, traffic accidents are picking up in Charlevoix County. Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department deputies responded to roll-over accidents on both this past Friday and Saturday.

Friday, Nov. 26 a Harbor Springs man escaped from his pick-up truck before it caught fire and exploded. John Napier was coming down a hill on Reycraft Road near Zenith Heights Road when he lost control on the ice and went off the road and rolled his 1984 pick-up.

He and his passenger were wearing their seat belts and were uninjured. They got out of the truck and went to a near-by home and called police. While they were making the phone call, another driver came by, saw the accident scene and stopped. At that time, the truck caught fire and a few minutes later exploded. The witness hadn't seen anyone get out of the vehicle before it exploded and called the police with that information.

Having received two phone calls with conflicting information and not knowing for sure whether or not someone was in the vehicle, the sheriff's department dispatched the Boyne City Fire and ambulance units to the scene. When officers arrived at the accident scene, they confirmed that nobody was in the vehicle at the time of the fire.

Shortly after noon, Nov. 27 another roll-over accident occurred on Behling Road, west of Jaquay Road in Wilson Township. A 1982 Subaru station wagon driven by Shawn Lee Glacken, 21, of East Jordan went out of control on an icy hill and then went off the hill, over an embankment and rolled over. Glacken injured his neck and a passenger in the vehicle, Stephanie Kay Hanecow, 17, of Boyne City sustained a head injury. The Boyne City Fire Department assisted at the scene and the Boyne City Ambulance transported both victims to Northern Michigan Hospital for treatment.

The accident is still under investigation. No citations have been issued at this time. Alcohol is not believed to have been a factor.

Several other entrants in this past week's contest finished with 9-1 marks. The game which tripped up the most people was Penn State's win at Michigan State.

Courier picks for this past week were 8-2: Michigan State was robbed and Green Bay got lucky in the final seconds. For the year, the Courier's picks were 60-34.

Sponsors for this year's contest were: Pat McKeown's Dodge City; Pat McKeown Ford Inc.; Paul Bunyan Lanes and Flight Deck Bar; and South Point Auto Sales.

An interesting facet of this year's contest was that in addition to local people dropping their entries off at the office, we also received faxes in entries. Some of the faxes entries were sent to us from mid-Michigan and Florida.

BUSINESS

Charlevoix based gas distribution firm still growing

Due to success Michigan Gas Exchange expands and diversifies

By Ralph McRae

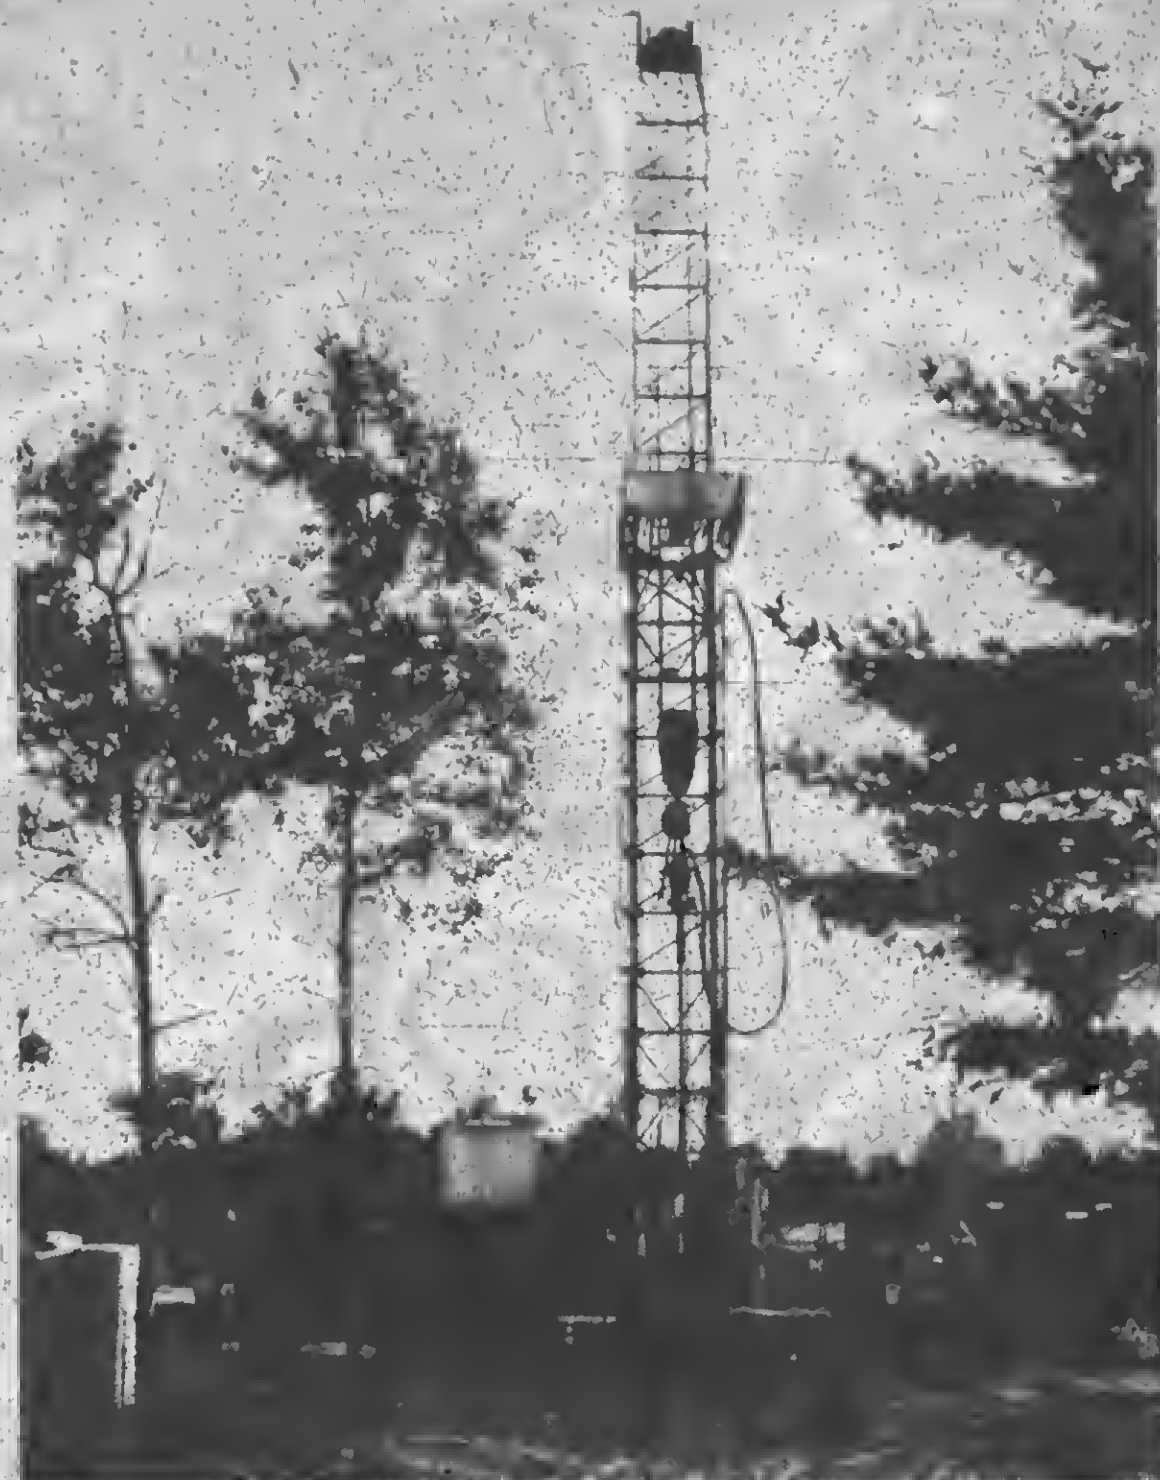

In May of 1991 readers of the Charlevoix Courier learned of a company in our community that is in the business of selling large volumes of natural gas. At that time, the company had already been selling natural gas for five years, operating out of its office on the second floor of 211 Bridge Street.

In 1986, the federal government deregulated the natural gas business, making it possible for any independent corporation to sell natural gas. Thomas LaVanway took advantage of the deregulation and formed Michigan Gas Exchange. With a long background in working with exploratory companies seeking the location of gas and oil reserves, LaVanway realized the potential of being a successful broker of natural gas.

Initially, the thrust of the operation involved buying millions of cubic feet of gas in the Gulf of Mexico and using someone else's transmission lines to bring the gas to Michigan and other neighboring states. Selling the gas only to high volume users allowed Michigan Gas Exchange to offer good prices. Working out of the office on Bridge Street and using the most modern communication systems to keep in touch with the world Michigan Gas Exchange has grown rapidly. In the 30 months since the first interview for the Courier, the company's sales figures have grown from $20 million to $35 million annually.

In 1991, LaVanway, working with geologist Sally Somsel, leased 25,000 acres of land in Antrim

County. It was to become the largest contiguous gas field in Michigan. Beyond that, through the middle of it ran a 10-inch gas transmission pipe. LaVanway successfully drilled 100 gas wells in 1992. He also is working with two untapped fields, each with about a 30 well potential. The operation has now been opened up to outside investors. Other corporations are also forming partnerships with LaVanway's operation. For example, Mich-Con is now a co-partner in some projects.

In recent months LaVanway has branched out in his operations and formed new corporations. One of the corporations buys natural gas from drillers who have no market outlets. Another is in the process of developing two new oil/gas fields in basins recently discovered in Michigan.

LaVanway, now 38, has since age 18 been involved in looking for gas and oil reserves all over the world, both on land and off shore. He has served as a consultant to several international corporations.

The offices in Charlevoix have been expanded with the number of employees doubling to 16. Ten other people work out in the field. On the walls of the office are numerous maps showing the location of gas and oil wells throughout Michigan, plus all of the pipe lines carrying oil and gas throughout the state. On the roof of the building housing the office is a satellite dish that instantly reports information concerning the oil and gas industries.

Much of the information for this story was provided by Cheri Hoffman, administrative director and coordinator of the multi-faceted business. Five Charlevoix High School graduates are among the company's personnel. Dennis Morgridge and Keith Bales sell gas in Chicago. Donna (Ostrum) Drury markets gas in Michigan. Penny (Henley) Gregory is the receptionist and Jami Staley is an administrative assistant.

Sixty-two counties in Michigan have gas and oil wells. Oil was first discovered in Michigan in 1900 and gas in 1909. In 1992 more than $800 million worth of gas and oil was produced in Michigan. The cost of natural gas at the well head averages $2.70 per thousand cubic feet. Residential customers normally pay $4.88 per thousand cubic feet while industrial customers pay 75 cents less for the same amount.

Charlevoix and Emmet Counties are two of six counties in lower Michigan which have no gas or oil wells. There are no wells in the Upper Peninsula.

Charlevoix man helps radio stations across the nation

By Laurie Lounsbury

Do what you love and success will follow. That old adage is clearly seen in the rapt expression on Tim Moore's face as he talks about his expanding radio consulting business. Moore recently formed the Audience Development Group with managing partner Alan Mason and Bob Mitchell, manager of their Dallas, Texas office. Moore's enthusiasm for the business spills out over his office desk in Charlevoix like the piles of marketing data and research reports waiting for his perusal.

Unlike most traditional businesses which are housed under one roof, Moore and his partners are spread out across the country, with Mason in Portland, Oregon and Mitchell in Dallas, Texas. State of the art technology allows them to study radio, market trends and conduct research studies in all parts of the country. "This business is not people or equipment intensive," Moore said, although he acknowledged that a considerable amount of travel is part of the formula for success.

one position in northern Michigan before selling the station in 1990. The tides in the radio industry carried Moore into radio consulting work. Moore saw a niche that needed to be filled after deregulation in radio. "The business is in a permanent white water now," Moore said of radio. Because of that, radio stations can no longer wing their way through the airwaves. Moore is convinced that data based marketing is the future for successful radio programming and strategies.

Moore and his partners have an impressive list of success stories on their consulting credentials. Moore attributes a large portion of their success to the fact that they don't provide formula answers to their different clients. They research the listening habits of each individual market area for every station they consult. Moore considers their consulting style as a Mayo Clinic approach, treating each station as a unique and separate entity and carefully examining each aspect of a radio station, from programming to management. "We're advocates and problem solvers," Moore said.

Major league pitcher to visit Charlevoix Friday

Roger Mason, pitcher for the National League baseball champion Philadelphia Phillies, will visit Charlevoix Friday morning. Mason will be the guest speaker at a meeting of a Charlevoix Men's group at 7 a.m. at Burger King. The group of men from several local churches get together informally once a week for coffee and breakfast. Mason is from Bellaire and returns there during the off season.

The 1993 Phillies team in general had a reputation for being kind of a wild and woolly crew. In contrast to the team's image, Mason is a devout Christian and a laid-back, easy going guy from a small town in northern Michigan.

Mason was the Phillies' most effective relief in both the playoffs and in the world series. He has pitched in the National League playoffs in each of the last three years, twice with Pittsburgh prior to this year with Philadelphia. Local men who wish to bring their sons Friday to meet Mason are welcome to do so.

JUST CARING

A Citizen Forum for Health Care Reform

Sponsored by Northern Michigan Hospital/Burns Clinic Foundation

All of us must share in the responsibility for making decisions about our health and health care system...
not just doctors, not just health care administrators,
not just legislators,
not just business leaders...

Please join us in an interactive conference about health care policy reform in our state and nation.

Thursday, December 9th • 5 to 9 pm
Petoskey Holiday Inn

Keynote Speaker

Leonard M. Fleck, Ph.D. is an associate Professor of Medical Ethics/Health Care Policy in The Center for Ethics and Humanities in the Life Sciences at Michigan State University, where he has been since 1985. Dr. Fleck is president of the Medical Ethics Resource Network of Michigan and director of the "Just Caring" project. In addition, he has served on the Governor's Task Force on access to health care as the staff ethicist, and contributed two papers to their final report.

The Issues

- Almost one million citizens in Michigan are without health insurance.
- Corporate health insurance premium increases average 20-30% for each of the past several years.
- A Michigan Medicaid budget in excess of $3 billion that pays doctors only 39% of charges, and that is approaching 20% of the total state budget.
- Cost shifting by hospitals to the corporate sector in order to cover the costs of care for the poor and uninsured.
- A Medicare program that now pays only 50% of health care costs of the elderly who, as a group, have more than three times the health needs of the non-elderly.
- The uncontrolled proliferation of very costly life-prolonging medical technology that provides only marginal health benefits, such as bone marrow transplantation at $200,000 per procedure.
- Unwillingness on the part of the vast majority of both health care providers and consumers to accept any form of rationing or resource restriction.
- Competition among hospitals that is costly and inefficient.

The Goals

- Articulate a vision of what a "just" and "caring" society ought to be with regard to health care. This should not be a utopian vision, but instead, a vision that recognizes limits and the need for trade-offs among competing social values.
- Identify the most serious (and correctable) injustices and inefficiencies in our current system for financing and delivering health care.
- Articulate a set of basic social values and considered judgments of justice that just and cost-worthy health care policies in our society must satisfy.
- Articulate a set of principles for priority setting among health needs that best capture what a "just" and "caring" society (constrained by resource limits) ought to be.
- Articulate a comprehensive set of policy options for financing health care, and containing health costs that are congruent with the priority setting principles and basic social values to which we will have committed ourselves.

The December 9 forum is the first in a series.

Charlevoix offers great Christmas shopping

By Edith Gilbert

What's the best little outdoor mall in Michigan? There's nothing better, believe me, than Christmas shopping on Bridge Street. On these three short blocks you can find everything ranging in price from chewy toffees at 40 cents a piece to a hand-designed sweater that rivals any masterpiece for $1,000.

Stroll with me from shop to shop and discover the perfect gift for every man, woman and child on your Christmas list. Starting with CRAVINGS near the bridge you will be welcomed by the spicy fragrances of the holiday season. Here you will find kits to decorate your own gingerbread house, scented pine cones, packages of frank incense and myrrh — everything from soup to nuts including packaged Christmas Jordan almonds. They will design creative Christmas Gift Baskets with an Italian or Mexican theme if you like, for a special person.

Next door is the CHARLEVOIX BOOK Shop that just opened this summer. Mary Jane Barnwell plans to be open all winter. You'll find a big selection of books on tape and large print books along with a wide selection of paperbacks and some interesting rubber stamp book plates here.

Peek in to WIDLUMS and check out the elegant dried wreaths made of twigs, eucalyptus and decorated with silk flowers and artificial fruit. Don't miss the musical Christmas balls and ornaments. You'll find hand-blown glass bowls, vases, sconces and a Dragonfly Tiffany Lamp for your home. Don't overlook TRAVERSE BAY WOOLENS. This traditional woolen store has a new image, new atmosphere and new merchandise. Check the adorable Christmas tree ornaments for trout fishermen and hunters.

On the corner is a spectacular new shop called NORTHERN POSSESSIONS. They ship their one-of-a-kind pieces all over the United States and to far-away cities such as Milan, London and Hamburg. Items

During open house hours several Charlevoix stores will have a "bull's eye" in their front window. Shoppers may register at those stores for a special Christmas drawing. The drawing will select four winners. Each of the winners will receive a shopping spree good for $100 in merchandise from participating Charlevoix businesses.

In addition to the open house, Santa Claus will arrive at East Park on the City fire truck at 1:30 p.m. to pass out boxes of candy to children. At 2 p.m. children are invited to Charlevoix Cinema for a free full length holiday film feature sponsored by CB North bank.

Santa will be arriving in downtown Charlevoix at approximately 1:30 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 4. He will pass out boxes of candy and hear Christmas requests in East Park near the corner of Clinton and Bridge Streets.

range from a Jack-in-the-Box Christmas toy, to hand-crafted multi-color mittens, Holiday Gold glassware, fancy linens, designer jackets, and hand-made furniture by American Craft Artists from all over the United States.

On the next block, a shop like METTLERS sells a fine line of sport clothes for men and women, and provides helpful services to their fashionable customers. They fill special orders over the telephone, they gift wrap and mail. They do alterations and deliver. What more could you ask?

The BAHNHOF, next door, is also service oriented. They specialize in trendy ski wear and accessories for the slopes.

You don't have to drive to Grand Rapids or Traverse City to shop. Save the money you spend on gas and drop into the SHOP OF THE GULLS. Here you will find a wide variety of gifts for men and women in a wide variety of prices, including a Christmas doormat, Christmas pot pourri baskets, candles, magnetic note pads and a complete selection of Christmas Spode Chinaware. They also have pure silver dipped pine cones, a most attractive gift for those who have everything.

Cut across the street and check out another clothing store, ANCHORS. You will find some marvelous old fashioned flannel men's bathtobes, as well as terrycloth robes, nautical sport watches, and boxer shorts with sport motifs. And they will gift wrap for you.

If you are looking for Christmas Cards, inexpensive jewelry, T-shirts, sweatshirts and trinkets, stop in at WISHES AND WHIMSIES for stocking stuffers and the like.

On the same block is the well-established gift shop, THE APPLE TREE. You'll find here a large selection of collectible Santas and holiday ornaments, and inexpensive, washable, cotton throws in more than 50 designs, that can be hung on the wall, used as a tablecloth or for cuddling up in front of the TV. People who are interested in the popular lighthouse motif, will find a good selection of prints and posters as well, by Michigan artists, that can be gift wrapped and mailed.

And who wouldn't like a box of MURDICK'S fudge? They will be open during the holidays and will take orders for mailing.

Across the street is CAREY'S SHOES, where one can select a practical gift from a nice variety of bedroom slippers, winter boots for men, women and children, or warm wigwam socks to go with the currently popular hiking boots.

You may be surprised to find a large selection of stuffed animals, including Barney, at the TRADE-MARK clothing store for Christmas giving. They also have a nice selection of gloves, scarves and boxer shorts with Christmas designs, among their London Fog jackets.

Heading south, you'll find perfumes, wallets and boxes of candy on the corner in the CENTRAL DRUG STORE.

Next comes AMERICAN SPOON FOODS with their original selection of birch bark gift packages, filled with anything you can think of including dried morels, cherries, berries, persimmons, apples, and blueberries. They carry a souvenir Northern Gift box, ready for mailing, filled with a variety of preserves, honey, maple syrup, a Michigan cookie cutter and not-to-be-overlooked — a genuine Petoskey stone.

Adjacent is the attractive J. PHILLIPS dress shop with novelty Christmas sweaters, scarves, gloves, jewelry, and purses. For those interested in saving the Everglades, choose a Jerry Garcia necklace since a portion of the income is allocated to the Sierra Club.

KOUCKY GALLERY has exquisite hand-painted glass Christmas ornaments and hand-blown glass tree ornaments as well as very attractive hand-blown glass salt and pepper shakers that are moderately priced. You will find many lovely pieces of hand-crafted jewelry by American Artists. Of course, there's the popular Sue Bolt corner filled with ceramic pieces and tiles that are suitable for Christmas presents.

For children's toys, you can't miss when you stop by the ROCKING HORSE TOY COMPANY. There are magic tricks, games and even the popular ant farm. Madame Alexander has come out with a new line called the Well Dressed Bears that's terrific. But best of all, if you are looking for a traditional Old English Firecracker to put on your Christmas table, they have these too. Large ones, ten to a box, and filled with toys and hats in each one. The price is right.

If you are looking for very attractive sweatshirts with winter designs and a good-looking "Up North" logo, stop in at CHARLEVOIX WEAR. Nautical minded spirits will enjoy owning a sweatshirt with a large, overall map of the "Shipwrecks of the Great Lakes" on it.

On the corner, THE CLOTHING COMPANY has some nice turtle-neck shirts, blouses and night shirts with holiday motif at medium prices.

Just off Bridge Street (but not for long as they are moving into the old Wharfside building) is the NORTH SEAS GALLERY. People who are looking for Art Nouveau or Art Deco pieces for their home will find it here. This shop specializes in European paintings, furniture, china, silver and glass.

Only in Charlevoix will you find a perfectly charming gift section of Amish hand-made quilts and furniture in the front window of the ACE HARDWARE STORE, along with a large selection of baskets from the Orient.

Directly across the street from the Chamber of Commerce is the beautiful, newly remodeled building that houses three new businesses, all ideally suited for Christmas shopping. HARMONY HOUSE stocks 10,000 CDs and more than 5,000 cassettes, and attracts shoppers from Traverse City to Cheboygan. You will not just find the newest, but a range from pop artist to classical, jazz and easy listening, as well as country music and Broadway shows. HARMONY HOUSE carries children's cassettes and CDs and if you aren't sure, you can even purchase a gift certificate.

The big, bright BRIDGE STREET BOOK SHOP carries a large selection of children's books, in addition to their 8,000 titles in stock. They offer a Christmas Wish List Service, which means you can select a title or titles and then family or friends can buy them for you at Christmas-time. This service is particularly suitable for teacher. Of ten students or parents are at a loss what to give teachers, either for themselves or for the classroom.

More good gift ideas may be found in the new shop ILLUSIONS that opened this summer. There are 21 stores east of the Mississippi, but there are only two stores in Michigan. They carry replica jewelry of pieces by Tiffany and Cartier Jewelers. Some of ILLUSIONS' simulated pearls and stones are in real silver and gold settings. You'll find men's cufflinks as well as necklaces, bracelets, pins and rings.

And finally, there's AARDVARK STUDIO. Terry Salmonson has been busy copying and framing treasured old family photographs for Christmas giving. Remember too, his prize winning Charlevoix scenes are always welcome.

So there you have it. All in all, it's a good idea to go browsing on Bridge Street for big beautiful bargains. Many of the shops have great things on sale, and you will like the personal attention, the service and helpful advice the shop owners and sales staff have to offer.

The story above was written by Edith Gilbert. Gilbert is a columnist for the Charlevoix Courier and a veteran Charlevoix shopper.

Charlevoix has its own collectable Christmas ornament

Tree trimming goes through fashion phases just like our own wardrobes do. Yet certain collectable ornaments will remain classically popular, like the bright red crew neck sweater you pull on at Christmas time each year.

Jeanine Wallace, owner of Shop of the Gulls, has had many years in the gift shop business to observe the tree trimming trends, some of which are unique to our area. For the last two years Wallace has earned a Charlevoix Egg ornament - a hand-blown egg, hand-painted with miniature scenes of Charlevoix.

Wallace consigned an artist to do the Charlevoix eggs exclusively for her shop. Wallace said the egg is very popular as a collectible ornament.

Wallace is seeing a trend right now, to the rustic, lodge look in ornaments. She carries old fashioned tree candle holders and old time Santa ornaments. She's also fond of the novelty ornaments which she says sell the best with men, such as the fish fly ornament.

Perennial favorites for decking the boughs are Santas, toy soldiers, and wooden toy ornaments. In Charlevoix, Wallace said any type of boat ornament is also popular.

For those with a taste for nature blended with Christmas shine and sparkle, Wallace sells real pine cones dipped in silver. The effect of silver pine cones against a green tree is quite spectacular.

Christmas cards help send best wishes to friends

Barb Kluczynski, owner of Barb's Hallmark displays one of the many Christmas cards her shop has for sale. The history of Christmas cards can be traced back to London, England.

Christmas cards trace their 150 year history to London

Christmas day may be 1,993 years old, but the practice of sending Christmas cards is celebrating its 150th birthday this year, according to Barb Kluczynski, owner of Barb's Hallmark store in Charlevoix. The first Christmas card was created in London in 1843 when businessman Henry Cole didn't allow enough time to write a personal note to all his friends and business acquaintances. Cole asked artist John Calcott Horsley to design something for him to send in order to wish them a Merry Christmas.

The colorful Christmas cards created much excitement, and within ten years Christmas cards were a firmly established rage in England. They were first printed in the United States in 1875.

While the essence of sending a Christmas wish to friends has remained the same over 150 years, the styles and designs of cards has changed with the times. Kluczynski reports that card buyers today are looking for natural designs that reflect their feelings for nature and the environment. She is carrying cards called "Christmas Naturals" for her second year, which are made of recycled paper and depict pictures of birds and woody scenes.

While natural cards dominate the Christmas card market, humorous cards made by the Shoebox greeting card division are rapidly gaining in popularity.

Recessionary times don't seem to affect the card market, Kluczynski said. "Christmas is the time people like to keep in touch with friends they don't see all year, so they will always send cards," she said.

This nativity scene is part of a larger holiday lawn decoration at a Charlevoix home.

It's always fun to decorate the tree

One of the centerpieces of the community's holiday decoration effort is the community Christmas tree in East Park. Each year on the day after Thanksgiving local children place their homemade ornaments on the tree prior to the tree lighting ceremony.

Decorations light up Charlevoix for the holiday season

One of the nicer family events in the community of Charlevoix is the annual decoration and lighting of the community Christmas tree. Each year, on the day after Thanksgiving area children bring their hand-made ornaments to East Park and hang them on the tree. While many of the children who decorate the tree stand less than four feet high, the tree stands nearly 30 feet high. City electric department workers hoist the children into the bucket of the city's bucket truck and lift them to the upper reaches of the tree. Children decorate the tree during the afternoon and the tree is lit early in the evening.

Prior to this year's lighting former mayor Ralph McRae explained how the tree came to East Park. The tree originally was located next to a home south of town. Approximately five years ago the homeowner was going to build a garage. The tree was in the way of the garage. Not wanting to destroy such a beautiful tree, the homeowner contacted McRae, who was mayor at the time. Arrangements were made for a machine to lift the tree out of the ground and transplant it in East Park.

The community Christmas tree is only one aspect of a multifaceted holiday decoration effort in Charlevoix. Each year the City electric department strings approximately 4,000 lights through the trees lining Bridge Street. Holiday banners are placed at the south and north ends of the city's central business district.

Lighting and decoration contests are sponsored for both homes and businesses.

Ferry Beach pool proposal must have city voter approval

By L. Scott Swanson

Before an indoor community swimming pool can be built on city property at Ferry Beach, it will first have to be approved by city voters. A vote on the matter will take place in conjunction with a Feb. 8 election if pool proponents are still interested in the property and details can be worked out with the state.

Monday evening, the city council unanimously voted to interpret a City Charter provision conservatively. The charter provision states that the council cannot sell or otherwise dispose of city property that is within 100 feet of the water without voter approval. The site proposed for a pool is where the old city electric building was located before it burned this past spring. The site of the old building is not within 100 feet of the water's edge, but it is part of the overall Ferry Beach area, which is adjacent to the water.

"As far as I'm concerned, this is one continuous piece of property," Ted Felter, second ward council member said. He later noted that the Ferry Beach property had been acquired in pieces and said, "Granted, it may have a bunch of legal descriptions in there, but we've treated it as one piece of property."

The other council members agreed and unanimously passed a motion to interpret the charter as meaning there should be a vote of the people prior to the city selling, leasing or otherwise disposing of any portion of a piece of city-owned property within 100 feet of the water line.

Following that decision, the council took up the question of if and when there should be an election.

Dave Strawbridge, chairman of the Executive Committee of Friends of the Pool group, said the group is interested in the Ferry Beach site because it is next to an existing recreation which has lots of parking space which is not utilized for several months each year. He said that having it close to a beach where the lake is often too cold for swimming would help the pool draw people and thus help pay for pool maintenance costs. He said the reason the group is seeking public land in the Ferry Beach is that there is no other land available in that area.

"In my estimation, it's a plum for the City of Charlevoix to which there are no strings attached," Strawbridge said. He noted that the pool group has been offered two pieces of private property in Charlevoix Township for a pool site. "If we can't put it where it needs to be, near Ferry Beach, we'll put it there," Strawbridge

Uncle Sam wanted local soldier back - now!

By Laurie Lounsbury

Two days before firearms hunting season began, Charlevoix native Kent Seymour had just one thing on his mind - hunting deer. Seymour wasn't thinking about airline strikes, work stoppage or canceled flights. He was focused on his goal of returning to Charlevoix to stalk a white-tailed deer. Seymour, an Army soldier stationed in Killeen, Texas, happily hopped on an American Airlines flight out of Dallas, Nov. 13, and headed for his beloved north woods where the deer waited for him. On opening day of firearms season, with Seymour pleasurably ensconced in the woods, American Airlines' flight attendants went on strike. Seymour wasn't concerned about an airline strike. There was an elusive buck out there somewhere, luring him deeper into the forest. His mother Jean Seymour had a slightly less relaxed attitude about her son's potential AWOL status if the strike prevented him from returning to the base on time. She called Passageways Travel, and with the help of Teri D'Angelo, made back-up arrangements for her son's departure. On the last day of Seymour's hunting expedition, he got his deer. With the clock running down and American Airlines flight attendants still on strike, Seymour hoisted his deer onto his mother's kitchen table for butchering. Venison steaks, tenderloins, and ground venison bundles were stashed in freezers all over town, hastily trying to freeze the meat for its trip back to Texas the following day. On Seymour's departure day, his mother tried to coax him into taking the sure thing, a flight on another airline out of Grand Rapids. Seymour decided to take his chances and fly American Airlines from Traverse City to Chicago, where he would hope to get on a connecting flight to Dallas. Loaded with carry-on frozen venison and a deer hunting rifle, Seymour made it as far as Chicago's O'Hare Air-

Two men arrested for larcenies and arson

Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department deputies have arrested two men and charged them in a series of breakings and enterings, larcenies and an arson of a home. Deputies also recovered approximately $10,000 worth of stolen property.

Justin John Russell, 19, of Wood Street in Charlevoix and William Anthony Pearsall, 19, of Maple Grove Road in Charlevoix were arraigned in District Court in Charlevoix Dec. 7.

The crimes occurred in late September in the Klooster Road area in Marion Township.

Shortly before 7:30 a.m., Sept. 23, an unoccupied Klooster Road home which belonged to a downstate couple was discovered ablaze. The fire department was called, but by the time the fire was discovered the home was beyond saving.

When police investigated, they found that the home had been broken into prior to being set on fire. Further investigation turned up four other area homes which had been broken into and led to the discovery of stolen items stashed in the woods.

Sheriff George Lasater said the investigation was difficult, but some excellent effort by deputy David Hague, evidence technician Jim Owens, deputy Bill Cousineau and Sgt. Mike Wheat led to the arrests.

port, where he found a desolate American Airlines terminal. Seymour found a bench to stretch out on, assuming he would be stuck in the airport for the night. Sleeping on the bench wasn't his biggest concern. He was more nervous about the melting venison in his carry-on bag. Would he get it home to his refrigerator in Texas before his game went gamey?

Seymour was startled a short while later when he saw armed guards escorting a bevy of jittery flight attendants to his departure gate. The seven flight attendants were brand new recruits with nine days' training under their belts. They were assigned the task of flying an empty plane back to Dallas, where a seasoned crew and passengers were waiting. When they saw Seymour, they invited him aboard the flight as the only passenger.

Seymour arrived safely at the Dallas airport, along with his slightly thawed venison and seven flight attendants. It was definitely a good hunting trip.

The state is planning to have an election Feb. 8 in regard to school finance reform. The council suggested having a proposal to place the pool at Ferry Beach put on the ballot in that election. Strawbridge said he would have to go back to the Friends of the Pool Committee to see if they wished to go that route or do something different. The council noted that city clerk Joanne Patrick would have to talk to county and state election officials to see if the question could be put on the local ballot with the state proposal. Between now and the Dec. 20 city council meeting, Strawbridge will talk to the pool committee and Patrick will talk to election officials. The council will take up the issue again Dec. 20.

In other action, the council will mean that some larger jets will only be able to land at Charlevoix's airport under visual flight rules and not under an instrument approach.

Bodem appointed to transportation committee

State Rep. Beverly A. Bodem, R-Alpena, has been appointed to the House Transportation Committee for the remainder of the 1993-94 legislative session, Speaker Paul Hillemonds has announced.

The 106th District Lawmaker was selected for the post because of her experience on the House Republican Task Force on Tourism.

"Bev has listened to testimony throughout the state regarding the importance of Michigan's roads. She knows firsthand that a solid infrastructure is crucial to a healthy economy, especially for our tourism industry. That background will come in handy as Bev considers important transportation issues in the months ahead," said Hillemonds, R-Holland.

During Bodem's first day on the committee, lawmakers approved a House resolution encouraging the Michigan Department of Transportation to institute standardized highway signs that would assist tourists. The idea was first recommended in the 1992 report issued by Bodem and other tourism task force members.

"Our logo signs should be of a uniform size and shape, and they should be placed at positions for optimum usage. We need a system that tells visitors what sites and services to expect at the next stop," Bodem said. "Leaders in the travel industry think the signs will help boost tourism in northern Michigan and elsewhere. It's a cost-effective way of advertising."

Logo signs are located on highway rights of way. Bodem said they advertise roadside business offering gas, food, lodging or camping at nearby sites. Each category usually has a separate sign.

"Businesses can advertise their company's symbol, name, brand, trademark or a combination on the appropriate sign," she said. "In some cases, additional directional signs are located on exit ramps and along feeder routes."

Although federal law does not mandate logo signs, the Highway Beautification Act encourages the development of motorist information alternatives to billboards. Several states have started pilot programs and Michigan lawmakers are considering a test project. Transportation officials are interested in privatizing the project and using it to generate revenue.

"A system of logo signs would provide motorists with more information as they enjoy Michigan's varied cultural, historical and recreational activities. It's just another way we can attract tourist dollars to our state," Bodem concluded.

Receiving Rotary perfect attendance awards for the past year were Charlevoix Rotarians Joe Trojanek, Ray Wood and Fred DiMartino. The awards were presented by Charlevoix Rotary Club President Dennis Halverson.

The Charlevoix Rotary Club's charter had been missing for several months. What had happened to it was a mystery. Some Rotarians believed it had been misplaced. Others cast a suspicious eye toward some of Charlevoix's other service clubs. Fortunately for the Rotarians, Dennis Halverson the club president also happens to be the local police chief.

THE NUMBER OF OPOSSOMS COUNTED AMONG THE ROADSIDE FLATBUSH FAUNA THIS YEAR APPEARS TO NEARLY EQUAL THAT OF THE RACCOON. PRIMARILY THOUGHT OF AS A MORE SOUTHERLY ANIMAL, THIS SMALL MAMMAL (THE ONLY MAMMAL FOUND NORTH OF MEXICO) IS SLOWLY EXTENDING ITS RANGE NORTHWARD. OPOSSOMS GENERALLY STAY IN DEN IN THE WINTER, COMING OUT TO FEED AT NIGHT. THEY WILL EAT JUST ABOUT ANYTHING FROM FRUIT AND BERRIES TO CHICKENS AND SNAKES. AT BIRTH THE OPOSSOM IS ABOUT THE SIZE OF A HONEYBEE, WITH ITS STRONG FORELIMBS IT DRAGS ITSELF INTO ITS MOTHER'S POUCH FOR THE FIRST EIGHT WEEKS OF ITS LIFE. TRACKING THIS ANIMAL IN WINTER ISN'T DIFFICULT AS THE TRACKS INCLUDE THE SWEEP OF ITS TAIL AS IT MOVES THRU THE SNOW. HAPPY HOLIDAYS!

Kramer - McKeown

Wendy Lee Kramer & Patrick Jon McKeown

Barbara and Patrick McKeown Sr., of Charlevoix, and Mary Lee and Wade Kramer of International Falls, MN, are announcing the engagement of their children, Wendy Lee Kramer and Patrick Jon McKeown, Jr.

The bride-to-be has an undergraduate degree in child psychology from the University of Minnesota-Minneapolis, where she was a member of the Delta Delta Delta sorority. She is currently employed with the Huntington Mortgage Company in Petoskey as mortgage loan processor.

Her fiancé has an undergraduate degree in marketing and management from Central Michigan University and an MBA in finance from Michigan State University. He was a member of the Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity. The groom-elect is currently employed with Pat McKeown Ford in Charlevoix as Comptroller.

A wedding date is set for March 26, 1994 at the Evangelical Lutheran Church in East Jordan.

Sutton - Richardson

Tricia J. Sutton of Charlevoix and Casey R. Richardson of Charlevoix were married in a four o'clock wedding, Sept. 25 in the Charlevoix Assembly of God Church. The bride is the daughter of Arthur and Patricia Sutton of Charlevoix. The groom is the son of Rodney and Linda Richardson of Charlevoix.

Pastor Lowell Anderson performed the double ring rites with 250 guests in attendance.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a white satin gown with a crystal and pearl edged sweetheart neckline. The dress had long, tapered sleeves and a heavily beaded, basque bodice. The gown was adorned with imported schiffel lace and a scalloped, cathedral length train which extended from a back bow.

Steve Stargardt played the piano during the ceremony, and Sandy Johnson performed a solo, singing "Go There With You."

Stacy Field was the maid of honor, Diane Kerr, Brenda Sutton, and Carrie LaBlanc served as bridesmaids. They wore royal blue silk suits and carried white roses with baby's breath and greens tied with a royal blue ribbon.

The ring bearer was the groom's nephew, Nathan LaBlanc. Best man was John Loder. Groomsman were Corey Richardson, Randy Ogden, and Larry Drost. Ushers were Denny Clark, Denny Curtis, and Michael Sutton.

A reception was given by the parents of the bride at the Holiday Inn. Host and hostess were Wayne and Sandy Boss.

Mr. & Mrs. Casey Richardson

A rehearsal dinner was held at Nanny's Restaurant on Sept. 24, given by the parents of the groom.

The newlyweds took a wedding trip to the Upper Peninsula. They are residing in Charlevoix.

The groom is employed at East Jordan Iron Works. The bride is employed at the Charlevoix Camera Shop.

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

Have you ever wondered why certain things are a part of the Christmas time tradition? Here are a few thoughts to consider.

The poinsettia got its name from a South Carolina congressman, John Poinsett. He looked upon its flaming red leaves and its tiny yellow flowers and associated it with the star the wisemen followed as they searched for Jesus' birthplace. Poinsettias have since been used as a reminder to us all that God still has a star to guide every seeking heart.

Wreaths have been awarded as a symbol of victory for generations. But the laurel wreath usually is open on one end, like a crown. The circular wreath that most of us hang on our doors and windows is to remind us of the completeness of the victory God offers us through His Son Jesus.

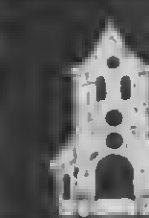

If you know the Christmas story, then you know the wisemen brought the baby Jesus gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh. As they laid their ornamental treasures before the manger, we hang our ornaments upon the tree reminding us of the love of Christmases past, of the care family members and friends have shared in making special things for us, and the hope that each new holiday season brings that the Lord will lead us in better and brighter paths.

Speaking of hanging things on trees, Martin Luther was one of the first to bring the Christmas tree into the tradition of faith we enjoy. His native northern Germany and our part of Michigan have a lot in common in terms of climate. The story goes that he was out walking on a starry, snow covered night. As he approached a grove of evergreens, the presence of the Lord was so real and dear to him that he wanted to share something of the moment with his family. He cut down the small tree, brought it home and put candles in its branches to try and recapture for them the wonder that had so moved his heart. If you have ever heard your own children gasp with delight the first time you turned the lights on your tree, you caught a glimpse of what Luther wanted you to see.

But one of my favorite stories about holiday decorations concerns the tinsel, that wonderful silver colored stuff that is so much fun to throw on a tree and so hard to clean up afterward. After Jesus was born, Mary and Joseph were forced to take their baby and flee to Egypt to escape Herod's soldiers. They hid in a cave one night. Legend has it that the Lord caused a spider to spin a thick and heavy web across the entire opening of the cave. When the soldiers came by and saw the cave, they passed it up thinking no one would or could have entered through such a thick web. The tinsel we hang on our trees is a reminder of what that spider did to protect the Christ child.

I hope you're reading some of the background behind our Christmas traditions. Just remember one important fact, God sent His Son Jesus as His gift of love for you. It is by His grace that we can all be saved through faith in the One who knows us best and loves us most. Holiday blessings!

Show and sale of angels to help Jordan River Arts Council

The Jordan River Arts Council will sponsor a "Show and Sale of Angels". They are presently gathering up large and small collections of angels for this holiday show. Ginny Carey's collection includes angels from the Starlight Foundation of Collectables. The Show will feature Mrs. Carey's collection as well as large angel oil paintings created by local artist Sue Bolt. Peggy Midener promises to bring in three of her finely crafted angel boxes also.

The Arts Council is still searching for more angels to place on exhibit. The show will run from Sunday Dec. 5 through 19. If you have angels that you would like to have included in the exhibit or angels that you would like to sell please contact Pat Tinney at 536-3447 or call the Arts Council in East Jordan directly at 536-3385.

The Angel Show opening will take place from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. on Sunday, Dec. 5, 1993. This opening will be extra special when two "five" angels, Patty Clark and Krista Knight will entertain. Patty will feature a storytelling for children complete with a small gift for all angelic listeners! Then Patty and Krista will combine their musical talents and team up with two local flute players Prudy Kuriz and David Otis to entertain one and all. This Angel Show Opening promises to be a very special holiday experience for young and old. The Arts Council building is located on Main Street in East Jordan (next to the fire hall). The show will run daily from 12 noon to 4 p.m., Dec. 5 through 19.

Home Health Care nurses celebrate 100 years of service

Members of District Health Dept. #3 are joining home health care nurses across the country, marking 100 years since Lillian Wald founded community health nursing in New York City in 1893.

Wald was responding to the needs of the population at greatest risk in our society by nursing the sick of all ages in their homes. She also provided instruction to reduce illness and promote health.

In contrast with this humble beginning, the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta reports that now on any given day 1,200,000 Americans receive some medical care at home.

Home Health nurses from District Health #3 help fill that need in Charlevoix, Emmet, Antrim and Otsego counties.

Last year alone skilled nurses, therapists, home health aides and social workers completed almost 25,000 home visits in the four-county area.

The history of District #3 began in 1930, when Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego counties agreed to form a district health department. They were the state's third organizing group, thus the designation as District #3.

Carleton Dean, M.D., was the first health officer, and his staff included a dentist, sanitary inspector and four nursing positions.

Since that time District #3 and other rural health departments traditionally played a dual role - providing preventive services such as immunization programs, but also providing home health care. The role of nurses from the very beginning included care of sick people in

World Series pitcher speaks to local group and signs autographs

By Laurie Lounsbury

In a soft, gentle tone of voice, Phillies' pitcher Roger Mason spoke to the Charlevoix Men's Club last Friday morning. Mason spoke quietly and with conviction as he talked of baseball and God's path that took him to the World Series last year with the Philadelphia Phillies.

Mason is a native of Bellaire who started his professional career with the Detroit Tigers. Leaving the Michigan team was his hardest trade; Mason told the small group of men and children gathered at Burger King. He's been traded many times in his 13-year baseball career, with his most recent move taking him to Philadelphia. He and his wife and children keep their permanent residence in Bellaire. As Mason related his World Series experience to the group, he assured them that it was his faith in God that got him through the series. Mason is deeply rooted in his religious beliefs.

After Mason spoke, he signed baseballs and baseball cards for the several children who attended.

Three new teachers join St. Mary's staff

Charlevoix St. Mary's School has three new teachers on its staff for the 1993-94 school year. Following are the courses the teachers will be teaching and brief backgrounds on each of the new teachers.

Physical Education

Amy Pischner graduated from Central Michigan University in May 1993 with a Bachelor of Science degree in elementary education with a mathematics major and a minor in physical education. Student teaching requirements were completed at Lakeland Elementary School, Elk Rapids. While at Central Michigan University, Amy taught third grade physical education; swimming skills and basic sport concepts to mentally handicapped students and kindergarten youngsters.

An opening for a physical education teacher prompted Amy to apply for a part-time position.

Pischner is a former St. Mary's student. "I attended St. Mary's School for six years. I really enjoyed the closeness and atmosphere of the classroom. I felt I gained a better education from the one-on-one teacher/student ratio. Faith, discipline, and respect are well taught in a Catholic school and carried throughout a lifetime. Through my experience, I feel I could be beneficial to the students at St. Mary's School."

Pischner resides in Charlevoix with her parents, Roger and Connie. Her hobbies include coaching and playing basketball, reading, card playing and rollerblading.

Kathleen Green Dvoracek

Grade 1
Lynn Skeel, a new staff member at St. Mary's, greets 13 students entering the first grade classroom. Her student teaching in first and second grades took place in Wall, England. She received a Bachelor of Science degree from Northern Michigan University, Marquette.

Previous work substitute teaching at St. Mary's provided a variety of professional experiences. "Upon visiting St. Mary's School, I became aware of some of the qualities that make it such a wonderful place to be. These include the bright and resource-filled classrooms, the low student-to-teacher ratio, the friendliness of the teachers and their willingness to help, the student enthusiasm to learn, and most noticeably, the learning, sharing and loving atmosphere that is felt immediately. These qualities just touch on all that makes St. Mary's such a vibrant school. This is the kind of school I would like to be a part of."

Skeel intends to make learning relevant, fun and exciting. She plans to get students involved in hands-on activities that will motivate and challenge them as individuals.

ual needs are met. Skeel and husband Jeff live in their home town in Charlevoix. Arts and crafts, rollerblading and skiing are among her hobbies.

Grades 4/5

Kathleen Green Dvoracek returns to northern Michigan as a fourth and fifth grade teacher. In 1986, Dvoracek received an Associate's degree from North Central Michigan College and three years later earned a Bachelor of Science degree from Central Michigan University.

Dvoracek brings a variety of teaching experiences. Substitute teaching on a daily basis and long-term substitute positions provided exposure to many students, staff, and school systems. In January 1992, she met the challenge of teaching a combined fifth and sixth grade class of students for a year and a half.

Dvoracek enjoys teaching in a Catholic school. She feels that the smaller classroom setting allows her to meet all students' needs. The amount of parental involvement in a Catholic school is a plus. There is a true sense of caring.

In September, Dvoracek married Dana Dvoracek, a Charlevoix native. He owns and operates Northern Car Care in Boyne City. Together they enjoy many outdoor activities, especially bike riding and skiing.

Dvoracek hopes to instill an appreciation of Catholic education in each of her students as she makes learning challenging and exciting for them.

Big Rock contributes to new Growth Alliance computer

Consumers Power Company's Big Rock Point nuclear plant recently awarded $1,500 to the Northern Lakes Economic Alliance to be used toward the purchase of an IBM 486 computer system. The Economic Alliance, a private non-profit economic development organization which serves Antrim, Charlevoix and Emmet Counties, has been fundraising to replace a computer used since 1985.

Economic Alliance Director Tom Johnson said, "With the new computer system, we will be able to offer improved services to local businesses, planners, service providers and municipalities. For example, we will be able to access the National Traders Data Base and US Bureau of Census information to create detailed demographic profiles for our clients and communities."

"The new computers will improve access to data bases at the Michigan Dept. of Commerce, University of Michigan, Michigan State University, North Central Michigan College and several other colleges throughout the country. It will streamline office procedures and be a great assistance in managing internal information," he said.

Pat Donnelly, Big Rock Point plant manager, said, "We are pleased to assist the Economic Alliance. We are always interested in contributing to programs which support local businesses. A new computer will enhance delivery of Economic Alliance services which are a valuable asset to companies in Northern Michigan."

For more information about the Economic Alliance, call Tom Johnson, Director, at 582-6482.

In 1966 the federal government recognized the importance of and need for home care and passed legislation enabling financial support.

In 1967 District #3 was one of the first to become a certified home health care agency.

Today the Adult Health and Aging Services Division of District #3 is comprised of more than 60 staff members, including more than 25 registered and licensed practical nurses and 15 home health aides.

Community health nursing uses the body of knowledge from the public health sciences and professional nursing theories in order to improve the health of the entire community.

Brian L. Youngs, M.D. is medical director/health officer and Gerald M. Chase, M.P.H. is public health administrator. Nancy Bottomley, M.S., R.N. is director of adult and aging health services, which includes home health care for the district's clients.

Home visits involve two basic types of services: home nursing care and personal care services.

Home nursing care visits can occur on a daily or periodic basis. They are provided by licensed nurses, and services include changing dressings, monitoring blood pressure, and administering medications and injections. Physical, occupational and speech therapy are also offered.

Personal care services involve administering medication, bathing, dressing and meal preparation. Home Health Aides providing these services are supervised by licensed nurses.

Home visits are reimbursable by a third party payor, or private pay, on a sliding fee schedule for nursing visits and home health aide visits only.

After launching the home health care movement 100 years ago, Lillian Wald continued to promote and expand the service.

At her suggestion, in 1909 the Metropolitan Life Insurance company organized a Visiting Nurse Department in New York City. The firm then contracted with the city to furnish services of visiting nurses, and by 1912, 589 metropolitan nursing centers had been established.

As a corollary to the visiting nurse movement organized efforts to improve infant hygiene began, with early work concentrating on the improvement of mild and water supplies.

Today, although the services have greatly expanded, home health care nurses continue to show the caring dedication first introduced by Lillian Wald 100 years ago.

And here in District Health Dept. #3 their goal continues to be to provide quality service, health promotion, illness prevention and to minimize the effects of illnesses in their community.

School board looking at $280,700 budget deficit

By Laurie Lounsbury

The Charlevoix School District faces a $280,700 budget deficit for the 1993-1994 fiscal year. School business manager Rich Kelly presented the Charlevoix Board of Education with the most recent budget amendment at Monday evening's school board meeting. Kelly explained that expenditures increased by $272,000 when the state required the schools to pay 100 percent of the employer's share of social security. Last year, the school paid only 27 percent of the employer's share of social security.

The good news is that the school has $1,432,259 built up in their fund equity (i.e. a savings or rainy day fund), so they are not without the means to pay the additional social security money. The fund equity has grown over the years with money from different sources, such as rebated T.E.F.A. money, unused maintenance funds, and retired teacher's salaries when the teachers weren't replaced. Given the uncertainties of school funding in the future, Kelly said, "I'm really glad we've got that money in fund equity."

In other business, board member Ardith Wieland questioned the methods of monitoring teacher's absences from school. Teachers are sometimes absent to attend conferences and seminars. Teachers are contractually allowed to attend one conference a year. The schools may choose to send teachers to more than one conference a year at the school's expense. Teachers may also be absent for health or personal reasons. Wieland's concern came from complaints she's heard from parents of students who reported many absences in a month's time. Board President Scott Beatty recommended that central office secretary Carol Havenis look into the feasibility and cost of tracking all teachers' absences and submitting a report to the board.

Residential lighting to be judged Dec. 15

The Charlevoix Residential Christmas light contest will be judged Dec. 15 at 5:30 p.m. In order to be judged, your home must be registered either by the homeowner or a neighbor.

Judges will be Dale and Marilyn Boss, Ralph McRae, Jan Glass, and Barb Steele. The Petunia truck will go to each registered house and play music while the house is being judged.

To register a home in the contest, call Jackie Krusch at 547-5444.

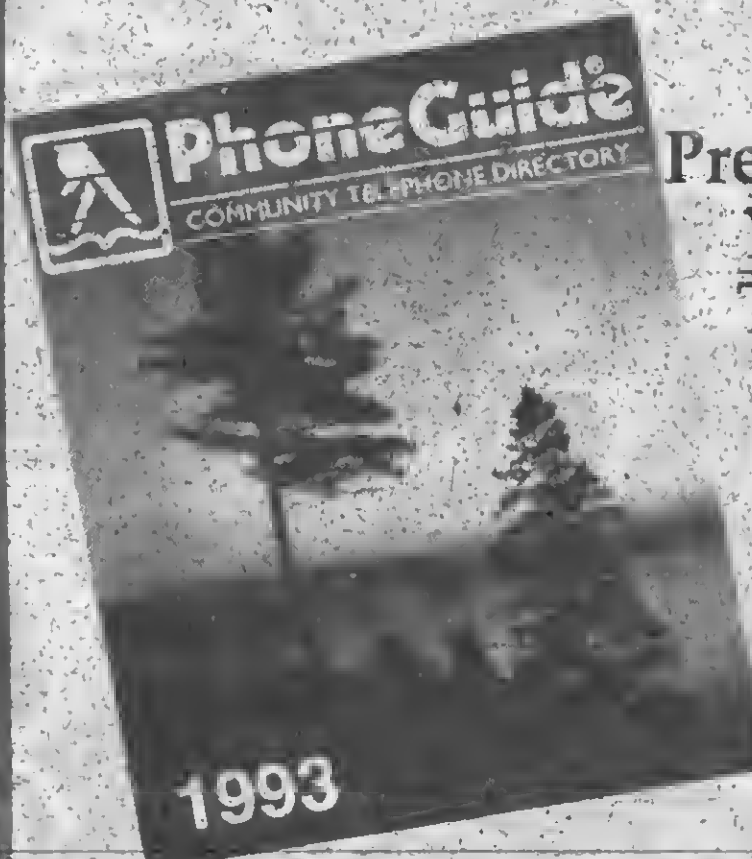

Don't park in the path of snow plows

With winter looming just over the horizon, overnight parking on the streets of Charlevoix is no longer permitted. Although the city snowplows have had little to do so far this winter, the day will come when they'll be plowing city streets overnight. Parking restrictions run from 2 a.m. to 6 a.m., December through March. Any cars parked on the streets will be ticketed.

Gun control bill won't have much effect locally

By L. Scott Swanson

For all the fanfare at the national level, the passage of the Brady gun control bill will probably have little effect in northern Michigan. The bill which has been passed by Congress and signed by President Clinton mandates a five-day waiting period and a background check for people who wish to purchase a handgun. The bill will go into effect early in 1994.

While gun control advocates have hailed passage of the Brady Bill and gun control opponents have cursed it, a local gun dealer and local law enforcement officials say the new law really won't have much effect in this area.

Mike Westbroek of Small Engines Unlimited sells a full line of guns. He doesn't foresee the Brady Bill affecting his sales one way or the other. "Criminals don't buy guns in a place like this," he noted.

Michigan is already doing background checks on people purchasing handguns. Currently, before buying a handgun a person must go to the police and ask for a purchase permit. Before issuing a purchase permit the police will run the person's name through the Law Enforcement Information Network (LEIN) and check to see if the person has any felony convictions. If that comes up blank, the person takes a 10 question true or false test on gun safety and laws. If the person passes the test, a purchase permit is issued. The purchase permit contains a section asking the person if they've been convicted of a felony or institutionalized. After signing the permit, the person takes the purchase permit back to the dealer and purchases the handgun. There are three copies of the purchase permit. One goes to the gun dealer, one goes to the local police and one goes to the state police.

After purchasing the gun, the purchaser must go back to the police station with the gun. Police then do a safety inspection on the gun and issue a registration permit. The registration permit is also in triplicate with one copy going to the gun owner, a second to the local police and a third to the state police.

City Police Chief Dennis Halverson said the city police department processes about 30 gun permit requests per year. Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater said his department averages between five and 10 permit requests per week.

Halverson said there have been times when the background checks have turned up something curious such as an old felony conviction from another state. In Michigan, a person who has been convicted of a felony is not permitted to own or possess a gun. Halverson said there have also been times when he has simply refused people at the counter. He noted that there's a court appeal process for people who don't like that decision, but he's never had anyone pursue that.

Halverson looks favorably upon the Brady Bill. "I wasn't an advocate of gun control five years ago, but with the incidents of mass killings and violence in some cities, I'm to the point where I'll try anything once." He added that crimes with guns are just one part of a spectrum of social problems and consequently gun control isn't going to be the complete solution.

Halverson said that in Charlevoix incidents of gun related crimes are relatively rare. He said the most frequent problems for the police department are domestic disputes where there is a gun in the house. He said that about two or three times a year police will have to deal with situations where someone is waving a gun around at somebody. In those situations, alcohol is usually involved.

Lasater, who is nearing completion of his eighteenth year as Charlevoix County Sheriff, offered a generally favorable impression of the Brady Bill, but said he doesn't see where it will make a lot of difference either in terms of reducing crime or inconveniencing people who are purchasing guns legally.

"I don't see all the hoopla with the people who want to purchase

Children from the Charlevoix Cooperative Nursery school got started on their Christmas baking last week. They were assisted by Chef Dave Phillips of Creative Culinary Catering. The children were quite meticulous in their baking, making sure the sprinkles were done in exactly the right fashion.

A piece of the catwalk on the south pier fell out late last week. The catwalk was installed at a cost of approximately $160,000 in 1992. The catwalk is maintained by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. When contacted by the Courier Monday, an engineer at the Corps said that was the first he'd heard of the problem and someone would be sent up from the Grand Haven office to take a look at it.

AHEAD LINES

Santa Claus coming to town Saturday

Santa Claus will be visiting Charlevoix at 1 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 18 in East Park to distribute boxes of candy to local children and listen to their Christmas wishes. Santa's trip is being sponsored by the Charlevoix City Volunteer Firemen. A fire truck will be dispatched to the North Pole later this week to pick up Santa and haul him to town. The fire truck will probably begin its trip Saturday morning, but what with the North Pole being a couple thousand miles away, firemen might have to leave on Friday night if the weather forecast calls for bad road conditions.
 Many local children may recall that Santa Claus paid a visit to Charlevoix Saturday, Dec. 4. This leaves many parents answering the question - why is Santa Claus coming to Charlevoix twice? There are several ways to answer that question.
 Among the possibilities:
 1. Since he's coming here twice, there's probably some town where he's not going at all. Consider yourself lucky, kids in that town aren't getting anything this Christmas.
 2. One of the two Santa Clauses was an impostor.
 3. It's the real Santa Claus both times. He's just making sure he's got the right Christmas wishes lined up with the right kids. You know how he is about making lists and checking things twice.

Bethany Lutheran Church will present their Christmas Pageant at 7 p.m.
 A Children's Program will take place at 7 p.m. at the First Baptist Church.
 The Assembly of God Church will hold its Children's Christmas Program at 10:30 a.m.

Children's letters indicate Santa will be well fed

(The following letters to Santa were written by Charlevoix fourth grade students as a writing assignment. Additional letters will appear in next week's Courier.)

Dear Santa,

Thank you for the past presents you gave to me like my race track. Thank you for everything you bought last year too.

Some toys I would like this year are cross country skis, The Hunt for Red October (a game) and all the Star Trek figures.

I will have a surprise for you! Look by our tree for a tray.

With love,
 Collin Keller

Dear Santa,

Thank you for everything you've given me before. I've loved all your presents. I really like them.

This Christmas I would like everyone to have a house to live in, some good food, and peace.

I will leave you and your reindeer treats.

I think you choose wonderful gifts for me. Every one of the gifts you gave me I still have.

Thank you!

With love,
 Angela Martineck

Dear Saint Nick,

Thank you for everything you have given me in the past, like the Lego sets. Thanks a million.

Saint Nick, for this Christmas I would like most a pair of down-hill skis, second most, a H.G. Wells Series, and third most, a Rescue Lego Set.

 Saint Nick, there will be a cup of coffee to keep you awake and an apple so you won't get a stomach ache. There will be carrots outside for the reindeer. Thank you for all you've given me.

With love,
 Patrick J. Mailloux

Dear Santa,

Thank you for everything you've left me in the past years. I've enjoyed everything. How did you like the cookies and milk my sisters and I left for you last year? We helped Mom make them.

This year I'd like some new dolls, a headset, books and some surprises!

On Christmas Eve you will find some cookies and milk and a snack for all of the reindeer. Merry Christmas and a happy New Year!

With love,
 Katherine Jean Madison

Dear Santa,

Thank you for the hockey stick. I love to play hockey with it.

I would really like a game called Street Fighter Two, a baseball, and I would also like some great adventure books to read.

I hope that you come down our chimney on Christmas Eve.

With love,
 Josh Chamberlain

Dear Santa,

Thank you for my sing-along one and all the wonderful things you've gotten me. This year would you please get me a kitten, ice skates, and a troll for my troll collection. If you can get them, I will try to remember to leave some milk and cookies. Thank you!

With love,
 Jennifer Mosoryak

Dear Santa,

I've always liked the presents that you have given me for Christmas. Thank you very much.

This year it would be nice to have a hamster, a hamster cage, and some hamster food.

Look for a special treat of cookies and hot chocolate on the coffee table.

With love,
 Nick Hosler

Dear Santa,

Thank you for the presents you have given to me. I really love that green haired troll you gave me last year. We might leave some chocolate chip cookies and some munchies for your reindeer friends.

This year I would like peace on Earth, some tapes and happiness for all people. I will leave you low-fat cookies so you won't have a fit going up and down kids' chimneys.

With love,
 Jackie Riley

Dear Santa,

I would like to thank you for the great presents that you gave me during the past years.

I would like to ask if I could have these three things for Christmas: a snowboard, a football signed by Dan Marino, and a Miami Hurri-

 I will be looking forward to having your reindeer on my roof!

With love,
 Aaron Wicenski

Dear Santa,

I really liked all the nice gifts you gave me like my Super Ninten-

Put on your cowboy hat, your embroidered shirt and your dancing boots and you're ready for "Willie's Up North." It's located on Advance Rd. between Boyne City and East Jordan. You'd be surprised how many Charlevoixans are registered in the beginning, intermediate and advanced classes in what is called "line dancing" and "couples" classes every Wednesday night.

Gunnar and Doris Lundteigen introduced me to this lively country western bar. It's called "Willie's" because the owner, Chris Martin, sounds just like Willie Nelson when he sings and plays the keyboard on Friday nights. The decor is a beer distributor's heaven — every inch of wall is covered with reflective advertising and beer posters advertising popular brews. After my eyes adjusted to the dimly lit dance floor, I was surprised that the first person I noticed was blonde, Kathy L. Johnson, the admitting clerk from the Charlevoix Area Hospital. She was gracefully doing a grapevine to the right and grapevine to the left with her partner, along with about 20 other genteel looking couples.

Joe Nye teaches both "couples" classes and "line" dancing. The latter has become very popular because one doesn't need a partner. People with two left feet are free to munch contentedly on nachos, wing dings and Willie's special ribs, while their light-footed friends are concentrating on the Texas shuffle and the hip bump.

When Joe isn't calling — right, behind, right, turn — he practices his trade as master carpenter. His wife and assistant, Janet, is manager at Northern Michigan Hospital. They both teach senior citizens once a month in Manacelona, Charlevoix, Petoskey, East Jordan and Gaylord, as well as an adult education program in Petoskey.

In addition, the Nyes are always available for private parties too. Last summer, they toed-in and toed-out like respectable pigeons and ducks do, at a family get-together on the Chicago Club Resort. They also demonstrated the cowboy boogie to the employees of the Medusa Cement Plant at Dunmaglas. It was a busy summer.

Country dancing has become so popular in recent years, you can watch it on TV. Just put your thumbs into your jean pockets and follow the repetitive steps — front, side together, turn, spin.

Or, better yet, mark your calendar for Saturday, Jan. 29, 1994: The Kappa Sigma Sorority is taking over the American Legion Hall in Charlevoix. Starting at 6:30 there will be two hours of dance lessons given by Adeline Dickinson along with two other teachers. Adeline, for your information, owns Country Kickers, a Country Western Clothing Store on U.S. 31 North of Petoskey. At 8:30 Kenny Diamond and Country Fever will perform. A light meal is included in the $10 price of admission. Ticket sales are limited to 200 according to chairperson Vicky Voisin, who promises this evening is going to be a lot of fun.

In the meantime, "Willie's Up North" has a good deal going with Santa for beginners' classes. They run for seven weeks at $20 a person starting Monday, Jan. 3, at 6:15 p.m. so that teenagers may accompany their parents, or grandparents. The family advantage is that everyone can line dance by themselves and still be together at the same time. Tenstons are eased, aches and pains disappear, loneliness is forgotten. Dancing is good exercise, it's nice to feel young again and to be involved. All good omens as the days grow short and the reindeer head further north for another year.

HAPPY HOLIDAYS!

Public education needs choice

As the education reform debate continues in Lansing, northern Michigan people may feel like they're sitting on the sidelines. But when it comes time to pay for whatever plan Lansing comes up with and send your children to school under the terms of the plan, northern Michigan people will be involved in the game. Consequently, it's worth paying attention to what's happening.

One of the least surprising, yet most disheartening aspects of the debate has been the Michigan Education Association's (MEA) efforts to have Michigan's public education system remain a stagnant monopoly. Perhaps you've seen the commercial where a teacher self-righteously argues against schools of choice proposals by saying that all schools in Michigan should be schools of choice. That argument sounds plausible on the surface, but when you fan a bit of reality in that direction it quickly shows itself for what's happening.

Until an element of competition is incorporated into Michigan's public education system, the system will have no real incentive to improve. The system will continue to be provider-driven rather than consumer driven. Individual school systems with a captive customer base and assured revenue will continue to accept less than the best from both students and staff.

Unfortunately, the MEA condones the status quo. Why? Because among the union's members are some dead weight. And they're protecting that dead weight.

In an education system without choice, and where teachers have a tenure system which for all intents and purposes makes a teaching job an appointment for life, parents don't have a lot of alternatives when their child ends up in a class with a dead weight teacher. Doing anything other than tolerating the inadequacy and allowing your kid to vegetate for nine months in a class where little is taught and little is learned is a major challenge. School administrators are in the same boat as parents. Tolerating incompetence is the easiest course of action. And in a monopolistic system students still are forced to attend that school and tax dollars continue to support it.

If parents were given real choice in where they sent their children to school and tax funding supported that choice, such inadequacy wouldn't be tolerated. If an inadequate teacher caused parents to send their children to different schools and every child that left a school took $5,000 in tax revenue with them, schools wouldn't tolerate dead weight on staff. Dead weight would carry a price. That price would necessitate changes and improvements.

In an effort to protect the current monopolistic public education structure, the MEA is arguing that all schools should be good schools. Ironically, that argument is also the best argument for abandoning the current system and giving parents and students a wide range of choice in education.

Letters to the editor

Library column appreciated

Editor,

Thanks to the column on library by E. Gilbert - we've found a great video resource. Over the past weeks we have learned about Egypt, France, Line Dancing and our grandchildren have enjoyed "The Three Stooges" and "Winnie the Pooh". We are indeed fortunate to have a library with so many resources and such a helpful staff.

Sincerely,
Doris & Gunnar Lundteigen

Enough thinking about writing a book, just do it

By L. Scott Swanson
(A first-person account)

Among writers there is a saying, "Doctors bury their mistakes. We print ours for all the world to see." That may seem rather callous toward the medical profession, but I've always felt it succinctly describes a very important part of writing — the risk that any writer takes whenever he or she puts something down on paper for other people to see, to think about and respond to in who knows what fashion.

I know a lot of people who say that someday they would like to write a book. I said that too — for a long time. Finally, I just wrote one. It's a collection of ten stories — some short, some long — and is titled "Two Short of a Dozen and Just a Little Shy of a Load."

As a newspaper writer, the vast majority of the writing I do is non-fiction. (At least I like to think so. I suppose there are times when I have had detractors who might beg to disagree. Oh well, that's that risk stuff I mentioned earlier.)

In writing a book, I decided to do something fictional and something humorous — at least to my way of thinking.

Writing the book actually turned out to be relatively easy. All of the events and characters in the book are fictional, but the concepts were triggered by real events.

For example, the first two stories form a section called "The Criminal Element." The first story talks about a gunman. In the 1982-83 and 83-84 school years I worked as a dormitory director. Late one evening the campus police phoned the dormitory office. The officer informed the dormitory receptionist that a man had been threatening people with a gun in a bar just off campus. The officer advised the receptionist to make sure the dorm's doors were locked. In addition to that, he offered a description of the gunman, said the police considered the guy dangerous and offered the sage advice, "If you see him, do not approach him." When the receptionist conveyed this warning to me, it struck me as a warning which was really unnecessary. Did the cop really think I might see someone matching the description and walk up to him and say, "Hey, I bet you're that gunman all those cops are looking for. My name's Scott. Dam glad to meet ya." That experience planted the seed for a story entitled, "The Gunman."

Another example is in the second section of the book called "Athletic Endeavors." One of the stories talks about the Anzerville Warriors, a basketball team with a rich losing tradition. Here in Charlevoix we're kind of spoiled. Traditionally, most of our high school athletic teams do quite well. But there is an ugly, yet inescapable reality in athletic competition — for every winner there is a loser. For every Charlevoix boys' cross country team, for every Cheboygan football team, for every

Borths - Eggers

Mr. & Mrs. Todd Eggers

Constance Borths and Todd Eggers were married in an afternoon wedding at the United Methodist Church in Charlevoix on September 18. The bride is the daughter of Angeline Borths and the late Henry Borths of Charlevoix. The groom is the son of Marie and Duane Eggers of Boyne City.

Two hundred guests witnessed the double ring ceremony performed by Pastor Craig Adams.

The altar was decorated with two baskets of royal blue and white roses.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mike Borths.

The bride wore a gown made of satin with a high, Victorian neckline of schiffli lace. The fitted bodice was embellished with lace, beaded pearls and sequins, and had short, puffed sleeves. The dress had a basque waistline with peplum at the back and a cathedral train. The hemline and back of train were trimmed with beaded schiffli lace. The bridal hat was made by Yvonne Engler. It had beaded pearls and sequins to match the dress. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of white, miniature carnations and royal blue roses.

Pianist Steve Stargardt played the wedding song, the wedding march, and the recessional at the ceremony. Jeannie Delph sang the song, "One Friend" and was accompanied on guitar by Tom Eggers.

The maid of honor was Jeannie Stearns, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Jamie Johnston, Kathleen Campbell, and Mindy Zoulek. They wore royal blue satin dresses with a jewel neckline front and a draped, cowl back. The dresses had a dropped waistline with puffed, shirred sleeves and a tapered hemline. They carried a white rose arm bouquet trimmed with royal blue accents.

Flower girl was Rachel Stearns, niece of the bride. She wore a royal blue satin dress to complement the bridesmaids. She carried white and royal blue roses in a basket with white and blue ribbons.

Ringbearer was Tyler Kruzel, nephew of the groom.

Best man was Tom Eggers, brother of the groom. His groomsmen were Steve Ketchman, Mike Harmeling, cousin of the groom, and Russ McCranney.

Ushers were Joe Borths and Charlie Borths, brothers of the bride.

A reception was given by the parents of the bride and groom at the V.F.W. Hall in Harbor Springs. Bob and Cooky Borths were the master and mistress of ceremony. Lisa Borths, niece of the bride, attended to guest book. Karen Kruzel, sister of the groom, and Margie Wenden, sister of the bride, served the cake.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the parents of the groom at the Argonne in Charlevoix.

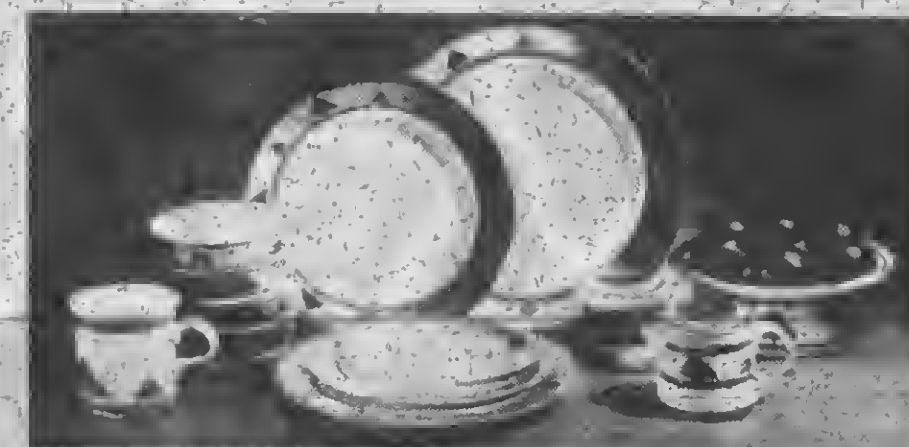

The wedding couple took a honeymoon trip on a cruise to the Bahamas.

The bride is the assistant manager at McDonalds. The groom is a truck driver for Sysco Frost Pack.

The newlyweds reside in Charlevoix.

New water line to end 40 years of wasting water

By Ralph McRae

Early in September, Charlevoix people living on US 31, north of the bridge, found heavy equipment tearing up the sidewalks. Some of the sidewalks had been there for half a century, other sections were new, in place only a few years.

Not only were the sidewalks removed, but the dirt below them was bulldozed away too. If that wasn't enough, front end loaders and other earth moving machines noisily made wide and deep trenches. At each intersection on the north side of Petoskey Avenue, the first 20 feet was broken up and large quantities of earth excavated.

The C.H. Smith Company utilized $2 million in equipment and a crew of 14 men on the project. The central focus of the project was installing 3,700 feet of 8-inch water main, starting near the Ainsle and Michigan intersections and following Petoskey east to Central Avenue. This project was one of several recommended in a 1986 engineering study of the city water system by consultants McNamara, Porter and Seeley.

The Petoskey Avenue section of the city's water system has an interesting history. In 1923, 4-inch water lines were installed next to the sidewalks beside the new two-lane highway coming into town. Prior to 1923, the road leading to Petoskey ran below Dixon Street, through the Chicago Club and below Mercer out into the hills by Bay Shore.

In 1952, the State came in to widen Petoskey Avenue to four lanes. In the process of widening the road, they also lowered the road bed by about two feet. While the road bed was lowered, the water main was not. Consequently, since 1953 those lines have had problems freezing during the winter. For the past 40 years households between Dixon and Meech Street have had to continuously leave at least a stream of water running during the winter months in order to avoid having their main waterline freeze. Water rates were adjusted to compensate, but over four decades an incredible amount of water was wasted—certainly enough to float two battleships.

In addition to the freezing problem, during the 70 years the pipes were in the ground, rust had decreased the pipe openings from four inches in diameter to three and a-half inches. The new lines, in addition to being eight inches in diameter, are coated on the inside with a thin layer of cement to prevent rust accumulation and reduce friction.

At each intersection a hole had to be bored beneath Petoskey Avenue for the 8-inch water main. Bill Brooks bored the holes, using a machine which is so creative and handy that it is often leased to other contractors. The machine pushes 20-foot sections of pipe through the ground. It uses augers within the pipe to remove dirt allowing the pipe to advance. It's not a fast procedure. Each pass beneath the roadway usually takes two days. The initial large pipe serves as a sleeve for the water main. A layer of com-packed pea gravel separates the main pipe and the sleeve pipe.

In addition to installing the new mains and water hook-ups, new fire hydrants were installed. In conjunction with the new water mains, the new hydrants will provide more water at a higher pressure to fight northside fires. Fire insurance ratings should improve and insurance rates decrease in the affected area of town.

The project was completed in sections with each section closed off by gate valves and tested prior to work beginning on another section. Surface work is now being completed and soon the 11 block area affected should be in good shape for the next 50 years.

Money for the project came from the city's special infrastructure repair property tax levy. The total cost of the project will be between $300,000 and $350,000.

Names in business

Dr. F. James Stewart of Charlevoix has completed continuing medical education requirements to retain Active membership in the American Academy of Family Physicians (AAFP), the national association of family doctors.

AAFP members are required to complete a minimum of 150 hours of accredited continuing medical study every three years. The AAFP, which has more than 75,000 members, is one of the largest medical specialty organizations in the country. It was the first national medical group to require members to keep up with medical advancements through regular continuing medical education.

Dr. Stewart has been an Active AAFP member since 1979. As a family physician, Dr. Stewart is qualified to work in all major areas of health care and trained to treat patients of all ages for the vast majority of health problems.

Big Rock employees donate funds and toys

Employees at Consumers Power Company's Big Rock Point nuclear plant continued an annual tradition that will again benefit area families this holiday season. On December 3, 105 employees attended the plant's holiday party and donated 75 toys and $1,000 to the Salvation Army.

For the past six years plant employees have hosted their annual holiday party to benefit the Salvation Army. As a result of the parties, more than $6,000 and 575 toys have been donated to the Army.

"The party enables us to get together with fellow employees, have a good time, and give something back to our community," said Bill Trubilowicz, co-founder of the party and operations manager at Big Rock Point. "Part of the fun is seeing who will donate the best toy."

County gets conflicting reports on best computer software

By Laurie Lounsbury

There are as many selections of computers available as there are opinions about them among the Charlevoix County employees. Because of the varying opinions, the Charlevoix County commissioners have been unable to pass a resolution to purchase $120,000 worth of new computers and software.

County employees are divided on their desire to use a personal computer system with software provided by Manatron or switch to an IBM AS-400 mainframe computer, which was recommended by Clyde Left of CTL systems.

Left was hired as a consultant to advise the commissioners on the computer purchase. He recommended an IBM AS-400 mainframe computer with software from

New World Systems. Crawford County is currently the only county in northern Michigan using the New World software.

Jeff Bither of Manatron Inc. proposed a system of personal computers all linked by a file server. Manatron systems are currently being used by Charlene Gaskin, Register of Deeds, Equalization Director Joan Blanchard, and Treasurer Joan Balch. Blanchard firmly stated that the New World software for taxes is unacceptable to her and that she hopes any change in computer systems would be a change for the better.

Jane Brannon, County Clerk, is dissatisfied with Manatron and wants to switch to the IBM system. Brannon said the clerk in Crawford County is happy with the New World software. Blanchard said her phone call to the Crawford County equalization director brought negative reviews for the New World software. Commissioner Howard Hosler also said the comments he received from Crawford County were "all negative."

Commissioner Richard Gillespie called Manatron's proposal "A bolt out of the blue," and wanted to proceed with Left's recommendation. Commissioner Phil Johnson concurred, saying, "We hired a consultant to tell us what to do. He (Left) told us, so let's do it." Gillespie called for a vote, which failed in a 3-3 tie.

Commission Chairman Don Smith asked department heads and commissioners to look into their options more closely before the December 22 meeting, when he would like to resolve the matter.

Acacia ahead of schedule on fall buoy run

The U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Acacia and her crew are currently on their fall navigational aids tending run, but they plan on being home in time for Christmas.

Last Thursday the crew took advantage of a sunny day with mild winds from the south to pull the buoy off of Medusa and replace it with a smaller one for the winter.

The Acacia takes care of a total of 82 navigational aids, covering all of Lake Michigan and ranging into Lake Huron as far south as Alpena. With the help of kind weather this year, as of last week the Acacia crew was ahead of schedule and had completed approximately 60 percent of its fall mission.

The Charlevoix High School wrestling team placed second among eight teams at the Maple City-Glen Lake Invitational Saturday. Basketball team falls to 0-2 with 60-53 loss

A 60-53 loss at Rogers City Friday evening left Charlevoix's varsity basketball team with an 0-2 record following a season opening loss to Cheboygan Tuesday.

A lack of offense in the first and third quarters doomed the Rayders at Rogers City. In the first quarter the Rayders were outscored 15-9. They rallied in the second quarter to tie the game at 25-25 at halftime, but in the third quarter the wheels came off. Charlevoix scored just nine points while giving up 21.

One bright spot for the Rayders was the play of senior forward David Dobulis. Dobulis scored 21 points and had nine rebounds. Rayder guard Don Jess had six assists while Jerry Duhart had four steals.

Charlevoix nearly matched the Hurons in scoring from the floor. Each team had 23 baskets, although Rogers City had three three-point baskets while Charlevoix had two. Charlevoix was beaten at the free-throw line. Rogers City was 11 of 16 from the line while Charlevoix was five of nine.

Charlevoix's junior varsity also fell to 0-2 with a 60-57 loss.

Charlevoix opens conference play Friday, Dec. 17 at Boyne City.

Drenth named coach of the year

...writing a book

Ellsworth girls' basketball team for every team that wins state titles and has a glistening record year in and year out, somewhere there must be a team that goes out there year after year and just gets waxed.
How do people from towns with those teams deal with that?

One Saturday afternoon, several years ago, I had a football coach (not one from Charlevoix) approach me. The guy was a nice guy, but on this particular occasion he wasn't happy. He was upset with a story I had written about a loss his team had incurred. He felt that portions of the story had been unduly harsh and that the story on the whole had not been very positive in regard to his team and its performance. As I said, this coach was a pretty decent guy so in an effort to be diplomatic I told him that I was sorry to hear that he interpreted the story as harsh and assured him that I did not bear him or his team any ill will and in fact wished them the best of luck for the remainder of the season. All the while I was telling the guy this, in the back of my mind I couldn't help thinking, "The team we're talking about is 0-3 and less than 24 hours ago was beaten by just shy of 30 points. What could I write about this team that would be "positive?" Perhaps something to the effect of, "Despite being thoroughly trounced Friday evening, the home team made neat and well-organized huddles much to the delight of a cheerleading squad that was far more attractive than that of the visitors." Oh yeah, I bet that'd go over well."

Not daring to write such things in a newspaper and unable to keep something like that pent up inside, I ended up writing the story titled, "Anzelville Basketball."

The third section of the book is called "Camp Tales" and deals with deer hunting and hunting camp.
Again, the incidents and characters are entirely fictional, the stories simply deal with people things which hunters encounter. For example, generally speaking most hunters refuse to admit it when they get lost in the woods. As one hunter put it, "In all the years I've hunted, I've never once been lost. Oh, there have been times when I've gotten a little turned around - sometimes for quite a while. But I've never been lost." The story titled "A Lost Stosh" describes the ordeal of an old hunter who doesn't get lost.

For me, writing the book turned out to be the easiest part of the deal. On the other hand, printing it, binding it and marketing it are all uncharted waters in which I'm swimming as best I can. So far, I've done all of the printing and binding at home. The book is written on a home computer run off on a laser printer and copies made on a copy machine. Mega publishing this ain't. Currently, there are about 30 copies of this book in print.
Some I've given to family and friends and there are also some for sale at the two Charlevoix book stores.

I've written a book. Now, I'm putting it out there and we'll see what happens. At best, I'll sell a few of the things and make some people laugh. At worst, I'll have had an interesting experience.

...gun law effect will be minimal weapons," Lasater said. "It's a minor inconvenience."

In approximately the past year, Charlevoix County has had a murder committed with a gun and an armed robbery. In addition to that, sheriff's deputies will occasionally arrest someone and then discover that there was a gun in the car. However, Lasater says that the majority of crime in this area is committed by unarmed people. He did note that when he first became sheriff, armed robbery was virtually nonexistent in northern Michigan, but now they occasionally occur.

Lasater also has observed that whenever there's a well publicized crime involving a gun, an increase in gun permit applications seems to follow.

Westenbroek is skeptical of the Brady Bill. "It's not going to do any good," he said. "If you're trying to control criminals, they don't obey laws now. What's one more to break?"

Westenbroek said a lot of area people have guns for a broad range of reasons including hunting, target shooting and protection.

Halverson and Lasater noted that in recent years there has been a trend toward people purchasing semi-automatic handguns rather than the old fashioned revolvers. Halverson said that causes him some degree of concern because the semi-automatics are a bit more complicated mechanically and consequently some people don't understand them as well as revolvers. (Occasionally the terms semi-automatic and automatic confuse people. A semi-automatic weapon fires one shot each time the trigger is pulled. An automatic, such as a machine gun, fires several shots when the trigger is pulled. Automatic weapons are illegal.)

Michigan also has a felony firearm law which automatically adds two years to the sentence of anyone convicted of using a firearm while committing a crime. Halverson said that's a good law, but occasionally the effect is circumvented by things such as resident home incarceration status.

Correction

A story in the Dec. 8 edition of the Courier incorrectly listed the date of a high school financial aid seminar as Monday, Dec. 20. The correct date was Monday, Dec. 13.

City sends pool proposal to planning commission

Latest proposed site would be near street garage

By L. Scott Swanson

Having thought about a swimming pool ... and thought about a swimming pool ... and thought about a swimming pool some more, the city council is now going to send a proposal for a swimming pool to the planning commission and let them think about it for a while.

At Monday evening's city council meeting council members voted to have the city planning commission host a public hearing on a proposal to build a swimming pool near the city street department garage. In addition to considering the swimming pool proposal, the council wants the planning commission to put together an overall plan for the area near the intersection of Ferry Avenue and Stover Road which currently is home to the city street department.

Mayor Dave Novotny suggested sending the matter to the planning commission saying he feels the first step should be for the planning commission to put together a plan and meanwhile have the council look at the proposed pool's finance numbers. Eventually, that position was adopted by a 3-2 vote. Council members Don Meggison, Cheri Hoffman and Jackie Cross voted for sending the issue to the planning commission. Council members Butch Russell and Bruce Reid voted against it.

"They've had the information in front of them for years,"

Third ward council member Bruce Reid, explaining why he opposed sending the pool proposal to the planning commission for a public hearing to give the public more information.

Hoffman said she feels people are confused and a public hearing may be an excellent way to disseminate information.

Reid said he thinks there's been enough public input and most people have made up their minds one way or the other. "They've had the information in front of them for years," he said.

Currently, the Friends of the Pool group proposes to build a small pool on the northeast corner of the street department grounds. Earlier they were proposing a pool on the old electric plant site on the lakeshore side of Ferry Avenue. Since the lakeshore side of Ferry Avenue is part of a city-owned parcel of property that lies within 100 feet of the waterline, using the property for a pool would have required city voters' approval. Using the street department property would not require city voter approval. In fact, city voters would not be allowed to vote on such a proposal because that would amount to an advisory vote and neither the city charter nor state law provides for advisory votes.

When Hoffman told Russell that there could not be an advisory vote on the street department site, Russell replied, "Then I guess I can't support that site." Meggison said his feelings were similar to Russell's, but moments later made the motion to send the matter to the planning commission.

Hoffman said that before she could support that site she would have to see a sinking fund at a level where it could fund either conversion or demolition of a pool building should it ever come up short of operational funds. Hoffman said

Beaver Island boat captain makes his final voyage

By Laurie Lounsbury

Snow was falling gently last Monday as Russell Green nosed the Beaver Island ferry boat into the St. James Harbor for the last time. It was the Beaver Islander's last trip of the season, and Green's last trip in his 35 year career as a Beaver Island boat captain. Green is retiring to the greener pastures of his native Emerald Isle, Beaver Island.
 The robust, 65 year old Green hardly looks like a man ready for the rocking chair. "When you retire, you're supposed to do as little as possible, but I'm sure I'll find plenty to do," Green said.

Green is a second generation Beaver Islander whose grandparents all hail from Ireland. Green started his career on the water working freighters on the Great Lakes. Marriage and the arrival of children changed that. "I didn't want to raise my kids all over the Great Lakes on freighters," Green said with a broad Irish grin. Green has eight grown children, all of whom were raised on Beaver Island. The oldest, Mike, is following in his father's footsteps. He'll move up to the assistant captain position when his father retires and Kevin McDonough, another island native, will take over as captain. McDonough is the son of Laurence McDonough, another retired Beaver Island boat captain.

that she has received input from approximately 130 of her first ward constituents in regard to the pool proposal and virtually every one of them has said they don't want tax dollars spent for a pool. Hoffman said people are concerned that if a pool is built on city property that five, ten or even two years down the road operating funds will come up short and the city will be "guilted into" running the pool. She speculated that the cost to the city might be $50,000 to $80,000 per year. Hoffman noted that would be the better part of one mill and in budget discussions the council has argued about as little as a quarter of a mill.

"When you start looking at these numbers, the potential is scary," Hoffman said.

Friends of the Pool chairman Dave Strawbridge replied, "I don't see what the big fright is at this point." Strawbridge has said that the pool group will build and operate the pool at no cost to the city. He said that if operational funds come up short, the worst thing that could happen is that the pool would have to be closed down for two or three months out of the year. Pool construction has an estimated cost of $650,000. Strawbridge said the pool drive currently has $150,000 in cash and a total of $305,000 in cash and what they consider firm pledges. They have $140,000 in pledges which they aren't as sure about. Operational funding would come from user fees and fundraising.

Strawbridge said the pool proposal amounts to an offer of a $650,000 recreational facility for the city at no cost to the city.

Novotny said his position is that the council is going to protect the taxpayers now and in the future.

Public comments on the pool proposal were mixed.

Joanne Beemon spoke in favor of the pool, saying the water at Ferry Beach is often too cold for swimming lessons. Ralph McRae spoke in favor of the pool, saying the city has a half million-dollar annual recreation budget and that five percent of that could help fund a pool.

Gabe Campbell spoke against the pool proposal. He said that for pool proponents to say they've got overwhelming support, but just can't get it at the polls just doesn't make sense. Billie Smith said she can't understand why the council is spending so much time talking about a pool when there isn't enough money to fund it.

DDA board should let the free market work

The Downtown Development Authority (DDA) has received two bids for the purchase of the old Kusina Motors building - one for $101,000 and the other for $62,500. Curiously, the DDA board is having a hard time figuring out which bid to accept. The decision should be easy. ACCEPT THE HIGH BID.

From a simple financial standpoint there are 38,500 good reasons for accepting the high bid. More important than the money involved is the question of good governmental policy. To turn down the high bid in this instance would be bad governmental policy and open the DDA board up to a lot of questions now and set a terrible precedent for later decisions.

The background on the matter is as follows: The DDA, which is a branch of city government and funded by local property taxes, bought the old Kusina Motors complex between Antrim and Mason Streets. The purchase agreement was reached more than a year ago, but the deal wasn't actually completed until just recently. The DDA acquired the property to build a new city parking lot. That lot will be built next year.

A portion of the property isn't needed for the new parking lot. The former Kusina showroom building stands on the unneeded portion of the property. So the DDA decided to sell the showroom building. That makes sense.

In advertising for bids, the DDA stipulated that bidders not only state what they're willing to pay for the building, but also explain what they intend to do with it. Although you can make a case for the DDA's stipulation, it's unnecessary. Granted, you don't want somebody to put a slaughter house on Antrim Street, but we've already got the zoning board, planning commission and city council addressing that type of concern. There's no need to throw a fourth governmental body into the mix.

So the DDA received two bids - one for $101,000 and one for $62,500. Both bidders included their plans for the building. One wants to create additional side-street retail space and the other wants to move and upgrade the existing local theater to a multi-screen theater. Both proposals have their merits. Adding new retail businesses to the community and offering a more diverse downtown shopping area would be a fine thing. Seeing an existing business expand and improve its services would also be desirable. As to which one is better, who's to say? It certainly shouldn't be the DDA board.

In a free-market economy, it should not be the role of the DDA or any other governmental body to pick business winners and losers. China, East Germany and the former Soviet Union tried governmentally managed economies for several decades. Those economic systems were scrapped because they failed.

At the Dec. 15 DDA meeting, city planner Gerry Harsch and some members of the DDA board spoke as though they feel the bid decision should be based not solely on the amount bid, but also on other factors. Those other factors basically boil down to making the decision based on which of two businesses DDA members like the best. That's just not suitable. It taints the bid process and holds the potential for subjecting members of the board to all kinds of arguments and influences which really should play no part in their decision.

While the DDA board is probably doing nothing more than trying to serve the public well, in this instance the board seems to be tempted to go awry. The DDA can best serve the taxpayers and local business by resisting the urge to tamper with the economic playing field. The DDA should accept the high bid.

requires more than the ability to steer a boat through the waters of Lake Michigan. Green assists his son and McDonough as they load the boat with dry goods necessary for the islanders' survival during the next four months. Pallets of drywall, cement block, and plywood are carefully loaded onto the boat. Hundreds of cases of pop and canned goods are forklifted from the dock to the boat. If the weather is good, Green can pilot the heavily loaded boat back over to the island.

Green won't take the valuable cargo through the 32 miles of water in rough weather. "The load's not very valuable if you smash it up," Green said.

In the summer time, Green transports more vacationers than he does cargo. "That's what I'll miss the most, greeting and visiting with the people," Green said. Green has transported visitors, and then the children of the same visitors to the island.

"Forty years of making my living on the water and I still don't know how to swim. I have confidence in myself as captain - I'm not ever going to need to swim."

Capt. Russ Green, joking before making his last trip on the Beaver Island.

As Green prepared the boat for one of the final trips, he gazed out over the steely gray water. "Forty years of making my living on the water and I still don't know how to swim," Green said. Then, with a roguish grin, he added, "I have confidence in myself as captain - I'm not ever going to need to swim."

Keep Charlevoix Beautiful's eighth annual residential lighting display contest judging took place Wednesday, Dec. 15. Judges Ralph McRae, Jan Glass, Barb Stegle and Dale, and Marilyn Boss reviewed the entries while traveling and playing music in the Petunia Truck.

Separate winners were named in four parts of town. The overall winner and the recipient of first place, for the northside of town was DeLores Malloch of Pine Ridge. This is Malloch's second win in the overall category and consequently she will move into the contest's hall of fame, joining Dale and Marilyn Boss of Pearl Street and Ivan and Luey Witthoef of Old Orchard Road.

Taking second place on the north side of town were Lou and Rita Orłowski.

Bruce and Leona Bartlett of State Street took first place on the south side, west of Bridge Street. Second place in that category went to Terry and Arlene Blissett of Beacon Street.

Pat Miller of Hampton Street took first place east of Bridge Street while Leigh Lovell of St. Johns Street placed second.

The Art Falting residence on Marion Center Road took first place in the out-of-town division while Dave and Eileen Juilliet of Barnard Road placed second.

United Methodist Church of Charlevoix will have a Christmas Eve Candlelight Service at 8:30 p.m.

Charlevoix Middle School students have collected nearly 10,000 food items in their annual Christmas drive for the Charlevoix Community Food Pantry. The food and money collected will be turned into the food pantry Wednesday, Dec. 22. Last week a group of middle school students collecting food and money at Glen's Market had their jar of money stolen by two men. Police are investigating the theft. Crown Motors of Charlevoix heard about the theft and contributed $100 to the students' effort to make up for the loss. Shown at one of the collection points are (from left) Maresa Hang, Dena Sheldon, John Belfy and Amanda Simpson.

Students help foundation solve youth problems

By Ralph McRae

The Charlevoix County Community Youth Advisory Committee is made up of three student representatives from each of six school districts in Charlevoix County. The group of 18 students works with the Community Foundation to assess the needs of Charlevoix County students; help raise funds for the foundation and to make recommendations for the distribution of grant money to projects which help students.

The Community Foundation was established approximately a year ago. It collects money, invests money and awards grants to worthy causes in Charlevoix County. The 18 members of the student advisory committee come from the Charlevoix, Beaver Island, Boyne Falls, Boyne City, East Jordan and Porter Creek school systems. (The Porter Creek program is a school system that takes in students with specialized educational needs from other area school systems.) Charlevoix's representatives on the committee are Carrie Cunningham, Jeff Hoffman and Zach Pajtas.

More than 20 applications for funding are being reviewed by the Youth Advisory Committee. After reviewing applications, the committee will make recommendations to the Community Foundation's board of trustees. Grants will be awarded twice each year, in June and December.

The idea for a community foundation in Charlevoix came about in 1990. The Frey Foundation of Grand Rapids and the Council of Michigan Foundations sponsored the initial discussions. One of the Charlevoix foundation's largest contributors, the W.K. Kellogg Foundation, requires that foundations receiving money have a youth advisory committee of high school students.

Although the Charlevoix County Community Foundation is still rather new, similar foundations have been around for years elsewhere in the country. Currently there are about 400 similar foundations throughout the United States.

In addition to the Frey Foundation and the Council of Michigan Foundations, the Malpass Foundation of East Jordan helped with funding to get the Charlevoix County Community Foundation off the ground.

Late in 1991 a volunteer board of trustees was established. Continued support from the Frey and Malpass

DDA ponders building bids of $101,000 and $62,500

By L. Scott Swanson
The Downtown Development Authority (DDA) received two bids to purchase the former Kusina Motors building on Antrim Street, but isn't sure which one to accept.

CJK Properties bid $101,000. Charlevoix Cinema, Inc. bid $62,500. Bids were opened Dec. 13 and discussed at the DDA's Dec. 15 meeting.

CJK Properties recently renovated the Beacon Center complex, formerly known as the Market Mall. The back end of the Beacon Center project is adjacent to the Kusina Motors building. If CJK acquires the building, they will convert it to retail space.

Charlevoix Cinema, Inc. owns the local theater, currently located on Bridge Street. If Charlevoix Cinema acquires the Kusina building, it will be converted to a two or three-screen theater and replace the current theater.

The DDA, which is a branch of the Charlevoix City government, acquired the Kusina building in conjunction with other property between Antrim and Mason Streets which is being converted into a city parking lot. The parking lot will be constructed next year. At the DDA meeting, City Manager Mike Wiesner estimated that the total cost of acquiring the property, including both the purchase price and attorney fees, was around $390,000. The sale of the building would recoup some of that.

City planner Gerry Harsch recommended that the DDA board, in evaluating the two proposals, "look beyond just the dollars you would recapture." He advised the board to consider the impact of the proposed projects and said that $40,000 isn't that much money in comparison to the entire DDA spending picture.

Both bidders were present at the DDA meeting. Bill Supernaw and attorney Gordon Boydston appeared on behalf of Charlevoix Cinema, Inc. Bill Koucky and attorney Harry Golski appeared on behalf of CJK Properties.

DDA member Jeff Porter asked both parties if they intend to use the old building for their project or put up a new one. Koucky said he would have to look at the old building and see if any of it could be salvaged. Supernaw said he feels most of the old building will have to be demolished.

DDA member Jeanine Wallace said she feels the theater draws a lot of people downtown and she doesn't want to see it move out of the central business district. Wallace said she wasn't saying the CJK proposal isn't a good one, but noted that there currently are existing vacant sidestreets retail location. (An example would be the space formerly occupied by Radio Shack.)

Explaining CJK's proposal, Koucky said, "In renting the spaces we have, I had about 10 calls for smaller spaces." Golski added that the south end of the downtown area needs a shot in the arm and that the CJK proposal involves the creation of new businesses rather than the shift of an existing business.

Wallace asked Supernaw what would become of the current theater building. Supernaw said he felt his involvement in the future of the old building would be quite limited, but he would expect the back of the building to be converted to residential and office space and the front to become retail space.

Supernaw said there's a need for a theater with at least two screens. "I need to do that some place before somebody else does," Boydston added that with multiple screens the theater would anticipate greater attendance.

DDA member Bill Haggard asked if putting a theater in the Kusina building would infringe on parking in the Oleson parking lot. One of the reasons cited by the DDA for purchasing the Kusina property and constructing a new lot was to take pressure off of the Oleson lot. The CJK proposal would require either a loss, or at least a shift, of either one or two spaces in the new lot.

Wallace asked if the DDA could have some type of an informal study done to estimate the impact to the area of the two proposals.

Wiesner noted that City Attorney Jim Young had advised that the DDA not make a decision at the Dec. 15 meeting. The city acquired the property under a land contract and, in order to avoid future liability for contamination, went through a legal process referred to as friendly condemnation. Before the city can sell a portion of the property, an arrangement will have to be made with the other party to the land contract, Bernice Kusina.

Supernaw said he had been operating under the assumption that bids were due Dec. 13 and action would be taken Dec. 15. DDA chairman Hugh Mason said that the city could meet with Kusina in the near future, he would not be opposed to calling a special meeting prior to the DDA's regularly scheduled meeting in January. In concluding discussion, the DDA took no action, but plans to have a special meeting sometime within the next couple of weeks.

Elaine Kurtz, Assistant Director of Pine River Place, recently received public housing manager certification. In order to receive certification, Kurtz completed a training course of study under the direction of the National Association of Housing Redevelopment Officials. The week-long course took place in Chicago and covered various aspects of public housing including: management theory; tenant relations, occupancy, security, maintenance and government regulations.

Pine River Place is an independent living complex for senior citizens and is located on Garfield Street.

Jeanne Dubey of Charlevoix recently won autographed copies of the Bridges of Madison County and Slow Waltz by Robert James Waller in a contest sponsored by the Charlevoix Bookshop.

The newly named Beacon Center, formerly the Market Mall, on Bridge Street, is unveiling two of the condominium units for sale. Bill Koucky, manager of the project, will host an open house in the condominiums Tuesday, Dec. 28, from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. The finished condominiums are the first of four units to occupy the third floor. The second floor of the building can be converted to office space or condominium units, depending on consumer needs.

The Beacon Center will be a blend of retail space on the first floor along with a complete sports center in the back portion of the structure. A racquetball court and state-of-the-art exercise equipment will enhance the sports facility.

Vacation Properties Network is the marketing agent for the Beacon Center. The price of the condominium units will start at $174,000.

The public is invited to attend the open house on Tuesday. The entrance to Beacon Center is located on Bridge Street, next to the Great Lakes Fish and Chips.

Dwayne Farmer killed this buck north of Charlevoix during muzzle loader season. The buck is between four and six years old, has a 10 point rack with a 17 and a quarter inch inside spread and had a dressed weight of 148 pounds.

Firearm hunters kill 214,000 deer, but herd is declining

1993 hunt was safest ever

An estimated 214,000 white-tailed deer were harvested in Michigan by firearm hunters during the November 15-30, 1993, season, ranking this year's harvest the seventh best in history and comparable to the 1986 firearm deer season. Department of Natural Resources officials also reported that the 1993 firearm deer season was the safest ever recorded.

"It appears that DNR estimates were essentially on target," noted Director Roland Harnes, "and I'm very pleased that we're nearing our ultimate management goal of 1.3 million deer."

"We also must not overlook the fact that 1993 was the safest firearm deer hunting season on record," Harnes continued.

DNR Wildlife Division chief George Burgoyne explained that the deer harvest is estimated by a survey of southbound traffic transporting harvested deer, and by monitoring hunting activity and success throughout the 16-day season.

The 1993 firearm deer harvest represents about a 15 percent reduction from last year, and the number of antlerless licenses issued this year was reduced from 254,916 in 1992 to 190,482 in 1993, as fewer antlerless licenses are needed to control deer numbers when the herd becomes smaller," Burgoyne noted.

The DNR also reports that the herd has been intentionally reduced about 25 percent from the peak of two million deer four years ago, to reduce damage to agricultural crops, to reduce deer-vehicle accidents, and to maintain a herd in balance with available habitat, food and cover.

DNR biologists believe some local reductions in herd size may have resulted from the starvation of deer during the 1991-'92 winter, and from decreased fawn survival during the cold summer of 1992. There were also fewer hunters afield in 1993.

City gets good news on $242,550 grant for softball field improvements

With any luck the city softball complex on West Carpenter Street will undergo major improvements in either the spring or fall of 1995. A city grant application for $242,550 in state Recreation Bond funding has been recommended for approval by the Department of Natural Resources (DNR). The city received the good news last week and city manager Mike Wiesner made the announcement at Monday evening's city council meeting.

Local funds of $80,850 will be added to the state funds resulting in a $323,400 project. Highlights of the project will be paving the softball complex parking lot, installing a sprinkler system and new lighting, building new rest rooms, landscaping and constructing a sidewalk along Carpenter from the ball fields to State Street.

The DNR's recommendation for approval is the first and a major step in receiving the grant. The legislature and governor must also give their approval and then there will be additional paperwork to take care of. In a phone conversation with the Courier Tuesday morning, Wiesner indicated that ideally engineering on the project can take place in the fall of 1994 and construction can take place either in the spring or fall of 1995.

foundations allowed an office to be established in East Jordan. In August 1992, Bob Tambellini became the executive director of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation. Of the 15 members on the foundation board, six are from Charlevoix. Scott Beatty is the chairman. John Frey is a board member and also was one of the first to introduce the idea which led to the foundation.

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation is a resource and catalyst for solving community needs, an advocate of philanthropy, a careful holder of donor funds and an experienced grant producing organization. Individuals and corporations may set up funds within the foundation for charitable purposes. The Frey and Kellogg foundations have set up programs to match local donations. Gifts of money are invested with dividends used as directed by the donors. The foundation accepts cash, securities, property and insurance benefits. All donations qualify for tax benefits.

In the short time it has been in existence, the Charlevoix County Community Foundation has built up assets that now total more than $1 million.

Rayders lose 59-56 to Boyne City

Charlevoix's varsity basketball team continued its slow start with a 59-56 loss to Boyne City Friday evening.

Charlevoix led 27-23 at halftime and 45-41 at the end of the third quarter, but faltered at the beginning of the fourth quarter and allowed Boyne City to go on a 7-0 scoring run.

Four wrestlers place in tournament

Four Charlevoix wrestlers placed near the top of their weight classes at the St. Ignace Invitational wrestling tournament Saturday.

Keith Parish placed second at 189 pounds. He opened the day with two pins before falling in the finals on a pin. It was Parish's first loss of the year.

Jason Hughes finished second at 112 pounds. Hughes won his first two matches on pins before losing on an 18-11 decision in the finals.

David Morales placed third at 140 pounds. Morales opened the day by pinning an opponent, lost a 12-7 decision in his second match, won on a pin in his third match and won an 11-6 decision in the consolation finals.

Ron Haggard, a sophomore, finished fourth at 152 pounds. Haggard started the day with a 9-2 loss, then pinned his next two opponents before losing on an 8-3 decision in the consolation finals.

Charlevoix is now on break for the holidays and won't return to action until Jan. 6 when they will compete in a three-way meet at Traverse City St. Francis.

Midway through the final quarter, Charlevoix regrouped, but a chance of sending the game into overtime died when a last-second shot clanged off the rim.

The game was the Rayders' fourth straight loss, but only their first conference game of the season. David Dohulis led the Rayders with 17 points and six rebounds. Don Jess had 11 points and eight rebounds.

Charlevoix scored 25 baskets from the floor and was six of 11 at the free throw line. Boyne City hit 24 baskets from the floor, including two 3-point baskets and was nine of 15 from the free throw line.

Charlevoix also lost the junior varsity game 54-47. Jason Smith led the Rayders with 15 points while Casey Crain had 13. The junior varsity is also 0-4 on the season.

Charlevoix is now off for a holiday break and will return to action Friday, Jan. 7 at Traverse City St. Francis.

1993 Christmas shopping was strong in Charlevoix

By L. Scott Swanson

Busy. Busy. Busy.

According to local merchants the Christmas shopping season went well in Charlevoix. Several merchants reported that sales were better than in recent years and more than one noted that Christmas Eve turned into a shopping frenzy.

Mike Hilligan of Bridge Street Ace Hardware said the store did well during the final week of November, then had a slower week, followed that with three strong weeks and was hopping on the day of Christmas Eve. He said the week preceding Christmas was the best it's been in the past six years. Christmas Eve day was up fifty percent from last year.

"It was crazy here," Hilligan said of Christmas Eve day. Perhaps the weather turning cold had something to do with that as Hilligan noted that one of the more popular items with shoppers was the mad bomber hats.

Another merchant who didn't mind the cold weather was Randy Carey of Carey's Shoes. He said that in terms of dollars, this Christmas season was just about dead even with last year. He said the late snow had people scurrying into the store for boots. Carey noted that this is about the third year in a row that he's noticed a late rush right before Christmas. He said he kind of enjoys the last minute frenzy. It makes things fun.

Julie Dickson of Anchors said shopping went well this year, but was kind of streaky. She said the day of the downtown Christmas open house was busy and the day of Christmas Eve was extremely busy. "I was going to close at five, but I ended up staying open 'til six," she said.

Bridge Street Book Shop, also had a busy Dec. 24. Sue Barta said the weeks preceding Christmas were busy, but "The 24th was crazy in here."

Sue Bartlett of Bartlett's Home Interiors was one of the few downtown merchants to sound a note of discord. She said pre-Christmas shopping was OK this year, but not fantastic. In fact she said that it was slower than last year and that

November was busier than December. She said that in home interiors, you don't really look for a final pre-Christmas rush because furniture just isn't the kind of thing people are going to stop in and buy at the last minute.

Out on M-66 stores were also busy. On Thursday, Dec. 23 there wasn't the least bit of dust settling on Joe Trojanek and his staff at Sears of Charlevoix. As he loaded an appliance into a customer's vehicle, Trojanek was asked if the store was having a busy week. "We're scrambling," he answered.

Bullfrog Light Company also reported a good Christmas. "We've been busy in both retail and wholesale," said Lynn Waffle. She said that pre-Christmas sales had been steady, just a little busier than in recent years.

Barb Klucyznski of Barb's Hallmark said her store was up this year and it's about time. "I was up this year. The last two years have been downers," Klucyznski said it was nice to have sales up and she, like the other merchants, hopes it continues right on into 1994.

Christmas day brought lots of snow and bone chilling temperatures to Charlevoix. The town received nearly a foot of snow and temperatures were less than 10 degrees.

Late night fire burns home to the ground

By L. Scott Swanson

Bone chilling temperatures left Charlevoix firemen encrusted with ice as they fought a house fire at 419 Michigan Avenue in the middle of the night.

Shortly before 2:30 a.m. Tuesday a neighbor spotted the fire at the unoccupied home and called the city fire department. When the firemen arrived they found that the house at 419 Michigan was already beyond saving, but that embers blown by 30 to 35 mile per hour winds off Lake Michigan were imperiling other homes. City Fire Chief Doug Carver said firemen were particularly concerned about the possibility of embers setting fire to the home immediately to the north of the burning house. North side residents living more than a block away from the fire reported cinders blowing through their yards.

Firemen spent more than three hours dousing the smoldering remains of the house which was the summer home of Leo and Susan Poverman. Nobody was in the house when the fire began. Firemen are still investigating the cause of the fire. The house was a complete loss. The only thing visible Tuesday were a few embers in the shell of the basement.

In addition to the wind, the temperature at the time of the fire was below 10 degrees. Carver noted that in addition to the general discomfort of such bitterly cold conditions the clothes of the firemen can become so ice encrusted that it becomes difficult to move.

The Charlevoix City Firemen called in the Charlevoix Township Fire Department for assistance at the fire.

Nothing was left of this home on Michigan Avenue but the basement walls and a few charred timbers following a fire which began around 2 a.m. Monday.

School board deciphers student test results

By Laurie Lounsbury
 Charlevoix school board members and faculty tried to draw conclusions from the results of the 1993 Michigan Education Assessment Program (MEAP) test scores at the board's Dec. 20 meeting. MEAP reading and math tests are given to students in the fourth, seventh, and tenth grades. The science test is given to fifth, eighth, and eleventh graders. Overall scores showed improvement in all three subjects. Reading and math tests are relatively new, introduced for the first time in 1991. The science test is an older test, and students' scores reflect that. Science scores are higher at all three grade levels than the reading and math scores.

Forty-eight percent of fourth graders scored in the satisfactory range on the reading test, compared with 43.9 percent in 1992. Forty-five percent of seventh graders scored satisfactorily, compared with 40.4 percent in 1992. At the tenth grade level, 36.8 percent scored satisfactorily as opposed to 35 percent in 1992.

Tenth graders scoring in the moderate range dropped nearly 10 percent in all three categories from 1992 to 1993. A score in the moderate or satisfactory range is necessary for students to receive a state endorsed high school diploma. State endorsements on diplomas will be required by the state starting in 1997. School counselors Condit Drury and Charles Bentley didn't see any cause for alarm in the drop in tenth grade test scores. With less than 100 students being tested at each grade level, a ten percent drop means that about ten students fell out of the moderate testing range.

High school principal Dave Smith pointed out that tenth graders take the test at the beginning of their sophomore year in high school, with three more years of high school to learn the objectives on the test. "It's not as important how many pass the MEAP in tenth grade as how many graduate with a state endorsed diploma," Smith said. "The test objectives being taught all three years (tenth through twelfth) should make significant changes," he added. Students can take the test six times during their last three years of high school.

Teacher Vincent Chew objected to the process of comparing different students' test scores to measure the teachers' progress in teaching.

Tenth graders given the test in 1992 are not the same students to take the test in 1993. Drury disagreed, saying that the test measures the capabilities of students at a specific age, not the specific students.

In other business, the board read a statement to the several dozen teachers at the meeting, which included the statement, "The board wants it made clear that this 'non-settlement' (of contract) does not, in any way reflect dissatisfaction with the staff's performance... Our financial future has never before been so uncertain. The board continues to scrutinize and make cuts... All indications are that our future funding will be reduced or capped at present levels."

At the end of the meeting, board member Mary Lee Campbell said she thought the meeting went very well and appreciated the teachers' presence and input. She said she knew it was a show of solidarity that originally brought the teachers to the board meetings, but she hoped they would continue to attend after the contract is settled.

OPINIONS

EDITH

By Edith Gilbert

Reading about the Marla Maples-Donald Trump wedding in Liz Smith's column, she says that "the Plaza Hotel was a fairyland, all twinkling lights, with an altar of snow and white birch trees covered with crystals." It must have cost a fortune to create this fantasy in New York, but I can see it for nothing looking out my kitchen window in Charlevoix! And they surely didn't have an eight point buck hrowsing under a willow tree as I did last week.

Living in Charlevoix year 'round today is quite different than it was fifty years ago. Then, those who were here, wished they were in Florida. There were no road plows, no snow blowers and the weather was different too. I can remember people telling me that the snow reached up to the second story window. Walking from the front door to the street was like walking through a tunnel of snow. There were no skiers, no snowmobiles. The only shops that were open were the drug store, the grocery store, the bakery, the dime store, the hardware store and the gas station. There were no movies, no restaurants and no Kmart. Sure there was the town bar where you could get a drink and the Sugar Bowl where you could get a cup of coffee, but in the days before frozen food, you couldn't even buy a head of lettuce in town. I will attest to that.

"What do you eat in the winter months?" I remember asking.

"We can all our home-grown vegetables and meat," was the reply. "We slaughter our lambs and pigs. We hunt venison and rabbit. We catch fish through the ice. We raise chickens and shoot partridge or ducks. We store our apples in the cellar." But if one wanted fresh oranges or cabbage one had to drive to Petoskey, when weather permitted.

As for entertainment, that was left pretty much up to one's own creativity. Without daytime television, the women held quilting parties in each other's homes. In the evening, one didn't watch game shows, but actively played group games such as charades, paper and pencil games, cards. People dressed up in costumes for New Year's Eve parties, Valentine's and Halloween parties and Ice Carnivals. People sang both at home and in church as they do today, and they square danced to the fiddle and skipped to the polka.

In spite of all that, it was a long winter.

Today, many people who could spend their winters in Florida, choose to live up north instead. First, there is the group of peripatetic retirees, who have given up their big homes downstate, and are settling into big homes on the lake. And secondly, there are all the young people, who are anxious to find jobs in our area, where they may pursue their hobbies and raise their children. Many have already bought a business or successfully started a new venture.

Looking into the near future, there is no stopping the growth up north. We are going to start locking our doors, that's true, but we will also enjoy more golf clubs, more art galleries, more health clubs, more foreign films.

By the turn of the century — it's only six years away — there will be more changes. More people, more houses, more roads, more traffic, more births and more weddings.

As Thomas Mann, the literary genius, wrote, "Time has no divisions to mark its passage, there is never a thunderstorm or blare of trumpets to announce the beginning of a new month or year. Even when a new century begins it is only we mortals who ring bells..."

Chronicling a Christmas Eve flight from Michigan to Europe

From the Netherlands desk of the Courier's foreign correspondent: Ralph McRae

By Ralph McRae

Sometime in October the thought of traveling to Europe before the year ended emerged from my mind. So during the first week of December the date for departure was set for Dec. 22. But then, thinking of the possibility of seeing Santa Claus and his reindeer, the time was changed to Dec. 24, Christmas Eve.

All of this was done in a time frame which allowed for a reduced air fare. Bought through a local airline agent, the round trip ticket to Amsterdam, with a senior citizen discount, cost $619. This would not include the cost of flying to southern Spain for a week's stay on a sun drenched beach.

The real reason for this overseas trip was to visit my Dutch daughter, Ria. Ria, as many of you know, was the exchange student that my wife, Dorothy, and I hosted almost thirty years ago. Since then Ria has been back to Charlevoix several times, and I to her home in Wilms, the Netherlands, four times. Over the years we have written several hundred letters, made numerous phone calls, plus communicating by fax. Shortly after returning to Holland in 1964 Ria married Jan Groen, who later became Captain Groen, a pilot flying 747 jets for the KLM airline.

The most hazardous part of my trip was the 50 mile trip to the Traverse City Airport through a weak blizzard. My own car had broken down a few days before I was to leave. A very generous friend loaned me a vehicle.

Switching planes in Detroit required a long walk from the arrival gate to the departure gate. The waiting 747 was boarded at 9:30 p.m. and it was almost 10 p.m. before it was airborne. Long before that the pilot had filed his flight plan to his destination, Schuphol, Holland.

Ground control is responsible for the planes before take off and after landings. Once in the air, the control tower takes over. Twenty miles beyond the airport, enroute air controllers take over the guidance of the planes. These enroute control centers are spaced every 300 or 400 miles until the Atlantic Ocean is reached. This 3,000 mile run over the water is first controlled by the Gander, Newfoundland center. By this time the plane is within one of three predetermined corridors. These corridors are 60 miles wide and several thousand feet high. They are each separated by 60 miles of air space. In the bottom of each commercial plane is a transponder. When a directional radio beacon hits this transponder, it responds with a code which identifies the plane, its altitude and its speed.

A few miles northeast of Gander the plane passed to the control of a station in Iceland. This is very near the Arctic Circle and only a few miles south of the North Pole. It was at this point that I realized that we were probably too high to see Santa Claus and his sled. I doubt if he goes higher than 500 feet. On reaching the ocean, we were at 35,000 altitude and cruising at 650 miles per hour.

As the flight progressed, the first light of dawn brought an amazing spectacle, large areas of frozen water. For some time the temperature showing on a monitor screen was minus 70 degrees Fahrenheit. From the window I could see a tremendous mosaic of abstract designs formed by ice crystals. Here and there clouds broke through the thin ice layers, looking like frozen mountain peaks.

Now, under the control of the London Control Center the plane turned more to the east in the direction of Schuphol. Our 747 had gone through the same careful routine followed by several hundred jets each day as they go either east or west across the Atlantic Ocean.

The plane descended toward the shores of Holland. Now under 10,000 feet the fields and waterways came into view. At 3,000 feet the final approach to the runway... and at 2,000 feet the landing gear is lowered. A few moments later the wheels of the 850,000 pound 747 roll on the runway. The roar of the four motors, each with nearly 60,000 pounds of thrust, fell silent.

One of the first off the plane, I had my passport quickly stamped and I was allowed to go without having my luggage searched. Ria and her husband were waiting to drive me to their home. Later on that Christmas day after a family dinner, all of us - her two daughters, son-in-law Pierre, grandson Jan, went up to the upper level of the house where a Christmas tree stood over gifts waiting to be opened.

Coping with temperatures hovering near zero is simply a matter of dressing appropriately - as demonstrated by Josh Holecheck who was sledding at Dodge's Hill Monday morning.

Way - Armbruster

Mr. & Mrs. Donald B. Armbruster

Stacy Lynn Way of Charlevoix and Donald B. Armbruster of Grand Rapids were married at noon, October 2, at the Cascade Christian Reformed Church in Grand Rapids.

The bride is the daughter of Joan and Dawson Way of Charlevoix. The groom is the son of Barbara and Elmer Armbruster of Whitehall.

Three hundred guests witnessed the double ring ceremony, performed by Reverend Robert Way of Texas, uncle of the bride.

The church was decorated with arrangements made of silk and fresh roses of fuchsia and white stargazer lilies, sebidian orchids, alstromaria, and accents of gold ribbon, gold ball clusters and fresh greenery. The arrangements were placed on the platform, candleabras, and pew ends. Flowers were done by Jan Ryerson of South Carolina, a friend of the family.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a long sleeved gown of white satin with a wedding band neckline. The bodice and sleeves were covered with flowered appliques, pearls, huckle beads, and sequins. The back of the bodice had buttons from the waist to the neck. A double lace bow with pearls and sequins was at the waist. A lace and applique pattern ran down the front center of the skirt of the dress as well as on the cathedral train. The train had an edge of Alencon lace with clear sequins. The bride carried a silk bouquet of white roses, sebidian orchids, white lilies, with gold ac-

Music was provided at the ceremony and at the reception by pianist Steve Stargardt of Charlevoix and flutists Mike and Michelle Davis of Traverse City. Soloists were Sara Stargardt of Charlevoix and Corey Niemebick of Grand Rapids.

Matron of honor was Sue Boss of Howell, sister of the bride.

Bridesmaids were Amy Robinson of Southfield, Denise Steadman of Grand Rapids and Betty Wissmach of Kitchner, Ontario. They wore dresses with a long sleeved bodice of black velvet and a skirt of iridescent emerald taffeta and a high-low hemline. Their flowers were silk bouquets of fuchsia roses, stargazer lilies, orchids and gold accents. Pearl and emerald necklaces and earrings, gifts from the bride, were also worn.

Nine nieces of the bride and three nieces of the groom acted as flower girls. They were Lisa Boss, Becky and Kristi Boss, Sumner and Aubrey Way, Katie, Karl, Kira and Kandi Way, Lindsey and Lauren Armbruster, and Tara Armbruster.

Five nephews of the bride and one nephew of the groom acted as ringbearers. They were Jeremy and Jonathan Boss, Kevin and Craig Boss, Tyler Way, and Mike Armbruster Jr.

The best man was David Erickson of Montague. Groomsmen were Mike Armbruster, Dick Armbruster, and Dave Armbruster, brothers of the groom.

Ushers were Mike Way and Barney Way, brothers of the bride.

A reception was given by the bride's parents at the Pantlind Ballroom in the Amway Grand Plaza, Grand Rapids. Sandy Boss, sister of the bride, was hostess. Don Erickson was master of ceremonies.

A rehearsal dinner was held at Duba's restaurant in Grand Rapids the night before the wedding. It was hosted by the groom's parents.

The newlyweds took a honeymoon trip of a one week tour of the eastern United States.

They live in Grand Rapids. The groom is a Certified Public Accountant and is currently the manager of Cash and Finance for Family Bookstores in Grand Rapids. The bride is a second grade teacher at Tri-Unity Christian School in Grandville.

OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton

Where did the year go? It seems the older I get, the faster the days seem to fly. I have spent a little time flipping through the pages of my 1993 appointment book. More than a few things have happened. A crew member of the Acacia and his bride tied the knot before me on January 1 holding marriage license number one in Charlevoix County.

Nicholas, Aaron, Steven, James, and Margaret were five of the six babies that made their debut in our church family in 1993. To look back and see how their parents have changed and how each of these little ones is developing more and more personality by the day is a testimony of the miracle of life that God gives us.

The bell tower in my church yard reminds me every day of the large number of folks who spent their first Christmas in Heaven this year. I miss the smells of Delora's kitchen, the quilts that could take up the whole room at Agnes' house, and the daily dose of courage that Marian displayed among others. In many ways, their absence leaves a hole in our hearts. Yet, if you believe in God, you know that they have gone to a place that none of us would ever wish them back from!

We've welcomed new faces like Warren and Phyllis and Bill and Joan. What a joy it has been to get better acquainted with Rick and Liz. It's a blessing to see the next generation like Marty and Jennifer make the church their home.

I tell my parish virtually every Sunday that God is good and they respond, "All the time." Looking back on 1993, I hope you can confirm that in your own heart. If you faced surgery this year, you know how good it is when the problem was taken care of and your life got back on track. If you faced job challenges this year, to get through those challenges and still smile means a lot. If your lifestyle changed this year through a divorce, the loss of a loved one, or another cause, know that God's specialty has always been new beginnings.

My 1994 appointment book is relatively unspoiled thus far. There are a few early dates in it. But the pages are not crumpled and there are not crossed out entries and all the pulsing reminders of life that filled 1993 because the year has not really started yet. I look forward to the new beginnings, the new people, the new adventures and who knows what else that 1994 affords. There is little doubt that the Lord has been faithful throughout 1993 and every indication that his faithful love will continue in every day of our walk together with Him in 1994. May this coming year be your most blessed and encouraging ever.

After much debate, county commissioners make a decision on new computer system

By Laurie Lounsbury

After another lengthy session of listening to the pros and cons of different computer systems, the Charlevoix County Commissioners unanimously approved a projected $130,000 expenditure for a computer system which will include an IBM AS 400 main-frame computer.

The board voted after listening to comments from different county department heads and an assortment of computer sales representatives.

Clyde Left, hired as a consultant by the board, summarized his recommendation saying, "You asked me to find the most cost effective system. One main system with one software vendor is the most cost effective. This is a total solution. I've never seen a P.C. network system that is a total solution."

Three county departments were unimpressed with the software recommended by Left. They wanted to stay on their own P.C.s and use Manatron software. When the cost of Manatron's maintenance agreements was brought up, the Manatron representative said he could put the county under a blanket maintenance agreement for about $20,000. Manatron has been charging the county nearly $90,000 a year in maintenance agreements with separate departments. Commissioners Phil Johnson and Don Smith said they've been complaining about the excessive amount of money spent in maintenance agreements for two years. "Yeah, but you never did anything about it," Charlene Gaskin, Register of Deeds, said to the commissioners.

Commissioners promised Gaskin, Joan Balch, Treasurer, and Carla Spencer, Assistant Director of Equalization, that they wouldn't force them to change from Manatron software until they found a suitable replacement. Staying with Manatron software and networking the three department's P.C.s into the system could cost the county an additional $59,000 a year, according to Left.

The IBM AS 400 mainframe is supposed to be delivered by the end of the year so that the county can take advantage of an IBM sales offer that was good through the end of 1993. The IBM representative assured the board that he would honor the sale price even if the equipment isn't delivered by the year's end.

New doctors join Charlevoix Hospital staff

Beginning December 6, 1993, radiologists from Burns Clinic Medical Center in Petoskey will be on the staff at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Seven radiologists from the Burns Clinic will be sharing in the provision of radiology and ultrasound services at Charlevoix Area Hospital. These physicians will provide clinical supervision and interpret X-rays, mammograms and other imaging studies such as ultrasound in order to diagnose illnesses and injuries.

The seven physicians are: Ronald D. Petrocelli, M.D., chairman of the Radiology Department at Burns Clinic, a graduate of the Chicago Medical School, who served a fellowship and residency at William Beaumont Hospital and a residency at Henry Ford Hospital. Dr. Petrocelli was head of the Nuclear Medicine Section at the University of Michigan and has been clinical assistant professor in the Department of Radiology at the University of Michigan.

Thomas F. Murphy, M.D., who graduated from the University of Michigan Medical School in 1984 and served a residency and fellowship at Henry Ford Hospital.

Robert L. Balestrero, M.D., a University of Michigan medical school graduate in May 1986 who served a fellowship at State University of New York and his residency at Overlook Hospital in Summit, New Jersey.

Janice M. Scheinke, M.D., who received her medical degree from Wayne State University in 1979 and served a fellowship and two residencies at William Beaumont Hospital in Detroit.

Jonathan S. Greene, D.O., who received his medical degree from Michigan State University in 1986 and served his residency at Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital.

Victor W. Tsaloff, M.D., a graduate of Northwestern University and a member of the Burns Clinic Medical Center since 1966.

Michael A. Angileri, M.D., who will be joining the staff at Burns Clinic in January 1994.

"We are pleased to have this experienced radiology team join us at Charlevoix Area Hospital," said Richard L. Krueger, president. The Radiology Department will be under the administrative management and direction of Charlevoix Area Hospital as in the past, Krueger says.

Taxidermist's work begins where the hunter's work ends

By Laurie Lounsbury

For firearm deer hunters, the excitement is over. All that remains for them is the task of sitting in front of the fire and swapping exaggerated hunting stories. Where the hunters' work leaves off, the taxidermist's work begins. Jeff Lutz, owner of Lasting Memories Taxidermy in Ironton, is up to his elbows in deer, elk, bear and other assorted wildlife. It's Lutz who turns a hunter's trophy into a trophy mount.

December is Lutz's busiest month. Deer harvested last year are getting the finishing touches before Christmas delivery. Deer harvested this year are being skinned and prepared for tanning. Along with the local bounty, Lutz receives deer to be mounted from all over the state. "People don't realize the demand for this kind of work," Lutz said. Lutz is a mixture of wildlife artist and taxidermist. "It's an art ability. You have to be an artist to do this work," he explained.

Lutz starts with a foam, urethane form to mount deer. He customizes it to fit the shape of the deer, then carefully attaches the garment-tanned deer hide. He uses a special German glass for the eyes, then adds his touch of artistry with the final painting around the eyes and nose. Fish mounts bring out the painter in Lutz. Because the markings on a fish skin disappear as the skin dries, Lutz needs to be able to recreate the delicate markings with his paintbrush.

Lutz said his shop is growing in popularity with female hunters, probably due to his artistic approach. Last week, Carolyn Jurasko of Central Lake brought in a Michigan elk.

Lutz used to enjoy hunting and fishing, but the success of his business keeps him too busy to get out much anymore. "I hear so many stories and see so many hunters during the season, it's kind of like I'm out there with them," Lutz said.

Lutz is often asked to go beyond the creation of a standard mount of an animal head. One customer brought him a seven-foot grizzly bear from Canada. Lutz will mount the whole grizzly in a natural, upright pose. Then he'll create a creek bed with water running through it and a mounted salmon appearing to swim by. The grizzly will appear to be hunting for salmon. Another customer wants a bobcat mounted in a striking pose with a stuffed pheasant making a narrow escape from the cat.

Lutz reported that there is a growing demand for the natural habitat mounts, popular with resort homeowners and residents with a game room or den.

An unusual request came from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources. They brought Lutz a 23 point white tail deer for mounting. The deer was shot illegally during bow season and the DNR wants it mounted so they can use it for educational purposes. The deer will be on display at Lutz's business for a few months before the DNR claims it.

Area hunters told Lutz they thought the deer harvest seemed to be down this year. Lutz didn't seem to notice. "This is the best season I've ever had," Lutz reported.

There are things you can do to prevent illness

Brian L. Youngs, M.D., Medical Director for the District Health Department, is stressing the importance of practicing good health habits, especially during this time of year. During the winter-spring months, viral diseases such as influenza, influenza like illnesses, measles, and chicken pox; and bacterial diseases such as streptococcal sore throat and meningitis increase in frequency. Many of the diseases are spread by nose and throat secretions from infected individuals. In addition, individuals with a diarrheal illness can spread the illness to other people if poor personal hygiene is not followed.

Good health habits are an important factor in staying healthy. They help by preventing the spread of disease, and are especially important during the school year. Most good health habits are those common sense things taught to us as children by our parents and include: washing your hands before you eat; washing your hands after you use the bathroom; not sharing common personal items such as eating utensils, glasses, combs, towels, and food; keeping your fingernails clean and trimmed; not biting your fingernails; covering your mouth when you cough or sneeze; staying home when you are sick; avoiding others who are ill; and keeping small children from putting objects in their mouths.

Parents should not send ill children to school, to day care or to a nursery. This is very important because many respiratory and intestinal diseases are contacted in the day care/nursery setting. Parents need to be aware of their child's health status and be alert to signs and symptoms of illness which include fever (100 degrees Fahrenheit or higher); cold like symptoms with fever; sore throat, difficulty swallowing and swollen glands; coughing and difficulty breathing; nausea, vomiting and diarrhea; stomach aches and fever; yellow eyes or stiff neck; severe itching or scratching of scalp; body aches and pains; and marked congestion, localized pain and fever.

Students should be kept out of school or day care when they are identified as having a communicable disease. The times of isolation vary but information can be obtained from the family physician or public health nurse. Unfortunately, with most diseases the child is contagious before he/she becomes ill and has effectively spread the disease for several days. Students can return to school when well, or when a physician states they are not contagious, or when local school policies allow them to return.

Many times the decision to keep students out of school by parents due to illness is difficult and may present a family hardship. Nevertheless, obviously ill children do not belong in school.

There are other measures involved in preventing disease such as receiving childhood immunizations and following your family physician's advice. Yet, a simple measure like washing your hands or keeping an ill child home will help prevent the spread of illness from one person to another.

The mail is so plentiful at the Charlevoix Post Office this time of year that they don't even quantify it by number of letters. Instead, they compress the letters and measure the thickness of the pile. In the days just prior to Christmas local postal carriers were delivering a total of 125 feet to 150 feet of mail each day. And that doesn't count the number of packages which add about another 700 items to the mix.

Even though the Christmas rush is over, there won't be much of a break. At the back of the postal sorting room a stack of tax forms is waiting to be delivered. And in a room at the back of the office a pile of Publisher's Clearing House letters is anxiously waiting to be delivered to the hands of thousands of potential winners.
